Davis Implies Board Will Stabilize, Not Freeze, Pay

Some Adjustments Upward Promised, Rises Barred to Those With 'Standard' Wage

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board, charged by President Roosevelt with stabilizing wages will continue to make upward wage adjustments to iron out inequalities and substandard pay situations, but will put a stop to further increases in wages that it now considers as "standard."

This was the inference drawn yesterday from the first press conference of William H. Davis, WLB chairman, since the issuance of the President's seven-point anti-inflation program.

Davis declared that it was the board's duty to prevent upward trends in wages, but insisted that its decisions would still hav "flexibility." Although to a lesser degree than before.

Gets President's Directive

Davis declined to be pressed on how the President's message and speech Tuesday night would affect the board decisions on a large series of major cases now pending before it where the unions are demanding $1 a day wage increases.

In most of these cases the workers are already the best paid in their industry and areas, so that the consideration of "inequalities" and relative "substandardness" are not germane. The major point in the cases, in the light of the President's declaration on wage stabilization, is whether the rise in living costs since the last wage contract has been such as to call for wage rises.

Davis acknowledged that the President had added a directive to the board's original charter which specified that "we now have to conduct ourselves so that our decisions will not unstabilize conditions."

Ideas to Be Exchanged

Davis' conference was held after a meeting he called with the board and top officials from a series of Government agencies involved in the question of wages. He said that the meeting was devoted to the problems raised by the sections of the President's message dealing with wage stabilization, but that no conclusions were reached except to organize an inter-departmental committee for continued discussion.

It is obvious, Davis explained, that the decisions of one agency on wage or employment questions affected the work of the others and

U. S. Recognizes Defense Corps

The Office of Civilian Defense last night took another step toward the goal ordered by President Roosevelt: closer integration of OCD activities with the war effort.

Orders issued by Director James F. Landis grant official recognition to the Citizens Defense Corps and the Civil Air Patrol, provide for the organization of a new Citizens Service Corps which will embrace defense workers not connected with the protective services, and designate certain classes of persons not enrolled in any of the services who may wear arm bands durings a blackout or air raid.

House Group Sharpens Tax Ax for Profits

Special Levies Being Weighed to Get All Earnings Over 6%

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A comprehensive attack on war profits, through possible special taxes to reach undue corporate gains not caught by a sharply increased excess profits levy, was being considered yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Treasury tax advisers last night were working with congressional staff experts toward an agreement on profits tax treatment in advance of today's test committee vote.

Committee sentiment was leaning heavily toward excess profits tax rates as high as 85 to 90 per cent, with combined war surtaxes and corporate normal levies at 40 per cent. There was growing strength for a 90 per cent excess profits flat rate, with a rebate, amounting to 20 per cent of the tax, in the form of nonnegotiable, noninterest bearing bonds.

Two Other Profits Levies

Two possible additional profits taxes meanwhile were under close scrutiny as a result of the President's recent tax recommendations. They were:

1. Revival of the special 10 per cent war profits tax, included by the House in the 1941 revenue bill, but rejected by the Senate. This was designed to reach companies with large invested capital which paid no excess profits under the average earnings base.

2. An extra or over-all tax, recovering all profits, if any, over 6 per cent, after imposition of all other taxes. In other words, if a company still had profits in excess of 6 per cent after payment of all other taxes, the Treasury would collect the excess.

The latter proposal was recently outlined to the Senate by Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee, but George limited its application to war contracts, and made the limit apply on the aggregate cost of such contracts.

A Super-Dooper Tax

The President on Monday recommended an excess profits tax that would take all above a reasonable return to a corporation. In the same message, Mr. Roosevelt referred to still another tax to "cover by a special tax all profits of any kind of business which exceed the expressed definition of the legal profit figure."

It was not definitely known what specific plan the President had in mind, but it was indicated it might

22 First Magnitude Film Favorites Here for Premiere

Four million dollars worth of Hollywood talent, brought together in a show so star-studded that no producer or group of producers could underwrite it were profit its only motive, will present a three-hour performance at Loew's Capitol Theater tonight before one of the most distinguished audiences ever assembled in Washington.

Nothing less than a Presidential inauguration could command so notable an assembly of onlookers, and nothing less than patriotism and a desire to fill the coffers of the Army Emergency Relief and the Navy Relief Fund, which will share tonight's receipts, could command the big name stars who will present the first edition of the Hollywood Victory Caravan Show here before launching a cross-country tour of single-stand appearances which eventually will land the stars back on the West Coast.

White House Tea Today

The stars, 22 of them, and all of the first magnitude, plus eight beauteous young starlets, musicians, publicity men, Mark Sandrich, the show's director, and Alfred Newman, musical director of the unprecedented extravaganza, hove into town yesterday aboard the Star-Spangled Special, which pulled into Union Station shortly before 9 a. m.

After posing for photographers and talking to reporters, the Hollywood party went to the Army and Navy Club for breakfast. Before a rehearsal at 3 p. m. in the Willard ballroom, many of the stars caught a nap, and followed rehearsal with another attempt to get some rest before going to the Capitol Theater at midnight where they were expected to practice their numbers until 7 a. m. today.

Boston Next

The only social function planned today for the stars is a tea at 5 p. m. which Mrs. Roosevelt will give at the White House. Tonight's show will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

The big-name stars here include Dezi Arnaz, Joan Bennett, Joan Blondell, Charles Boyer, James Cagney, Claudette Colbert, Olivia de Havilland, Cary Grant, Charlotte Greenwood, Bert Lahr, Laurel and Hardy, Groucho Marx, Frank McHugh, Ray Middleton, Pat O'Brien, Eleanor Powell, Rise Stevens, Bob Hope, Frances Langford, Jerry Colonna and last but not least, Merle Oberon. The starlets are Katharine Booth, Alma Carroll, Marie McDonald, Frances Gifford, Elyse Knox, Fay McKenzie, Juanita Stark and Arleen Whelan, all familiar to readers of the roto sections and picture magazines.

After tonight's performance, the Caravan will go to Boston for the show's second performance, and thence to Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul,

Sharing of Cars Is 'Essential,' Roosevelt Says

Eastman Puts Ban On Taxi Cruising Throughout Nation

Pooling of automobile transportation by Federal workers was urged by President Roosevelt yesterday, as Joseph Eastman, Defense Transportation Director, announced a national ban on taxi cruising.

District officials pointed out that both movements already have been inaugurated in Washington, but indicated they will be stepped up in accord with the Chief Executive's request.

The President did not limit his proposal to the Federal Government, but addressed copies of it also to the Council of State Governments, the American Municipal Association and the United States Conference of Mayors, asking that similar programs be sponsored throughout the country.

Rubber Shortage Cited

Although both the taxi restriction and the sweeping share-your-car program were prompted by the gasoline shortage, Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum coordinator, said there was no plan now to propose any further increase on May 1 in the one-third curtailment of gasoline consumption now in effect on the East and Pacific Northwest coasts. There is no guarantee, however, that future curtailment may not be ordered.

The President, citing the present rubber shortage and the approaching gas rationing, said," The transportation problem for workers in many communities is becoming critical. It is imperative that we extend as long as possible that period of time in which we can count on private transportation of factory and office workers to their places of work and home again."

He also called upon Federal department heads to "reduce substantially the number of automobiles

Committee Frowns On FSA Request To Supplement Army Dependents' Funds

War and the Family

MEN IN THEIR THIRTIES, with wives and children, stand a "pretty good chance" of being called for military service, provided Congress enacts allotment legislation to care for their dependents. Page 8.

Bill Wins Backing

By the Associated Press

A Senate committee agreed informally yesterday that a proposed scale of allowances for dependents of men in the armed services was necessary.

At the same time members expressed opposition to a request by the Federal Security Agency for flexible authority to supplement such payments in "hardship cases."

Although Federal Security would not administer the regular payments set forth in the measure, the bill provides that appeals for additional allowances be referred to that agency.

The request for flexible authority was made by Geoffrey May of Federal Security, who told the committee that from 5 to 15 per cent of the families or dependents of men of military service age would qualify as "hardship cases" under the measure. Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, protested, however, that there was no top nor bottom limit on such a proposal and expressed doubt that Congress would be willing "to sign any such blank check."

Oppose FSA "Free Hand"

Senator Lee (Democrat) of Oklahoma asked May if the provision was not "intended to correct a number of social evils that always have existed" rather than to meet wartime emergencies.

Both Senators suggested that it might be wiser to raise the entire schedule of uniform allowances contained in the Administration-approved measure rather than give Federal Security what Johnson called a free hand to set supplementary payments "at $1 or $1000 a month."

Spokesmen for the Army, Navy and Selective Service who appeared before the committee testified they favored a uniform schedule of payments to be paid by the services individually but had "no objection" to additional Federal Security payments. They added they would favor increasing the proposed schedule should Congress decide to eliminate the FSA supplements.

Allowances Optional

The measure, based on expected congressional approval of a bill now pending in the House which would raise the minimum pay of men in the armed services to $42 monthly, provides for two classes of dependents: Class A—wives and children; Class B—parents, grandchildren,

Swift Jap Drive Perils Burma Road Terminus; Reds Smash at Kursk

To Forestall Offensive

Pincers Strike Out at Vital Nazi Supply Depot in South

By the Associated Press

London, April 29.—The Red Armies were reported strongly attacking tonight above and below Kursk, a half-way house and major supply depot for the German line from the lower Moscow front south to the Sea or Azov.

Soviet dispatches reported that Russian troops had reached Norennya, northwest of Kursk on the road to Orel, and were advancing near Belgorod some 50 miles above Kharkov and about 70 miles south of Kursk, in an effort to envelop and destroy that key base in Hitler's summer offensive plans.

Heavy fighting also was reported about Izyum, which lies on the Donets River 80 miles to the southeast of Kharkov.

Cross Important River

All this shifting of Russian offensive action southward to areas for some time hitherto quiescent appeared to be a major attempt to smash the bases from which the Nazis had intended to launch the heaviest of their projected attacks.

It was accompanied by word from Kuibyshev, the alternate Russian capital, that in four days of action Russian troops had advanced 45 miles and had crossed an important river.

This river was not further identified, but there were some indications that it was the Oka, near which Orel stands. The Germans earlier acknowledged a penetration of their lines about Orel, but claimed that the situation later was "restored."

Nazis Hurled Back

Orel is about 200 miles below Moscow. Then on the major fighting line running south come Kursk and Kharkov, and the general picture indicated by all reports was one of violent action in this vast subtheater, where Hitler's flank must hold at all costs if he is to break into the Caucasus.

The Soviet army organ Red Star announced that the Russians on the Bryansk front, to the west of Orel, had thrown the Germans back as much as 60 miles in one flank area and in another had recaptured seven villages and killed or captured the whole of the Nazi advance force.

Lightning Stroke

By the Associated Press

Chungking, April 29.—The outskirts of Lashio, eastern terminus of the Mandalay-Lashio Railway and teeming hostel of Chinese truck drivers who for three years have kept traffic moving over the Burma Road, has been reached by a Japanese spearhead which thrust with a lightning stroke through the mountainous Shan States, the Chinese announced tonight.

Still another dire menace to the vital feeder line to China was apparent, with the Japanese brushing around Chinese flanks toward Hsipaw, 40 miles southwest of Lashio.

So grave was the threat of the entire Chinese position as a result of this all but completed severance of the famed Burma Road that the Chinese command felt compelled to assure the world that it had no intention of giving up the fight.

"It is obvious," said the communique, "that the Japanese occupation of Hsipaw will have serious consequences.

"On the other hand the gravity of the Burma situation by no means weakens the Chinese determination to continue resistance in Burma."

Jap Advance Swift

[Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has ordered thousands of fresh troops to rush to the defense of Burma, dispatches from the battlefield said tonight, according to International News Service.]

In the westward thrust toward Hsipaw the Japanese were said to have reached the town of Nanmang (too small to appear on available maps.)

(Sources in London suggested Nanmang probably was a misprint for Namlan, which is 25 miles southeast of Hsipaw.)

New Lashio, it added, was reached Tuesday morning. (New Lashio is believed to be a new part of the old town, grown up rapidly since late in 1938 when the Burma Road was opened to keep a flow of supplies to the Chinese armies, otherwise cut off by Japanese blockade and occupation of the seaboard.)

The Japanese had burst through the mountains with dazzling speed,

Greek Guerilla Army Opens New Front

Troop Train Wrecked, Hundreds of Nazis Killed in Swift Swoop

By the United Press

London, April 29.—An army of 5000 Greek guerillas, roaming along the Bulgarian border, has opened a new Balkan front against Axis occupation troops, killing several hundred Germans in its first foray, the Greek government in exile disclosed tonight.

Countless other bands, operating independently meanwhile, are striking at German and Italian encampments and supply lines in Greece and Crete—the opening blows of the Balkan "spring offensive" planned and led by Gen. Draja Mikhailovic, the Yugoslav war minister and head of the Yugoslav mountain army.

The Greek government said that according to reports received from the front the new army was formed a month ago in the provinces of Seres and Drava, in central Macedonia, and, in its opening drive, spectacularly raided a German troop and supply train running along the only line east of Salonika.

The railroad was reported damaged severely, the trains blasted, and hundreds of German troops killed. The army is led by former Greek officers.

Since the occupation of Greece, the guerillas of that country had fought in small bands but now, the government here said, they have been organized under one leader, his name not disclosed. The new army, the government said, is operating from the Rhodope Mountains, which separate Greece from Bulgaria. There are now six major groups fighting througout Greece, he said, "making the tenancy of the Germans, Italans and Bulgarians most difficult."

In addition, there are many smaller bands—of around 15 or 20 men each—who live in the hills and harass the Germans.

Newest R. A. F. Raids Fire Kiel And Trondheim

9 Bombers Are Lost In Night, Bringing British Total to 137

By the Associated Press

London, April 29.—Trondheim and Kiel, important bases for the menacing Nazi naval power, were left blasted and burned today by heavy R. A. F. assaults as Britain relentlessly prosecuted the fiercest air offensive of the war.

This afternoon United States-built Douglas bombers, strongly escorted by fighters, blasted again at the broken docks of Dunkerque and other fighters swept deeper into northern France. The score in fighters lost was two for the Germans, two for the British.

Luftwaffe Retaliates

German bombers carrying out reprisal raids tonight smashed at an east Anglican town where tons of heavy explosives and thousands of fire bombs showered down. A number of persons were believed buried in the debris of their homes.

Local fire-fighting units soon had to appeal to neighboring sectors for help as the Nazi airmen dove repeatedly through a terrific anti-aircraft barrage. Other Nazi raiders were heard roaring inland.

137 Bombers Lost in April

Nine British bombers were lost in the overnight raids, which included attacks on Low Country airdromes and a power plant at Ghent, Belgium. (The Germans claimed the toll was 25.)

The R. A. F.'s figure raised its April bomber losses to 137, but the offensive score included a three-hour raid on Trondheim Monday night, four nights of deadly assault which all but erased from the map the German Baltic port and factory town of Rostock, and incessant day and night blows against points along the Nazi "invasion coast."

Last night's raid on Trondheim, second in succession, emphasized

New War Bldg. Opens Six Months Ahead of Schedule

Employes of the Army Ordnance Department will begin moving into the new 20 million dollar War Department building in Arlington this morning, seven and a half months after ground was broken for the huge structure

Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of the Army services of supply, said the first section of the pentagonal building is being occupied six months ahead of schedule and that another section of 600,000 square feet will be ready by June 1.

The War Department said that while the new road network leading to the building will not be completed until fall, existing arteries are "considered satisfactory to handle the traffic expected." At least two lanes of a new road leading from Memorial Avenue through the Agricultural Experimental Farm to the building parking area will soon be finished, it was said.

First 'Soci' Agent Indicted For Sedition in Tennessee

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

George W. Christians, a Tennessee link in the Soci secret organization of armed revolutionists, was indicted on four charges of sedition in Chattanooga yesterday.

Christians was the first of the known Socis to be formally accused by a Federal grand jury. If convicted, he will be liable to $40,000 fine and 80 years in prison. He was held in $10,000 bail and ordered to trial May 13.

Heads Crusader Group

The Socis—who find this label snappier than their full name of "Social Republic Society"—have been under the scrutiny of the special grand jury on Axis agents in Washington. Before the grand jurors for nearly three weeks has been David Baxter, summoned from his headquarters in California.

Baxter wrote much of the Soci propaganda, which he has been mailing out and which has been recirculated by agents who, Baxter says, are active in every State. One of these was Christians.

Named on Four Counts

Christians coupled his Soci propaganda with that of an organization with which he made a stab at an uprising several years ago, the Crusader White Shirts, of which he is "commander in chief." What brought him to grief were dodgers of the latter group, which he is accused of having mailed to soldiers at Camp Forrest, Tenn., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

One of these dodgers listed questions to be asked to "create a reign of terror." One question was, "Do Germany, Italy and Japan have the right to fight for freedom from OUR economic strangulation?"

Another dodger said President Roosevelt was a "merciless mon-

Surgeon Sews Muscle to Brain, Ends Paralysis From Stroke

By Stephen J. McDonough

Charleston, S. C., April 29 (Wide World).—For the first time in history the brain has acquired a muscle to help it think.

This phenomenon of medicine is an amazing surgical feat which creates a new pipeline of blood to the brain and restores normal circulation which has been stopped by blood clots or hardening of the arteries.

The victims of such brain conditions are those usually described as having "a stroke," and the entire right or left half of the body is paralyzed. If they walk at all, it is with great difficulty and they cannot talk or eat normally Until now they have continued to exist only half-alive until death.

Dr. Frederick E. Dredel, of the Medical College of South Carolina, conceived the operation and has performed it on five carefully selected patients.

He reported it for the first time at the meeting of the Southeastern Surgical Congress in Atlanta and was astonished that it attracted so much attention from surgeons many years his senior.

His operation is one of the most delicate in surgery, but because the brain itself is insensitive to pain, it can be done under local anes-

Duce Admits Italian Crisis, Blames Fraud, Lack of Food

By the United Press

London, April 29.—A critical internal situation in Italy has been blamed by Mussolini on lack of discipline and fraud, "the perpetrators of which will be inexorably punished," and to the necessity for feeding an increased population—presumably Germans — the Rome radio said today.

Coinciding with reports of an imminent upheaval in Italy, most of which were discounted by British officials, the Rome radio said that when Mussolini presided at a meeting of prefects from throughout the kingdom Tuesday morning he outlined seven causes for troubles on the home front. They were:

1. Lack of discipline;
2. Fraud;
3. Increased population;
4. Army food requirements;
5. Help granted to the population of occupied countries;
6. Transport problems;
7. Import difficulties.

There also was a hint of possible labor troubles in Italy. The Rome radio said that Dr. Robert Ley, leader of the German labor front, conferred in Rome today with Prof. Camillo Pellizzi, president of the national institute of Fascist culture, "about labor problems interesting both countries."

War Sidelights

Gandhi Starts India Battle Over Draft

Allahabad, India, April 29 (U.P.).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, spiritual head of the All-India Congress Party, has started a battle royal within its working committee over a draft resolution by which he would commit the party to nonviolence against Japan and close the door to further negotiations with Britain.

A majority favors the draft, it was learned today, but Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, left-wing leader of the Nationalist Party, C. Rajagopalchari, Madras Liberal, and others are striving to modify it, at least to the extent of leaving the door open for the British government's acceptance of the party's demand for an Indian wartime national government.

Though Nehru hinted in a recent press conference that he favored arming the millions of India for guerilla warfare against the Japanese, sources close to the working committee in session here said today that he appears willing to agree that nonviolent noncooperation with aggressors is the best policy for the party under existing circumstances. Effective guerilla warfare could be waged, he admits, only under a popular Indian government, which Britain has refused to grant until after the war.

Thus it was expected today that the committee would adopt a resolution laying down noncooperation as the best way of resisting aggression.

Nazis Take No Chances

London, April 29 (A.P.).—Released from a concentration camp on Adolf Hitler's personal orders, Bishop Fivind Berggrav of Norway now is confined in a summer cottage guarded by 20 men and surrounded by barbed wire, Reuters reported today, quoting the Stockholm Social Demokraten.

His "release" from the concentration camp was said to have been dictated by Norwegian political conditions—a euphemism for public unrest over his imprisonment. Reuters also reported that the dean of Trondheim, a Dr. Fjelibu, and his wife, had been interned.

Hirohito Is 41

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), April 29 (A.P.).—Japan solemnly celebrated Emperor Hirohito's forty-first birthday today, starting at 8 a. m., when everyone in the country bowed toward the imperial palace and prayed for the Emperor's longevity.

A big military parade scheduled at the Yoyogi Parade Grounds on Tokyo's outskirts was called off because of unfavorable weather, but cavalry and tanks from the tank academy paraded through Tokyo.

Three Hitler Peace Offers Are Reported

London, April 29.—The A. F. I., independent French news agency, reported without qualification tonight that Germany had made three peace proposals to Britain within the last six weeks.

The A. F. I. Agence Francaise Independante Ltd., which is linked to the Free French government, said the proposals were similar; that the first was made through Turkey, the second through Switzerland and the third through Sweden.

Authoritative British sources disclaimed knowledge of any such overtures.

The French agency said that Germany, seeking a free hand to concentrate on the Eastern Front, had submitted a 9-page "Goering Memorandum" to Britain. That memorandum was said to have been the basis for all three "feelers."

Its points were reported to include:

1. Britain and the United States to recognize German control in Europe, Germany being prepared to consider Anglo-Saxon suggestions for application of the "new order" on the continent.
2. Germany to annex such Russian territories as she considered necessary to her "living space."
3. Germany to control virtually all of the French, Dutch and Belgian colonial possessions.

If the Allied powers accepted those fundamental conditions, Germany would undertake the following, according to the French agency's outline:

1. To recognize the British Empire in its present form.
2. To recognize "control" of Latin America by the United States "both in political and economic spheres."
3. To collaborate in setting up a system of trade between the three "empires" — Germany's, Britain's and America's.

The last paragraph of this so-called Goering memorandum was reported to have referred to assistance which Germany would be prepared to give the Allies in order that they might "drive Japan back to her natural limits."

(Adolf Hitler in his Sunday speech made remarks interpreted by some observers as hints at a "peace offensive" directed toward Britain, particularly when he tried to suggest that it would be the United States or Russia, not Germany, that would destroy Britain.)

Japs Are Reported Reinforcing Island Bases for an Attack

By the Associated Press

Canberra, April 29.—Australia's leaders gave their continent the heartening news today that many more United States troops, tanks, planes and guns have reached these shores, but they warned the people earnestly that the threat of Japanese invasion remains very real.

Prime Minister John Curtin and Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford, in parliamentary speeches, said frankly that Allied air blows had not yet loosened the Japanese grip on the islands to the north, northeast and west, and that these were being reinforced with sinister purpose.

Private advices from an advanced Allied base bore them out, and so did Tokyo's own utterances.

The Allied base dispatches said a full-scale Japanese attack on Port Moresby, Australian outpost on New Guinea to the north of the continent, might be expected within two weeks. At least 15 enemy ships were reported concentrated at Rabaul, New Britain, with others off Lae, New Guinea. The Japanese also were reported massing new and better warplanes in the northern islands.

Tokyo Claims Bases

Tokyo broadcasts yesterday reported the occupation, as of April 19, of "all strategically important bases" on the northern shore of Dutch New Guinea and in the Molucca Islands to the west, all of which might be used for attack on the north Australian coast.

United States fliers raided the airdrome at Lae again yesterday, destroying an ammunition dump, and fought off eight bombers and 14 fighters which attacked the Allied airdrome at Port Moresby.

Telling of the newest contingent of the A. E. F., the prime minister said:

"Strong additional United States reinforcements, which are well equipped and which include important technical units, have arrived.

"The equipment position has materially improved.

"In addition to acceleration of local production of munitions, supplies of tanks and guns are arriving from overseas in increasing numbers, and quantities of vital war equipment have been received from ships originally destined for the Dutch East Indis.

Northern Bases Reinforced

"Supplies of modern United States aircraft have made possible reinforcement of our northern air bases, resulting in constant raiding of the Japanese bases in New Guinea, New Britain and Timor."

Despite destruction or damage of 250 Japanese planes in the northern air fighting, Curtin declared "the government regards an outright attack on Australia as a constant and undiminished danger." He went on:

"Japan is still able, almost at will, to reinforce the Timor and New Guinea areas with men and aircraft, nor have we been able hitherto to substantially weaken the enemy's position in the regions occupied by him in his advance southward."

Drakeford was just as plain spoken. Urging his listeners "not to get our air successes out of focus with the rest of the strategical picture presented by Japanese aggression," he said Australia must expect "raids on a larger scale than any since the first heavy raid on Darwin."

"It is dangerous complacency for any Australian to cling to the immutable belief that Japan has been influenced by our undoubtedly growing strength into a decision not to try an invasion here."

Curtin announced creation of a "prime minister's war conference" consisting of himself, General MacArthur and such ministers and officers as he might summon to discuss questions of high strategy.

Coal Dealer Fined $500 on Charge Of Short Weight

George T. Miller, coal dealer of Trevorton, Pa., was fined $600 by Judge George D. Neilson in Police Court yesterday on charges of selling coal which weighed less than the weight represented on the sales ticket.

G. Stewart Reeder, inspector of weights and measures, testified that Miller was stopped April 17 while delivering coal to a customer on Tenth Street Northwest. He said a check-up showed that Miller had 10,070 pounds of coal on his truck, whereas his sales ticket represented the coal as weighing 13,240 pounds.

Miller was found guilty and fined on two counts, $500 for selling shortweight coal and $100 for presenting an erroneous ticket.

Corregidor's Shells Sink Ship

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Corregidor's stalwart defenders dealt new blows to the enemy yesterday, as Japanese invasion forces appeared about to move into other islands of the Philippines.

The guns of the Manila Bay forts, a War Department communique reported, sunk an armed Japanese vessel operating in the bay, and caused considerable damage on Bataan Peninsula and in Cavite Province.

Meanwhile, it was reported that the Japanese had increased their naval strength in central Philippine waters, near the Visayan Islands. This may portend an invasion of regions still under American-Filipino control.

"Heavy" shelling of Corregidor and its satellite forts by Jap batteries in Bataan and Cavite was reported in the communique. In returning the fire, the sharp-eyed American-Filipino gunners silenced some enemy batteries and broke up enemy troop concentrations, the War Department said.

The armed enemy vessel sunk by artillerymen was "medium-sized," Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright informed the War Department.

Wainwright's reports submitted through Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia, indicate that the Japanese air attacks on the Manila Bay forts "are lessening in intensity," the Army communique declared.

Most of the air assaults in the past 48 hours have been made by dive bombers. This caused observers here to wonder if the Japanese high command had withdrawn the force of big bombers which pounded Corregidor almost continuously following the fall of Bataan.

The attacks on Jap positions by American-Filipino guerilla troops in the mountains of northern Luzon apparently have been getting under the skin of the enemy. Wainwright reported that Jap forces were advancing against our patrols near the southern end of Cagayan Valley.

A number of successful raids have been made against Japanese positions in northern Luzon by the small American-Filipino guerrilla units.

Meanwhile, the outnumbered defenders continued to fight down on the Island of Panay.

"Our troops are continuing their resistance in the vicinity of Alibunan and San Remigio," the communique stated. "Enemy troops have been largely concentrated at the ports and in the coastal areas of the island."

Bulkeley 'Doesn't Know Fear,' Boat Expert Says

By John M. Hightower

Associated Press Staff Writer

One of the last civilians to run the Japanese blockade through the Philippines and down to Australia—a veteran of the terrible bombing of Cavite, the siege of Bataan and various shellings of Cebu—pondered a wide acquaintance with brave men yesterday and concluded that Lieut. John D. Bulkeley, of the Navy's Philippine torpedo boat squadron, led all the rest.

Bulkeley, who has repeatedly torpedoed Japanese warships and heavily protected transports, was described by John T. McCabe, 40, torpedoboat technician of Grosse Point, Mich.

"The man doesn't know fear," said McCabe. "He not only goes out on his own boat, but as long as he can stay awake he goes out on other boats while his own crew is taking a rest."

McCabe said that as the war progressed Bulkeley, "whose men would follow him anywhere in the world," had grown a tremendous black beard which he declined to cut off because he thought it was lucky.

Official communiques have credited Bulkeley's squadron of swift sea fighters with torpedoing two Jap cargo ships in January, a warship of unidentified type in February and a light cruiser in April. The squadron, which was largely responsible for getting Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his party out of the Philippines, has been on almost constant patrol since the war started, McCabe related.

McCabe was Bulkeley's squadron engineer. He had arrived in the Philippines on the last clipper to Manila, reporting November 28. At first, as a civil technician, he served in a strictly consultative capacity but after the bombing of Cavite, during which his tin hat saved his head from being crushed by a flying chunk of concrete, he became as much a member of the squadron as the officers and enlisted men.

Maintenance was a tough job. McCabe gave great praise to the miracle men mechanics of the beached Navy ship Canopus who made their vessel into a machine shop and turned out parts which kept the boats running, the guns firing and the little air force flying.

McCabe said that the Canopus was a target of more than 300 bombs before it was finally demolished to prevent its falling into enemy hands when Bataan crumbled. The steel sides of the old ship were prickly with pegs driven into shrapnel holes.

Once a delayed action bomb ripped through the decks and started a fire in the vessel's most vulnerable spot, its magazine. Lieut. Comdr. Adolph Hede, McCabe said, "personally went into the powder magazine and put the fire out." (Hede's home is Long Beach, Calif.)

McCabe withdrew from Cavite to Bataan with naval personnel a few days after the war started and was there until February 20 when he went to the fortified island of Corregidor and from there journeyed on an old river boat to Cebu, traveling by night from one island to another.

He left Cebu on a British freighter March 17, "strictly in the status of a stowaway." The crew members were drawing 18 months' pay to make this one trip through the blockade, he said.

They took the ship past Japanese bases, sighted a Japanese warship, and were bombed by a Japanese plane before finally reaching Australia after 18 days. From Bataan to Australia, McCabe estimated, he had traveled about 6000 miles through the Japanese blockade.

Interesting Personalities

Man Corregidor's Guns

Corregidor, P. I., April 29.—This is no time for a scenic tour of Corregidor, what with almost continous enemy bombing and shelling, but a trip to batteries and defensive positions reveals many interesting personalities.

LIEUT. DIAL

Col. Nunez C. Pilet, New Orleans, and Lieut. Nathaniel M. Dial, Washington, D.C., bade each other goodby at the New York World's Fair in 1939 where each was in charge of Army and Navy camps. They met again for the first time on Corregidor where both are now serving—Pilet in the Army, and Dial in the Navy.

First Sergt. John A. Hillman, Quenemo, Kans., not satisfied with scientific instruments, has his own pet device for detecting the approach of enemy planes over this beleaguered fortress. Hillman, whose eyes held him in good stead in drawing a bead on jackrabbits on the Kansas plains, now relies on his hearing aided by a megaphone to which a rubber tube has been attached, to determine the direction from which enemy planes are coming.

When the air warning service sounds the alarm, the sergeant grabs his megaphone, holds the rubber tube to his ear, and turns about until he catches the sound of motors. He points his finger and yells, "There they are!" and he is usually right, too.

In one unit were found four former practicing attorneys. "The Rock" also has its college professors. Maj. George A. Muzzey in civilian life was assistant director of secondary education at Temple University, Philadelphia, while Capt. Calvin E. Chunn was professor of English and journalism at the University of Tulsa, Tulsa, Okla.

(A graduate of Western High School here and the Naval Academy, Lieutenant Dial is the son of Mrs. Nathaniel Dial of 1852 Kalorama Road Northwest and the late Senator from South Carolina. In September, 1941, he took command of the U. S. S. Napa, was later ordered to China, and thence to the Philippines in August.—Editor's note.)

Bomber Attacks 2 Icelandic Ships

An Icelandic Port, April 28 (delayed) (A.P.).—The first attack by a Nazi plane on any Icelandic ship near this island since early last spring was disclosed today with the arrival of two Icelandic vessels which came unscathed through a Nazi lightning raid.

The captain of one of the vessels said a single long-range German bomber appeared suddenly out of the sun from behind and swooped to within 300 feet of the ships to loose two bombs. Both exploded in the sea, rocking the ships violently, but not damaging them. The plane quickly disappeared.

Somervell Scolds U. S. Arms Makers

Says Officials Are Not Giving 'Every Ounce'

The Army's supply chief took a verbal slap yesterday at industrial officials who play golf instead of tending to their business of arms production.

Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of the Army's services of supply, told a press conference that munitions output has been very good, but added that he didn't want "to create the impression that we have solved this problem."

"There is a terrific job to be done and it's going to take every ounce of brains and devotion to duty that industry possesses to do it," he stated.

"In this connection, there has been a good deal said about labor. I'd like to say a word about the officials who are out playing golf when we try to get them on the phone. A little exercise is a good thing, but we've got to have the same devotion to duty by management that management expects of its employes," he said.

Bess Shipping Bottleneck

Discussing the whole field of Army production and supply, Somervell said that shipping will be "the bottleneck of our whole war effort."

He praised the work of the War Shipping Administration and Maritime Commission toward solving this problem, and declared that rail transportation so far has been good.

To date, Somervell declared, not one carload of Army supplies has been held up at a port of embarkation for want of cargo or warehouse space. Everyone, he added, "remembers too well" how freight cars were "frozen" and rail transportation tied up during the first World War due to this trouble.

"We are alert," Somervell stated, "to the rail load coming this fall when we reach the peak of arms production and troop movements will be greatly increased."

Special Port Agencies

The Army supply chief announced the creation of special port agencies at all major seaports to speed up and coordinate the shipment of arms and goods overseas.

Meanwhile, War Production Director Donald M. Nelson told Congress that while our arms production is now "over the hump," the "production war" is only starting.

He testified before the House Banking Committee in support of legislation to create a special War Production Board corporation to help small business obtain arms contracts.

Twins Seek Wings, Promise Axis Double Trouble

Two 20-year-old Washington youths yesterday became the first twins to be enrolled by the United States Navy since revision of its program to permit school graduates to qualify as reserve officers in the aviation cadet plan.

The twins, Joseph Wilbur and Robert Henry Strong, 3327 Eighteenth Street Northwest, told recruiting officers they didn't want to sit behind a desk but wanted to get into action as soon as possible.

The twins have been inseparable since birth and were students at Rock Hall High School, Kent County, Md., where they starred in baseball, track and soccer.

"We hope we can be assigned to the same aircraft carrier if and when we win our Navy wings," they said. "And, it'll be double trouble for the Axis."

R. A. F. Hits Three Axis Ships in Mediterranean

Cairo, April 29 (AP).—British bombers attacked a "small enemy convoy" in the Gulf of Sirte yesterday, scoring a hit on a tanker and shooting down two Dornier 18's, an R. A. F. communique said today.

In another part of the Mediterranean, the communique said, a medium-sized merchant vessel escorted by two or three destroyers was attacked and hit by torpedo-carrying aircraft Monday night. Another aerial torpedo hit on a ship was reported in a third convoy attack Sunday night.

be either the 1941 House 10 per cent proposal, or the George "overall" war tax applied to all business, or both. It was possible the committee might include one or both in the bill, in addition to the increased excess profits tax rates.

Had the 10 per cent proposal been retained in the 1941 act, some tax spokesmen said much of the popular complaint against companies with war contracts escaping a war-profits tax would have been avoided. These said it was not generally realized that, under present law, if a corporation in order to avoid excess-profits taxes on war contracts pays out excessive salaries or bonuses, all such allowances above a reasonable salary would be disallowed by the Treasury, and be taxed both as corporate income and as income of the individual receiving it.

Two Other Levies, Too

Against the Treasury plan to graduate the new excess profits tax rates from 50 to 75 per cent, two additional excess profits tax proposals are being seriously weighed by the committee.

One, advanced by Colin F. Stam, Congressional staff advisor, graduates the rates more sharply from 60 to 85 per cent, but reduces the 55 per cent combined war surtax and normal tax figure recommended by the Treasury to 40 per cent.

Another, introduced independently by a member of the committee, would impose a flat 90 per cent excess profits tax rate on all excess profits income, but would couple this with a 20 per cent refund in nonnegotiable, noninterest bearing bonds, redeemable after the war. Although this is a form of forced savings, recently opposed by the Treasury, it has strong support in the committee. The 90 per cent excess profits tax plan, like the Stam proposal, would be accompanied by a combined normal and surtax not exceeding 40 per cent.

The President's recommendation for a $25,000 net limit on incomes, a subject of sharp private committee controversy, will not be formally considered until the committee reaches the individual income tax proposals of the Treasury.

Gen. Phillipson To Head Army Emergency Relief

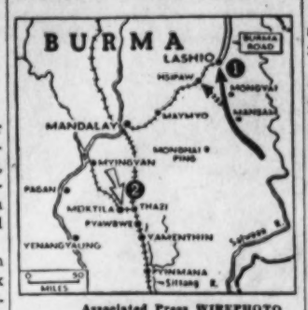
New York, April 29 (AP).—Transfer of Maj. Irving J. Phillipson, commanding the Second Corps Area, to Washington, D. C., to become head of the Army emergency relief, was announced today by Army information service.

He will be succeeded as commander of the Second Corps Area by Maj. Gen. Thomas A. Terry, now stationed at Boston, Mass.

In his new post General Phillipson will succeed Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell, at present executive director of the Army Emergency Relief.

General Phillipson, long interested in soldier welfare problems, has been active since the present emergency began in plans for the cares of dependents of men in the armed service.

Japs at Terminal Of Burma Road



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

With breakneck speed to beat the rainy season, Japanese troops yesterday burst through the mountains some 50 miles from the Mansam area to the outskirts of Lashio (1), western terminal of the Burma Road, continuing their 50-mile advance of Tuesday (black arrow). Japs also thrust (broken arrow) toward Hsipaw on the Lashio-Mandalay Railroad. Meanwhile, British tanks counterattacked at Meiktila (2) and farther south between Pyawbwe and Yamenthin for only this morning reports in Chungking had placed them at Mansam, 50 miles due south.

Obviously they had pushed forward their tank and troops with breakneck abandon in a supreme effort to beat the monsoon, the westerly rains which already are starting and which in two weeks will turn Burma's lowlands into quagmires.

Yesterday the column, stemming out from an expeditionary force said to number 100,000 men, was reported 100 miles from Lashio.

American volunteer group pilots shot down 22 Japanese planes during an enemy air raid on Loiwing on the Yunnan-Burma border Tuesday, it was announced.

Two other Japanese planes were believed to have been destroyed, and all American pilots returned safely to their bases.

Fierce air battles over the border area have been in progress since Monday.

Meanwhile, another Japanese column fighting on the eastern Burmese front was reported heading to the west.

The bypassed Taunggyi area was reported relatively quiet, but one Chinese force was said to be attempting to push forward toward Loilem to cut the base of the Japanese imperiling Lashio. Loilem is 140 miles south of Lashio.

The Irrawaddy front on the west was quiescent.

ster" and commented, "some neck, for a rope."

"When the mad mob gets in motion," Christians' dodgers advised his followers, "don't miss a single politician. Just HANG them to the nearest tree or lamp-post."

The indictment presented yesterday after a grand jury inquiry conducted by James B. Frazier, jr., United States attorney for eastern Tennessee, accused the Soci agent of four violations of the Espionage Act of 1917.

In violation of this act, the indictment charged, Christians willfully tried to foment disloyalty and mutiny in the armed forces and to discourage enlistments.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Biddle's crackdown on sedition was carried forward yesterday by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney, John T. M. Reddan and Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N. (j. g.).

Reserving their further grilling of Baxter and suspected confederates of the Socis, the prosecutors hammered at the operation of Charles E. Coughlin's weekly magazine, Social Justice, already barred from the mails pending hearing Monday on a final order.

Editor Before Probers

Heard yesterday were E. Perrin Schwartz, the nominal editor, and three young women employed in the offices of the Church of the Little Flower, Royal Oak, Mich., where Coughlin is pastor. They were Eugenia Burke, private secretary; Marie Rhodes and Bernice Marks.

Prosecutor Reddan said new efforts were being made to locate the mysteriously missing Mrs. Ann Bethune, a key witness who disappeared when the grand jurors summoned her more than two weeks ago. She is believed able to give valuable evidence of the financing and control of the defeatist press—the widely scattered bloc of little publications whose policies and outcries against the American Government and the United Nations so closely parallel the propaganda line of the Nazi radio.

Mrs. Agnes Waters, isolationist speaker who calls President Roosevelt a "traitor," was ordered away from the grand jury chambers when the investigation began. She issued a statement yesterday that the investigation was persecution of Coughlin, Gerald B. Winrod, pro-Uazi Jew-baiter from Wichita, Kans., and other editors.

Speaking in Baltimore

Mrs. Waters, who called the jailed German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, a patriot, said she would denounce the "suicide brigade" strategy of sending troops out of this country in a speech in Baltimore today, under the sponsorship of the "mothers of the Free State of Maryland."

Besides the grand jury inquiries in Washington and Chattanooga, Attorney General Biddle and the chief of the criminal division, Wendell Berge, are directing investigations in Indianapolis and Chicago. A new one was announced yesterday, in Los Angeles, under the command of William Fleet Palmer, United States attorney for Southern California.

Already under indictment there are Robert Noble and Ellis O. Jones, for hailing Adolf Hitler and excusing the Nazi cause in harangues in the Los Angeles area.

Special Service Today At Catholic U.

A day of spiritual conferences and university planning will be held today at Catholic University, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector, announced yesterday.

He will celebrate a mass at 9 a. m. in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. Women of the university and wives of the administrative officers and faculty members, will join in the service. The prelate will conduct a conference, stations of the Cross and a Holy Hour later in the day.

Cooperate, Girls, And You'll Get Beauty Supplies

The War Production Board—which has taken much of the rubber out of milady's girdle and has redesigned her wardrobe—made a concession to feminine pulchritude last night.

Rouge, lipstick, powder and mascara—mainstays of a schoolgirl complexion—will be available in the future if women cooperate by saving the present containers and compacts.

Officials said the war effort will use nearly all available metals, so that metal compacts, cases, containers and vanities may have to be made of paper or other nonpermanent materials.

British women are required to present their old containers for refills, but WPB officials said this "drastic action" is not necessary and cooperation by American women should suffice.

58 Killed in Raid On Alexandria

Cairo, April 28 (AP).—Fifty-eight persons were killed and 111 injured in an Axis air raid on the Alexandria area last night, the Egyptian interior ministry announced today.

Workmen still were digging in the ruins this afternoon in search for more bodies. Among the buildings demolished was a synagogue.

Canada-England Airmail Resumed

Ottawa, April 29 (AP).—Airmail service between Canada and England via Newfoundland and Eire is to be resumed at once, Postmaster General W. P. Mulock announced tonight.

The service will be twice weekly in each direction, but no information respecting dates or other details of such flights will be revealed.

Dear Uncle Sam:

Heck, you know every two-fisted Yank would give his shirt to win this war. But as the high-brows would say, that's a mere figure of speech. The gang writing this letter is really kicking in for you, Uncle—and no monkey business. We're giving you our pants!

That's no gag! When you ordered "no more 2 trouser suits for the duration", you were talking straight at us—the biggest civilian army in this country. We're the fellows who wear Bond Clothes. And we're doggone chesty that you've called us to the colors.

Of course, Uncle Sam, every one knows that a suit with two trousers wears lots longer. And we mean lots, too! That Hooper-Holmes Survey in your top desk drawer says its 77%. Now that's not chicken feed, when it comes to saving wool for tomorrow. But we know the way things are going, tomorrow may be too late.

Down in Washington, you're saying this war can be won or lost right now—in 1942.

You want wool and cloth today! Well, you're 100% right, Uncle Sam. Our sons, and brothers, and buddies in the armed forces come first. So if it's our pants you want, take 'em. We can wait!

If you say we can't get two trousers with our Bond suits for the duration—well, we'll take 'em with one pair of jeans and still be ahead on the deal. That bunch at Bond's have always been square shooters, and we're not going to forget it.

Now, with this war-time set-up, we hear Bond's are going to town with prices that'll bat the ears off anything they've ever done. How do you like that?

So here's to you, Uncle Sam. May those striped breeches of yours flap in the breeze as we start the big parade to Berlin and Tokio.

Davis Implies Board Will Stabilize, Not Freeze, Wages

an agreement was reached to "swap ideas" and discuss projected moves.

Davis declared it was "plain" that the board was not going to improve the standard of workers now getting a standard wage.

Asked to define standard wage, he said that a wage arrived at by "real collective bargaining" was in general a standard wage at the time it was arrived at.

On the face of this statement, observers agreed that the question in the major cases now pending before the board—"Little Steel," Aluminum Co. of America, Bethlehem Shipbuilding, General Motors and several others where a dollar a day wage increase is being asked for—is whether cost of living increases since the last wage contracts have been such as to make what were standard wages when they were first negotiated, on the average of a year ago, now "substandard."

Warning of Sacrifice

Also, it was noted by board sources, in arriving at this consideration, the board would be obliged to take into account Mr. Roosevelt's warning that sacrifices from every group, including labor, would have to be exacted, and to Price Administrator Henderson's warning that Americans must resign themselves to a standard of living about equal to that of 1932, owing to the scarcity of supplies for civilian consumers.

Davis also conceded that the board would have power to carry out the Chief Executive's directive only in cases where a wage dispute came before the board for settlement.

Other board sources pointed out that these cases were a small minority, compared to all the negotiations for wage increases that were settld directly by the parties, or by the Federal Conciliation Service or by arbitration. They asserted, however, that board decisions tended to set patterns much wider than the individual cases on which the decisions were made.

Voluntary Rises Studied

Asked about the inflationary problem of an employer voluntarily granting a wage increase in order to hold his labor and expecting to put the increase into the cost of his war contract, one authoritative board source declared that if a trend of this nature began, he was convinced the President would have to place a direct "freeze" order over all wages. If this were done, no employer could grant a wage increase without taking the case before adjustment boards set up throughout the country for this purpose.

He suggested, however, an intermediate step which could be taken by the Government contracting agency. Carrying out the President's admonition against inflationary wage rises, the War Department, for example, could advise its contractors that they could not expect to be paid by the Government, as part of the costs of the contract, any additional wage increases granted, the official explained.

Cases to Be Pattern

Davis and other board sources made it clear that the board would not wait until other parts of the President's seven-point program were put into effect before attempting to stabilize wages. Instead, the board plans to hand down decisions in its normal course.

The first of these may be the "Little Steel" case. It was acknowledged that the decision in this would be a pattern and a forecast of the board's operation under the Presidential admonition for wage stabilization. It was believed that some increase would be granted, but probably only a slight one to compensate in small part for past cost of living increases, and that there was no possibility of awarding the dollar a day demanded.

After these first decisions are handed down, and a policy adopted on how to compensate for past cost of living expenses, it was believed that the board's task would be greatly simplified.

If Henderson's general price-freezing order were successful in stabilizing the cost of living, the major argument for continuing wage advances would largely disappear, Davis said.

Meantime, the board announced an agreement had been reached for the duration of the war on the procedure in cases of jurisdictional disputes. The agreement, worked out with C. I. O. President Philip Murray and A. F. L. President William Green, provides for mediation of such disputes by the labor members of the WLB. If that failed, the parties would resort to arbitration.

40 Cents an Hour Indorsed For Shortline Employes

New York, April 29 (AP).—An increase to a 40-cents-per-hour minimum wage level for some 64,000 employes of trunkline and shortline railroads was recommended today by a joint wage committee operating under the auspices of the United States Labor Department Wage and Hour Division.

The minimum for trunkline workers now is 36 cents an hour and for shortline workers, 33 cents. These wage levels went into effect March 1, 1941, in accordance with an order issued by the administrator on recommendation of a previous committee.

Prior to that time the minimum wage level was 30 cents.

Many of the workers involved are maintenance-of-way employes.

The new recommendation will be sent to the administrator of the wage and hour division, L. Metcalfe Walling. He will call a public hearing, and then issue a minimum wage order.

Wives and children would receive $20 monthly, which would be taken from the pay of enlisted men. To this the Government would add $20 for a wife with no child, $30 for a wife and one child, with $10 more for each additional child; $15 if there is no wife but one child, $25 if two children, and $10 for each additional child; and $20 to a former wife divorced, to whom alimony has been decreed.

Allowances to the "B" class dependents would be optional with the man in military service. If he already had "A" class dependents, another $5 would be taken from his monthly pay or $25 in all. If not he could pay $20 monthly to his "B" dependents. In addition the Government would pay $15 for one dependent parent, $25 for two parents and $5 each for each grandchild, brother, sister and additional parent. Class B allowances would be limited to a top of $50 monthly.

Maj. Francis V. Keesling, Selective Service spokesman, told the committee that provisions for wives, children and other dependents might eliminate many deferments under the present Draft Act and regulations.

Both Major Keesling and Maj. William S. Richards, who appeared for the War Department, asserted that the time had come in this war for allowance payments to dependents. They said families of a number of men already in the armed services were entitled to such payments and that more men with dependents would be enrolled.

Keesling said that approximately 65 per cent of all registrants were now in Class III by reason of dependency.

He told the subcommittee that "decision must be made as to what type of registrants will be drawn first when, and if the registrants already classified or who will hereafter be classified into 1-A on the basis of present policies are exhausted."

WPB Gets Authority To Ration Power

By Hillier Kreighbaum
United Press Staff Writer

The War Production Board last night assumed responsibility for handling the Nation's war-essential power supply problems—a move viewed as clearing the way for rationing of electric power, if such a step becomes necessary.

The action—revealed by the White House—resulted from an agreement between the WPB and the Federal Power Commission.

An announcement said the agreement "unites the efforts of the two agencies in meeting and handling wartime power problems" and that it "clearly defines the respective responsibilities of the two agencies for the purpose of securing maximum efficiency and the avoidance of duplication in the administration of the wartime power program."

Essentially, the agreement provides that the WPB shall have authority over power supply functions relating to war production and essential civilian activities, while the FPC will be responsible for long-range power problems, certain peacetime activities and the protection of power supply against hostile acts.

One of the most significant responsibilities vested in the WPB is "the planning, development and administration of power supply allocation programs for those regions where the available supply proves insufficient to meet all requirements."

In effect, this gives the war agency authority to ration electric power when, and if, such a move becomes necessary. Some observers here believe rationing will be necessary next fall. When it comes, it is expected to apply mostly in metropolitan areas where maximum power is available with minimum regulation.

Authority Defined

The WPB also is given the "exclusive responsibility" for:

1. Developing and administering programs assuring that equipment and materials necessary for power supply purposes are allocated to areas where and when "the need is most urgent from the standpoint of the military and war production program, keeping in mind the minimum dislocation of civilian supply." This includes priority control and allocations of materials and equipment for all power systems—public and private.

2. Programming power supply requirements for war purposes and essential civilian activities.

3. Mobilization of power to meet specific war production activities.

The FPC offer advice and counsel on such activities.

Under the agreement, the FPC—at request of the WPB—will make its staff members available to the war agency for the duration.

Senate Test Is Looming Soon For Ball Labor Measure

Minority members of the Senate Labor Committee last night were revising the Ball labor bill for a possible showdown Senate test as the more drastic Smith-Vinson profits-labor curbs faced a tabling motion in the House Naval Affairs Committee today.

A point of order against the naval committee's sitting while the House was in session forced postponement of a House committee showdown on the Smith-Vinson measure. Action was scheduled for this mornnig, with the first test coming on a motion to table.

The Senate Labor Committee meanwhile heard representatives of the War Labor Board's three panels, public, employe and employer, testify on recent decisions of the board and possible methods of stabilizing wages under existing machinery, as suggested by the President.

While the committee adjourned without action, Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, whose modified labor bill was before it, last night was working on a redraft of the measure. Together with Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, Ball is expected to insist on a Senate committee vote. If the committee refuses to report out a bill, Ball may move independently in the Senate for consideration of his original measure reported weeks ago by the committee.

The revised Ball bill seeks to write into the statute specific direction for Government labor agencies to deny wage increases or new closed shop contracts unless justified by a fixed set of conditions. A new Labor Standards Commission would be set up over the War Labor Board, and procedural machinery strengthened.

Ball and Taft were reported working on a union maintenance amendment and broadening of wage-stabilization provisions to give Government agencies authority to rule on increases in cases not now coming before the board.

May Go Direct to Senate

During yesterday's committee discussion it was developed by Ball and Senator Hill (Democrat) of Alabama that existing machinery probably would not reach pay increases demanded by labor and agreed to by employers without any dispute, particularly if there was a cost plus fixed fee contract.

Ball already has prepared one substitute for the original procedural labor bill already reported by the Labor Committee, and is now bringing the new measure up to date. Working with Senator Taft, he is expected to carry his measure directly to the Senate if he has a substantial minority committee vote.

In the House Naval Committee meanwhile, a motion by Representative Bradley (Democrat), Pennsylvania, to table the Smith-Vinson bill will be pending business when the committee resumes today.

Explains Substitute Bill

Chairman Vinson of Georgia, yesterday explained to the committee a substitute bill on which he will demand a committee vote. The new measure freezes open and closed shop conditions, provides time-and-a-half only after 48 hours, abolishes double pay for special days and provides for incentive bonus payments to workers.

Principal change was in profits features. These still retain the basic feature—a $6000 profits cushion plus a maximum profit of 8 per cent a year on each dollar of cost on contracts in excess of $100,000. The revised bill allows general research, experiment and development as a proper cost item. It allows a "reasonable" amount of money for amortization and for good will advertising.

The three War Labor Board members questioned by the Senate Labor Committee were Dr. Wayne Morse, public member; Thomas Kennedy, labor member, and Edward J. McMillan, employer member. Committeemen said Morse and Kennedy opposed additional legislation, while McMillan "felt some legislation would be helpful" in setting out definite policies on the closed shop, wage increases and union security. Kennedy said agreements on big contracts having a Nation-wide effect were serving to stabilize wages without legislation.

Rail Head Pledges 'Crackerjack' Job

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 29.—The new commander of the military railway service, Col. Carl R. Gray, jr., declared today that "we're going to do a crackerjack job of railroading in the American Army in the world wide theaters of war."

Now in training stages, the service is drawing from the Nation's rail system operating executives, maintenance experts, mechanical superintendents and workmen.

Eventually, 30,000 to 35,000 officers and men will make up the military railway service in a headquarters battalion, ten railway grand division headquarters, 42 operating battalions and six shop battalions.

"Our job will be to provide the rail transportation the Army needs in theaters of war," Colonel Gray said. "Therefore we will have no concern with commercial railroad operation in the United States unless the country is invaded."

He said none of the service personnel had gone abroad yet and declined to say when, or if any would.

Colonel Gray's job is similar to the World War post of the late W. W. Atterbury, Pennsylvania Railroad president who was commissioned a brigadier general and sent to France as director general of transportation of the A. E. F.

Colonel Gray is 53 and a son of the late Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific Railroad. He was in general staff transportation work in the first World War, rising to the rank of lieutenant colonel, and has been a colonel in the Corps of Engineers Reserve since 1923. On May 15 he will leave his civilian job as executive vice president of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad, at St. Paul, to enter active duty with the military railway service headquarters staff at Fort Snelling, Minn.

Colonel Gray discussed his new job at a press conference and in a talk to the freight claim division of the Association of American Railroads.

Three operating battalions and one shop battalion are in training now, another operating battalion and the headquarters staff will begin service May 15. Each operating battalion will have a headquarters and service company and three other companies but will function like a railroad division. Shop battalions will have the same number of companies.

The service is seeking railroad men who have already entered other branches of the armed forces, Col. Gray said.

Citizens Defense Corps and Civil Air Patrol Are Given Federal Recognition

Landis Orders Service Staff In New Setup

The Office of Civilian Defense, which has been systematically shedding its much criticized frills and developing more and more into a workmanlike organization ever since James M. Landis inherited the director's job from Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia, last night moved another step toward its goal of closer integration of OCD activities with the war effort.

Acting under orders of President Roosevelt who called for a reorganization on April 16, Director Landis issued a new series of administrative orders and regulations which grant formal recognition to, and provide basic regulations for, the U. S. Citizens' Defense Corps and the Civil Air Patrol; provide for the organization of a new U. S. Citizens Service Corps, and designate certain classes of persons not enrolled in any of these services who may wear arm bands during a blackout or air raid.

Issues Statement

Briefly, according to a statement from the OCD, Director Landis' action accomplishes the following:

1. "It gives official status to the Citizens Defense Corps for the first time and prescribes standards of eligibility and training for membership; the regulations provide that no person who is not a member may wear the official insignia or receive or use Federal protective equipment to be issued by the Office of Civilian Defense.

2. "It creates a new United States Citizens Service Corps for official recognition of volunteers who have completed 50 hours of work in such activities as conservation, war bond sales, salvage, education, health, consumers' services, etc., or for those who have completed certain prescribed training courses in volunteer war activities other than the protective services.

3. "It makes official provision for special insignia which will permit doctors, nurses, newspaper reporters and photographers, members of the clergy, undertakers and others to carry on essential services or duties during the course of a blackout or air raid.

4. "The Civil Air Patrol is for the first time given official Federal status."

In announcing the regulations, Landis made it clear that war workers in the protective services would not be entitled to wear the official insignia nor would they be permitted to receive protective equipment under the recent one million dollar grant from Congress unless the basic standards of training are complied with.

Some Bands Barred

Landis said that the unauthorized use of any insignia designed by the OCD is a Federal offense and added that his new rules prohibit the further use of the simple "C. D." arm band, frequently used by trainees and other members of local civilian defense groups.

The insignia regulations provide that only licensed manufacturers may make and sell articles of identification embodying any prescribed OCD insignia, such as lapel buttons and pins, automobile plates and arm bands.

Landis' new orders follow closely those of last Sunday when the OCD director issued regulations designed to eliminate duplications, red tape and "unnecessary activities" within his agency, and recall his earlier actions in segregating OCD activities into six new divisions shortly after he took over in January, in accepting the resignation of Mayris Chaney, dancer protege of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and early OCD appointee, and in effecting a transfer of the much criticized Division of Physical Fitness to Paul V. McNutt's Federal Security Administration.

the British concern over the presence in that Norwegian port of the German super-battleship Tirpitz and several other powerful warships on the flank of the vital supply route to Murmansk, Russia.

Great Fires at Kiel

The Air Ministry told of great fires started at Kiel, but was hesitant to claim great damage at Trondheim.

British quarters expressed belief the destruction of shore supplies and facilities at Trondheim and Kiel would either hold the Nazi ships in port or drive them out to sea ill equipped for the challenge of the Allied navies.

This was in line with the British air policy as announced to a cheering Commons today by Sir Archibald Sinclair, air secretary:

"To destroy the enemy capacity to make war."

York, a city of 85,000 in the industrial midlands, was the target for Nazi retaliation Tuesday night. One block of shops was burned out and the residential quarters of a convent were destroyed, killing two nuns.

"York was bombed by about 20 enemy aircraft, of which five were destroyed," an authoritative statement said.

London Paper Says 4000 Died at Rostock

London, April 29 (U.P.).—More than 4000 persons—600 of them soldiers trapped in barracks—were killed and thousands of others maimed in the R. A. F. bombing raids on Rostock, German Baltic port, the Evening Standard said tonight, quoting a Swedish survivor.

He said that the raids had virtually wiped out the Neptune Shipyards, many ships in the harbor, hundreds of railway cars and trucks loaded with war supplies for the Eastern Front, freight yards and many main streets.

The survivor, employe of a Swedish shipping company, escaped to the southern Swedish port of Malmoe after the third successive night of "indescribable horror" inflicted by the R. A. F. and was unable to say what additional havoc had been done on the fourth night, Sunday.

(A Stockholm dispatch said that 100,000 people have fled from Rostock, leaving only 15,000 inhabitants to fight remaining fires and dig in the ruins for possible survivors. A Berlin dispatch to the newspaper Tidningen described the town as "leveled to the ground.") which are necessary to take men and women to and from their places of work." Urging that such a program be got under way immediately, he asked for a report from each department head within 30 days.

District Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced last night that a mass meeting of owners of private and commercial vehicles to work out the program requested by the President has been called for May 7 at 7:30 in the Departmental Auditorium. Van Duzer recently circulated 100,000 "share your car" cards among Federal workers.

Eastman, whose order affects an estimated billion taxi passengers per year, said that "highly personalized cab service available in the past could not be maintained in a stripped-to-the-bone war economy.

Hits Nonessential Riding

"In the allotment of scarce materials, taxicab service, like all other organized transportation, must be considered solely from the standpoint of necessity of service.

"With the entire American civilian economy being stripped of nonessentials, rubber and other replacement parts cannot be allocated to taxicabs until the operators and local regulatory authorities prove that present equipment is not being wasted in the performance of nonessential service.

"Cruising must be eliminated and dead mileage reduced to the lowest possible point. Non-essential riding must be stopped."

Public Utilities Chairman Gregory Hankin said that Eastman's views "coincided with the program" he has been trying to put across for months.

New steps contemplated by the P. U. C. to accede to Eastman's ruling include the establishment of many new cab-stands, an order that all cabs upon discharging a passenger shall proceed to the nearest stand and wait there for passengers who must walk to the stand instead of waiting on the corner for a passing cab, and improvement of the call-box system, possibly by placing a 10 cent service charge on calls to homes.

Hankin said that there were three possible types of cab service now open—the pick-up, the call-box, and the cab-stand service. The pick-up service will be maintained during the rush hours, and all drivers will be ordered to offer it. Cab-stand service is not practical during the rush hours, as the parked cabs would impede traffic.

More Oil Trucks Used

Movements to conserve gasoline in other parts of the country were seen in the increased cooperation of State governments in encouraging the short hauling of oil by tank trucks for a 100-mile radius, as recommended by United States Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes.

Use of these trucks instead of the railroad tank cars necessary for long hauling has been discouraged previously because of State laws and municipal ordinances limiting the size of the trucks and their loads. Such restrictions have been lightened in many places.

Utilization of the last possible source of oil was seen in an order yesterday that no oil or gas well be abandoned until it was proven incapable of enough yield to pay cost of labor, upkeep and taxes.

Notice of intent to abandon a well capable of producing more than one barrel of crude oil or 6000 cubic feet of natural gas daily must be filed with the district production director at least 30 days before operations are suspended.

5-Mile Trek In Green Hell Takes 3 Days

By Don Caswell
United Press Staff Writer

General MacArthur's headquarters, Melbourne, April 29.—The road to safety lay only 5 miles away—but nine crew members of an American bomber that made a forced landing in the New Guine wilds went through four nights and three days in a "green hell" before finally reaching it.

Millions of mosquitoes nicked tired flesh as they pushed through waist-deep swamp water and saw-toothed grass that towered 8 feet high. Some became delirious with malaria.

Raw courage finally saw them through and today one of them told the story.

The entire journey back to Port Moresby took five weeks, but all else pales into insignificance beside the first few days, said Lieut. George Munroe, Kirkwood, Mo., the plane's navigator. The pilot was Lieut. Fred Eaton, New York, and the co-pilot H. M. Harlow, Charlottesville, Va. All nine men are back on active duty after having spent about a week in a hospital.

"Kinda Pushed by Japs"

The story began when the plane turned for home after raiding Rabaul, on New Britain Island.

"We were kinda pushed by the Japs—must have been six or eight of 'em after us at one time or another and we used up a lot of gas getting away," Munroe began.

"We ran out of gas somewhere over southern New Guinea so Eaton picked a place to land.

"From the air it looked like a grassy field, but it turned out later to be a swamp covered with 3 or 4 feet of water and thick marsh grass so high I couldn't touch the top of it."

Munroe suffered a slight head cut during the landing, but the others were unhurt. Eaton radioed his base that he had made a crash-landing.

Saw Range of Hills

Five miles away, the men could see a range of hills sticking above the swamp. They plunged into the swamp and were immediately in water and enveloped by the "green hell" of jungle and swamp growth which cut off their view of the surrounding country.

They traveled entirely by compass bearings taken on a vantage point from the damaged plane.

"Every step we took we had to bend the grass aside or hack a path with long jungle knives," Munroe continued. "Sometimes the water was quite shallow—only a foot or so deep—but most of the time we were up to our waists.

"Once we tried floating down a stream on logs. Some of the boys lost their shoes and our emergency rations became soaked and uneatable. We slept in the swamp, cutting down armfuls of grass and making mounds to lie on. But the grass quickly caked down until we were in the water.

Rained Every Night

"It didn't matter much because it rained nearly every night. Anyway, we were up trying to catch rain water to drink."

They started trying to boil swamp water, Munroe said. The grass burned like paper "but I don't think we ever boiled the water enough to do any good and finally gave up and drank it as it was."

"Once we hit a piece of dry land but the mosquitoes were so bad none of us could sleep. The combination of not eating, not sleeping and general exhaustion made us all a little crazy. Most of us got delirious.

"One man dreamed he was in a plane. When he awoke he wanted to lean against the marsh grass, thinking he was leaning against the wall of a plane. He toppled into the water.

"Another was convinced that someone told him a mess hall was just across the road. He insisted on taking the others barging through the grass to look for it. We finally convinced him otherwise."

Found Native Village

The party finally reached a village on the high ground for which they were aiming. They found natives who spoke only a little English.

Munroe said they were "passable and friendly" and gave the Americans some food. But, he said that as soon as they discovered the airmen were unfamiliar with the country they "started demanding fancy prices."

"We stayed in the village one night and then started down river in a native canoe," Munroe said. "The day after we had landed in the swamp another plane came over looking for the bomber and we found out later that it located the wreckage.

"When we reached the coast we found the resident commissioner had been sent to look for us. He took us to a station up the coast, where we still were miles from anywhere.

"We had to pack up and go on a trek once more—this time with native porters. We marched 40 miles inland to another station, and kicked around there for quite some time. Finally we headed back for the coast again. The commissioner fixed us up some small native boats in which we made our way by easy stages to Port Moresby."

Akron Girls Big Help in War Industry

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Akron, Ohio, April 29.—In the same large room where rubber heels rolled one year ago from machines at the rate of a quarter million daily, girls in cotton dresses and slacks today rapidly scissored rough edges from thousands of gas masks.

It is part of a two-way conversion program one sees in this industrial area—a program that is turning peacetime raw materials into wartime products and drawing women into the assembly lines jobs thousands more of them will be filling before the war is over.

The largest gymnasium in Ohio, where five basketball games have been played simultaneously—with a good portion of the city's inhabitants for onlookers—is converted now to the manufacture of rubber landing boats.

Tire storage rooms, with no tires to fill them, are crowded with workers turning out self-inflating rubber lifeboats of all sizes.

Under the big dome of a Goodyear air dock where dirigibles formerly were manufactured men and women work side by side assembling aircraft parts.

The rapidly-expanding aircraft assembling plants are the goal of most girls coming to work for Goodyear. In the other and older sections of the company's buildings, women are no novelty—although the percentage of them working today has increased more than 100 per cent over that of a year ago and is increasing daily. In the aircraft plants only a small nucleus was working a year ago.

These women in the older sections, however, are paid on the older "less pay for lighter work" basis, drawing less than men. Their paychecks, thanks to overtime, are larger than those of girls in the aircraft sections—but the latter get equal pay for equal work, draw more by the hour.

For the aircraft girls the company has instituted an in-training program that the girls love. Drawing 50 cents an hour while going to schools, girls selected for the school have a minimum of two weeks' training before going into the plants. Three hundred girls, most of them between the ages of 18 and 21—and about a third of them married to soldiers—are in the school now.

They purchase their own kits of tools, have to be reasonably good in mathematics and learn to do such interesting jobs as riveting both "bucking and hammering."

No educational requirement is made of the girls, but most of them are high school graduates. The company has not yet begun to use college girls nor to draw on a labor supply outside the Ohio area. Officials foresee a much-expanded use of women during the coming year, but doubt that many "outsiders" will be drawn in. There is a hesitancy on the part of personnel officers to accept summer employment from high school girls and boys or teachers, although many inquiries concerning summer employment are being received.

A year from now, however, the situation will be different, official believes, and summer workers will be more welcome. Today they are training as they go and believe the investment they are making in getting their key workers is too great to justify the granting of short-range jobs.

When girls go to work in the aircraft plants they have to wear slacks and usually they work teamed with a man. They like both ideas and shop foremen are beginning to like them. At first the company thought to make them wear slacks of a uniform color, but had to abandon the idea when they were found to be unavailable. All colors are in vogue as a result with many of the girls trying out the color schemes found in the green, blue and yellow paints on parts with which they work. Long bobs, without nets, are the style and as often as not there is a gay bow in the hair. Shoes are flat-heeled and comfortable. Some blouses are tucked in and others flap in the breezes.

Family Men Stand 'Pretty Good' Chance Of Being Drafted if Aid Bill Is Passed

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

Men in their thirties with wives and children entirely dependent upon them will, once certain legislation is passed, stand a "pretty good chance of being called up for military service, national Selective Service headquarters revealed yesterday.

"This chance is assuming, of course," a spokesman said, "that Congress acts on the allotment bill, which would make financial provision for a man's dependents, and on the possibility of replacing the man, if he is in a job essential to the war effort, by an older worker."

Before querying Selective Service officials, a reporter prepared a make-believe list of citizens including a 34-year-old policeman, 37, with a wife and two children; a department store floor walker, 37, with a wife and one child; a married Government clerk, 36, with no children, and, just to get a bit of information on the side, a reporter, age 29, with a wife and two childen.

Chances "Pretty Good"

In each case it was assumed that the wife and child, or children, were entirely dependent upon the husband and father for their support, and in each case the Selective Service spokesman gave the answer when asked what was the man's chances of being called for military service: "Pretty good."

He emphasized previous announcements that there would be no group deferments and that each case must "be decided on its own merits, and by the man's neighbors on his own local draft board, not by some bureaucrat in Washington."

When asked if he could fix a period of time in which men falling into the classes enumerated above might be called for service, the spokesman replied: "We only select; the War Department inducts."

A call to the War Department brought the statement that any news on the time element involved falls in the category of restricted information.

Would Aid Enemy

"Such information would let the enemy know just how fast we are building up our Army," it was stated.

Other sources, however, recalled Gen. George C. Marshall's recent statement in London that by the middle of this summer the United States will be placing 150,000 men in the field each month, added to it the man-power needs of the other military services, and speculated that the man in his thirties, with dependents, may be called sooner than he expects.

At the same time, the possibility of a prolonged wrangle in Congress over allotment legislation to provide for a man's dependents was raised in the recent statement of the Selective Service system dfiening "reasonable support" as "that measure of support which is considered adequate in accordance with the prevailing standards in the community at the time of classification or reclassification."

Standards Differ

An allotment that would provide an adequate standard of living in Arkansas, it was pointed out, would fall far below requirements in Washington or other populous cities.

And if Congress attempts to approach the problem from this standpoint, with different allotments for the dependents of men in different sections of the country, it will lay itself wide open to charges of "class legislation." One source familiar with the problem said: "I don't see how they're going to get it straightened out. It's a tough situation."

Meantime, District Selective Service headquarters announced that its board of appeal on April 29 had sustained the appeals of 9 out of 27 men who asked that they be removed from a 1-A classification to other groups, principally 3-A. Most of these, it was stated, were granted because of dependency.

Of the other appeals considered, 15 were rejected, and the other three were returned to their local boards for further data.

Of the 15 rejected appeals, one was granted a stay of four months for reconsideration on a four to two vote of the board and three others received a stay of induction, two for 30 days, the other for two months.

District headquarters also announced that men reclassified in the new 3-B group, reserved for men deferred for dependency and who are engaged in war production, will be relatively small. Only approximately 3.5 per cent of the men signed up in the first and second registrations are in 2-A and 2-B, classifications which correspondent roughly to 3-A and 3-B under the new order, minus dependency.

More than half of the registrants of the first and second registrations here are classified 3-A, and while some of these no doubt will go into 3-B, it is believed the number will be very small because of Washington's proportionately small war industry.

Nazi Conquest Is Exhausting All Belgium

Due to Nazi methods, the present German conquest of Belgium has resulted in systematic economic exploitation "far more exhausting than the relatively unmethodical plundering of previous wars," the Brookings Institution reported last night.

Disclosing the results of a survey conducted by R. Ardenne, a Belgian economist, the institution said the Germans had seized large quantitis of movable goods, requisitioned all foreign securities, and taken control of finance, production and trade.

An acute food shortage exists because Belgium, which normally imports much of its food, has been cut off from other countries and its own products have been requisitioned.

"Industry is controlled," the report said, "by allocation of raw materials and finished goods through commodity control agencies, which were organized by Belgian officials but are actually ruled by the German army authorities.

"The ability of Belgium to produce has suffered from the seizure of more than half the nation's freight cars and most of its motor trucks. Shipment of coal to Germany, estimated last winter at nearly half the Belgian production, has further crippled industry in addition to causing distress among the people.

"Workers have been induced to go to Germany through the use of indirect pressures rather than by the forcible deportation method of the first World War. Unemployment benefits have been refused when workers would not seek employment 'where it could be found,' that is, in Germany. In some instances, plants have been closed to create artificial unemployment so as to increase the German labor supply."

U. S. Launching More Than 2 Ships Every Day

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 29.—Admiral Howard L. Vickery of the United States Maritime Commission, promised today that 23 million tons of new merchant shipping would be delivered to the Nation by the end of 1943.

"That is more shipping than England had in her whole fleet before the beginning of this war," he said in an address delivered at the thirtieth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. "And it is about half the amount of shipping that the whole world had at the beginning of this war."

Admiral Vickery reported the 45 yards building Maritime Commission ships already were launching more than two vessels a day, but he weighted his glowing production figures with a solemn word of warning.

"I would be fooling you," he said, "if I tried to tell you we can build ships as fast as we can lose ships. It can't be done . .

Must Protect Shipping

"Therefore, the problem of shipping is a two-way problem. We must protect our shipping as well as build our shipping. Neither one of them is the complete answer, but with both together I believe we will be on top of this situation and before the end of this year our shipping problem will be well in hand."

The Maritime Commission's report was part of a special session conducted by the Chamber of Commerce to present a picture of the progress being made by American war industries. He said the country could expect eight million tons of merchant shipping this year and 15 million tons in 1943

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, told members of the chamber that business and Government must apply three remedies to keep the Nation's railroad a healthy economic factor.

"One is more cars and locomotives," he said. "Another is to make better use of those which now exist. The third is to reduce the work to be done by curtailing traffic." He said so far the carriers had been able to meet the increasing demands upon them, but ahead lay a path "beset with trouble."

Reduce Handling Time

Eastman added railroad loading and unloading times must be reduced, and that by "voluntary efforts or otherwise" it was imperative that boxcar loadings be increased so that more of their capacity be put in use.

America cannot function without the automobile, Lieut. Frank M. Kreml, nationally known authority on motor-vehicle traffic, told the chamber today.

"This Nation has been building a motor economy for 25 years," he said. "It would take a decade, possibly a generation, to change our economy to one in which the motor vehicle is not an important unit."

Kreml, a former Evanston, Ill., police officer, is director of the safety division of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. For several years he has lectured and conducted university courses on motor traffic problems.

90,000,000 Depend on Car

"Altogether, 90 million United States depend substantially upon the motor vehicle. Car use surveys of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association show that more than half of our passenger car mileage is for necessary driving.

"If in 1942 we have only necessity driving, this still leaves us with nearly 30 billion passenger miles—a reduced total which will equal three and one-half times the total passenger mileage of all other forms of transportation combined.

American Planes Aiding in Deadlier Defense of Malta

London (Thursday), April 30 (AP). The arrival of United States fighter planes on the hard-hit little island of Malta was the reason given in Berlin for the recent and deadlier defenses of that British mid-Mediterranean base, the London Daily Mail reported from Stockholm early today.

Berlin sources did not specify how the Americans reached Malta, the reports said, but they suggested that United States warships have entered the Mediterranean.

(President Roosevelt said in his Tuesday night broadcast that American warships are in action in the Mediterranean.)

Meanwhile, reports direct from Malta said six German planes were damaged, two so badly that they likely would not get home, in two small attacks against the island yesterday.

Give Japs No Rest, Chinese Warns U. S.

Gen. Hsiung Asserts Nippon May Become 'Almost Impregnable' Soon

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Lieut. Gen. Hsiung-Fei, head of the Chinese Military Mission to the United States, yesterday warned against giving Japan a "breathing spell." Already, he said, Japan has acquired great supplies of rubber, oil, sugar and rice, and if given time to consolidate her conquests, she will become "almost impregnable."

Gen. Hsiung called for a grand strategy among the United Nations which would have as it aim major offensives against both Germany and Japan. Such a double offensive, he said, would be entirely feasible. What is needed against Germany, he said, is primarily land power—which Russia is now providing—whereas the great need against Japan is naval and air power.

The Chinese general was reminded of the argument that the United Nations ought to concentrate first on Germany, knock her out of the war, and then mass their fleets, their air forces and their armies for a supreme attack on Japan.

Suppose It Doesn't Work

"It is all very well if that strategy succeeds in defeating Germany," he said. "But what if the victory doesn't come off. We must consider all the possibilities."

"You imply then that we must go on fighting Japan also?"

"Naturally."

General Hsiung talked to newspaper reporters at the Chinese Embassy, Twin Oaks, at 3225 Woodley Road, the beautiful estate, where once dwelt Gardiner Greene Hubbard, first president of the National Geographic Society and father-in-law of Alexander Graham Bell.

General Hsiung, who recently arrived here with a military mission of nine experts, is 50. Like Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, he is a graduate of the Japanese Imperial War College in Tokyo as well as of Paotung Military Academy, China's West Point.

Russo-Jap Fight Forecast

Neither he nor any of the other members of the mission seemed to be alarmed by Japan's headlong gains in Burma. Asked how supplies could get into China with the Japs in control of Burma, he smiled and said that where there was a will there was a way. He referred the newsmen to President Roosevelt's speech of the night before, which expressed the same sentiment.

General Hsiung, in response to a question, said that a conflict between Japan and Russia was inevitable.

"But whether it will happen now or later," he said, "nobody can predict."

He said he and his fellow officers had come to Washington, not to conduct any negotiations on behalf of the Chinese Government, but to contribute their efforts in the common cause under the guidance of President Roosevelt. He emphasized the need of a unified strategy covering all theaters of the war, and he said he expected to take part in general-staff talks here.

Bans "Breathing Spell"

The absence of a common strategy among nations that hoped to stay at peace, Gen. Hsiung said, was largely responsible for the conquests of Germany and Japan.

"But we must not allow the Axis nations to exploit the conquests they have already made," he said. "In particular Japan has acquired inexhaustible supplies of rubber, oil, sugar and rice; and if given time to consolidate her conquests, she will become almost impregnable and the war in the Pacific will be indefinitely prolonged.

"Germany at present is being held in check by Great Britain and Soviet Russia, but under no circumstances should Japan be given a breathing spell to wax stronger for wider conquests.

"In our grand war strategy China has her assigned responsibilities. Therefore she should be supplied not merely in the spirit of friendly assistance but as a definite consideration in strategical necessity to give to a fighting ally supplies which will be sufficient for the task assigned and expect of her."

China's principal needs, he said, are planes and heavy artillery. Once she has enough of these, General Hsiung declared, the Chinese army will drive the Japanese invaders into the sea.

Dunkerque Veteran Lauds British Courage

Wearing a broad grin and the uniform of an English officer, Lieut. Sydney Bracy, jr., the only American to take part in the evacuation of Dunkirque, and one of the last to leave that place, yesterday in an interview here remembered how during that time he lived only on "cigarettes and champagne."

"I'll never forget the courage and the wonderful stuff given by everyone there," he said. 'I saw some terrible things but I never saw any British soldier lose his nerve or mention surrender. They were all heroes."

Bracy was a truck driver at the time. He had been in charge of seven vehicles bringing up supplies to the troops extending the Maginot Line. When the Germans broke through his trucks were used to haul explosives for demolition work.

"We lost all seven trucks over a three-week period," he said, "and we finished up the job with three old requisitioned French buses. They were darned funny looking because we cut the sides and tops off so the men could dive for the ditches faster.

Under Steady Bombing

"We were under steady bombing. The planes would dive and if they didn't get you with the bombs when they came down they would try with their machine guns."

Bracy, who was a corporal at the time, arrived on the beach at Dunkerque two days before the last ships sailed away. "It was a funny thing there," he said. "All over the place were thousands and thousands of dogs. And when I say thousands, I mean thousands." The soldiers had picked them up as pets and wouldn't give them up till they had to.

Many hundreds of the dogs, "the smaller ones," were smuggled back to England by the troops. However, the British police killed the dogs when they reached port because of a six-month rabies quarantine law. "It was pretty tough on the lads," Bracy said.

"All the time that we were driving the trucks during the last days we lived off of cigarettes and champagne that we got from the deserted shops. The water was polluted by refugees and besides you couldn't walk past a 2-mile line of refugee children all calling 'manger' without giving them what food you had," he continued

LIEUT. SYDNEY BRACY

Nazis Dropped Pamphlets

"One day the Germans dropped pamphlets saying we were surrounded and should surrender," the lieutenant smiled, "but no one paid any attention to that." He said the troops thought they were being shipped farther south down the coast of France.

On the last day of the battle of Dunkerque Bracy, dressed in a steel helmet, pants, shirt and socks, swam a mile out into the Channel to be picked up by a destroyer. "My mouth tasted horrible and my head was numb. We had been under continuous bombing for the past nine days and only had about 14 hours of sleep."

At Calais the Germans had turned the shore guns out to sea to blast the English ships. His boat had to make a roundabout, nine-hour trip, a distance usually covered in two and one-half hours.

Almost everyone was off the shore, he said, except many wounded who couldn't be moved, some French and Belgian soldiers and men to care for the wounded.

Bracy was born in England, the son of an English mother and an American father. When 21 years of age he chose to become an American citizen and came to live in Hollywood.

During the fall of 1938 he was in London working on a picture and joined the British army as a truck driver in September, 1939.

Last November he went to duty in Iceland. He said there was a certain amount of hostility on the part of the people of Iceland when the British troops first arrived but they soon got over it.

Bracy arrived here from Los Angeles last Saturday.

Just 5 Minutes Taken to Convict Draft Evader

Joseph Nipper, 42-year-old Negro window washer for the Department of Agriculture, was convicted in less than five minutes by a jury in District Court yesterday for failing to register for Selective Service February 16. His defense was that he was a Moslem and opposed to the war.

Judge T. Alan Glodsborough, in charging the jury, declared that he could not understand why a man born and working in this country did not want to protect it.

Nipper, who lives at 765 Morton Street Northwest, declared in a statement presented before the jury that: "I am opposed to fighting in this war on the side of the United States since this as a war between Christianity and Islam.

"Christianity is the side of the white people and Islam is that of the Asiatics and I do not wish to fight against Moslems."

Burmese Oil Fields Ruined In Huge Bonfire, Yank Says

By the United Press

Somewhere in Burma, April 15 (Delayed)—The British Empire's rich oil fields at Yenangyaung were destroyed in a mammoth bonfire that left only acres of black ground, ashes of buildings and twisted, toppling wrecks that once were derricks.

The firing of the Yenangyaung fields apparently was the most thorough demolition job yet carried out by the British in their long retreat through Malaya to Singapore and from lower Burma, past Rangoon and up the Irrawaddy Valley.

Dwight Thompson, Cambridge, Ohio, member of an American technical group, returned to this base haggard and covered with soot from his job of helping workers blast the wells that had supplied Britain in the Far East for more than 50 years.

"The hills around Yenangyaung for miles around were covered with a black ceiling of billowing smoke," Thompson said "Crude oil was turned out of the tanks into dikes around the ships and warehouses.

"When we lit the dikes, everything went. The machinery and derricks folded before our very eyes. Every building in the deserted town caught fire and it will be a week before the place is cool enough for the Japs to get in."

(The British put the torch to the Yenangyaung fields while the Japanese still were at Magwe, 32 miles to the south, and estimated the invaders could not possibly restore them before six months.)

Thompson said that 200 oil company employes, three of them Americans, finished the demolition by splitting open gasoline and lubricant storage tanks and were to leave today for India over rough mountain trails in northwestern Burma.

Thompson helped salvage eight truckloads of valuable oil field equipment from Yenangyaung. With Chinese drivers, the truck sped through the night toward Mandalay and the Burma Road, barely missing a strafing by Japanese planes which roared over them in the dawn.

Sailors Avenge Ship's Loss by Blasting U-Boat

By the Associated Press

New York, April 29.—Five young American seamen have discussed with Navy sanction that they avenged the loss of their medium-sized U. S. merchant vessel three days later by scoring a probable hit—possibly a fatal one—on an Axis submarine with the deck gun of their rescuer, a United Nations ship.

The American ship, whose torpedoing was announced today, was sunk April 21 off the Atlantic Coast. Twenty-three members of the crew, including the captain, were rescued the following day but 24 others in two lifeboat were still missing.

The action was described by Ensign Frank M. Keathley, 22, of Corsicana, Tex., who was interviewed at Third Naval District Headquarters. He said it was the first battle for all the gun crew members, whose ages ranged from 17 to 22 and most of whom had never been to sea before.

Submarine Sighted

The rescue ship was warned of a submarine nearby April 24, Keathley said, and since its crew had little training in gunnery the captain asked the ensign to man the gun.

"Four of my men and I went astern and got the gun ready," he said. "At 8:10 a. m. a lookout reported seeing the submarine on the starboard side, but he made a mistake in direction and suddenly the conning tower of the sub appeared a few yards away on the port side.

"The submarine had to crash dive to avoid ramming us. We next saw her 200 yards off on the port side but she submerged before we could fire. A few minutes later, or about 40 minutes after she was first sighted, her periscope appeared again and we opened fire.

"Our first shot was long. Our second appeared a direct hit and a column of black smoke 50 feet high arose after the explosion. We sent a third shot at the same spot but the submarine was not seen after our second shell. We think that quite probably the submarine was damaged and may have been sunk."

Ship's Crew Cheers

The ship's crew cheered wildly when they saw the effect of the shell, Keathley said.

Frank E. Davis, 23, fourth engineer of Rocky Mount, N. C., who told of the torpedoing of the United States merchant ship, said it went down about five minutes after the crew launched the lifeboats and the submarine, "undoubtedly German," then surfaced.

Eight men who appeared on the submarine deck were young, bearded and grimy and wore what appeared to be slacks and polo shirts. The submarine crewmen asked if anyone was hurt and if all got off the ship. The captain was questioned for ten minutes, Davis said.

Announcement

As a contribution to the war effort the Washington Newspapers will, effective next Sunday, suspend the making of special deliveries to subscribers who fail to receive their papers from the regular carrier.

This curtailment in service will undoubtedly affect some subscribers occasionally. This step, however, is necessary in order to conserve rubber and vital transportation facilities.

The Washington Newspapers request subscribers to continue to advise their Circulation Departments regarding thefts, non-deliveries, or any other service difficulties, in order that remedial measures may be taken to assure regular delivery so far as possible.

As their contribution, carriers have pledged an "all-out" effort in order to maintain, as far as possible, their standards of prompt and regular service.

Business Urged To Keep 'Brand' Names Alive

Continued advertising to keep brand names alive in the public mind was advocated in the current issue of Domestic Commerce, weekly publication of the Commerce Department.

With the advent of war, wrote Nathan D. Golden, one of the Department's industrial consultants, the function of advertising becomes increasingly important and one of its major jobs is "providing information to those fighting to increase output of fighting tools and promote more efficient use of products by civilians."

"With the possible introduction of the "Victory" label for canned and packaged goods," said Golden, "the question arises, what will happen to brand names of merchandise for which producers have spent millions of dollars in advertising to make consumers 'brand conscious'? . . .

"Manufacturers in Great Britain have met this problem in safeguarding their investment in brand names by continued advertising. Brand names can and should be kept alive in the minds of those to whom the manufacturer must look for business in the postwar period."

Six Words Cost Mrs. Dilling $50

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—A six-word speech cost Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling a $50 fine for contempt of court today.

The author of "The Red Network" and foe of communism was testifying in Superior Court anent one of the collateral issues in the complicated divorce suits she and her husband have filed against each other.

"Would you ever act as an agent for Hitler?" asked Theodore Miller, her attorney.

"I recommend Weinshenk for that position," she replied with some feeling.

Judge Rudolph Desort immediately held her in contempt and fined the financial penalty. Weinshenk formerly was her husband's attorney.

Joseph W. Stilwell, Lieutenant General, U. S. Army, is as American as Abe Martin.

He grew up in Talatke, Fla., went to West Point, entered the Army as a second lieutenant in 1904.

Today, a lieutenant general, he is in command of troops in Burma, on the most vital fighting front in the Far East. The troops are not American troops. They are Chinese.

General Stilwell has this command because your Government and the government of China both realize that China and the United States are fighting in a common cause against a common enemy. He stands as a living symbol of the fact that China needs our help . . . and we need China's help.

For, without China in the war, an additional two million Japanese fighters, with their planes and tanks and guns, would be turned against us. And the war would be lengthened by years . . . or lost.

No one in his right mind can doubt for a minute the importance of keeping the Chinese as our allies . . . keeping them staunch in their faith that we are their brothers, their friends, in the cause of Democracy.

But we can't do that simply with our soldiers, or by Lease-Lend aid for arms, ammunition and war supplies. China needs our help to get supplies and services which Lease-Lend does not provide.

China needs many of the bare essentials to care for her wounded and sick. Anesthetics, surgical instruments, ambulances, bandages, medical supplies.

China needs money to build more of the vest pocket factories that are helping her wage so valiant a fight . . . money to care for millions of homeless people . . . millions of orphans. China needs funds to keep schools running to train new leaders to help win the war.

And these needs are great. So great that if they are not filled, the morale of the fighting men can be weakened. The temptation can be increased to give ear to fifth columnists and appeasers, to those who would have China lay down her arms.

These people are trying to convince the Chinese that Americans are not really their friends and that we're not willing to share the wealth of things we have that China needs.

We must give that statement the lie . . . by giving generously of our money for China's desperate wants.

And our gift should be—not just impersonal government money for arms—but money and supplies from the people of America to the people of China.

Today's War Mother Is Much Too Busy to Be the Tearful, Helpless Type

Mrs. Brooke Has Two Sons On Active Duty

No. 1 in a Series.

The sentimental ballad pictured Mother as a white-haired angel, with a melted butter expression whose appeal lay chiefly in her beatific helplessness.

Matriarchal fashions and habits have changed radically since that song was written. Pearl Harbor brought the climax. Today the popular conception of a mother is a brisk, socially conscious woman who is too busy with her Red Cross, home defense and volunteer service to have time for anxiety over the sons who are uniform.

Maybe she would have been a poor subject for Whistler, but her type is more practical in these times, when there is some sort of war work for every willing hand. Sentimentality and the Axis, who are the co-losers, may well resent American Mother, 1942 style.

As an example, there is Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke. Her two sons, naval reserve officers, are on active duty, but she probably is doing as much toward victory in her own way as they are in theirs.

Best known as a national leader in the Girl Scouts for many years, Mrs. Brooke was chairman of arrangements for the pageant held in Constitution Hall a few weeks ago to stimulate the sale of war savings stamps. Its success was such that 1285 Girl Scout councils throughout the country have written for the Treasury-prepared script with the intention of staging their own pageants.

MRS. F. H. BROOKE

Soliciting support for United China Relief, she is putting in many hours weekly as cochairman of the special contributions committee. Mindful of the special and important role that hospitals and their medical staffs assume in time of war, she is not neglecting her duties as a director of Children's Hospital. She is a former president of the institution's ladies' board.

Last summer Mrs. Brooke broke her hip in a fall at her Buzzards Bay place. Her recovery is just about complete now. The convalescence would have been longer if the victim had not been the fighter she is. Her sons are Lieut. F. H. Brooke, jr., serving in the Bureau of Navigation, who expects to go to sea soon, and Lieut. E. Bates McKee, who is attached to Third Naval District headquarters in New York City.

Oh yes, there are four grandsons who are being prepped for Annapolis.

Minneapolis, Des Moines, Dallas, Houston and San Francisco.

Bob Hope will emcee tonight's show, some of whose skits will show:

James Cagney and Merle Oberon in a loving bit, telling each other between numerous embraces that "It's just in fun, dear."

Groucho Marx, carrying on something scandalous with filmdom's most beautiful mother, the perennially popular Joan Blondell.

Charles Boyer, in a schoolmarm piece with the starlets and lovely Claudette Colbert, and Olivia de Haviland and the two Joans, Bennett and Blondell, in a nostalgic shuffle-off-to-Buffalo skit that has to do with first aid, or something.

These little bits were but a few glimpsed by reporters who watched the rehearsals for free. Tonight's audience will pay up to $20 for the privilege of seeing the finished product.

And if you want to see the show, and haven't bought your ticket, that's just what you'll pay for a ducat—$20. These were the only tickets left late last night, "and there's only a few of them," the Capitol boxoffice said.

Rented Homes Must Be Listed With OPA

Registration of all rented dwellings will be required in cities and towns brought under Federal rent control, Price Administrator Henderson announced yesterday.

The registration, which does not affect hotels and rooming houses, must be carried out by landlords at a local rent administrator's office and will cover houses, apartments, trailers and all other property which is rented for living quarters. Regulations covering hotels, rooming and boarding houses, and requiring a similar registration will be issued soon by OPA.

The OPA on Tuesday ordered rents in all Maryland and Virginia suburbs of the Capital reduced, within 60 days, to the levels in effect on January 1, 1941.

In addition to requiring a landlord registration, yesterday's regulations cover such matters as leases, evictions, services, new construction, substantial alterations, off-season rentals, and special relationships between tenant and landlord.

The regulations specify that landlords may not decrease services given tenants before the freezing order date.

Landlords may file petitions for rent increases only on the grounds that there has been a capital improvement in the property or a great increase in services.

The regulations give the administrator authority to set varying maximum rents for different periods of the year.

Establishment of a retail trade and services division within the Office of Price Administration also was announced yesterday.

Henderson named Merle Fainsod as chief of the new division and appointed Hector Lazo as head of the trade relations branch.

The new division will work with local boards in administering the details of the price control program. The trade relations branch will be responsible, among other things, for instructing the Nation's retailers in the specific requirements and procedures of the program and will confer and consult with retailers and representatives of retail trade associations.

Fainsod has been with OPA since July, 1941. He is on leave of absence from Harvard University where he is assistant professor of government. Lazo is on leave of absence from his position as president of the Cooperate Food Distributors of America, Washington.

Treasury Will Not Junk Silver Purchase Acts

By the Associated Press

Western Senators were assured yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau that the Treasury did not plan to seek repeal of the Silver Purchase Act.

Moreover, Morgenthau told the informal meeting that he knew of no move in Congress for repeal.

Senator Milikin (Republican of Colorado said after the session, at which eight States were represented, that the announcement came as a distinct relief to Western Senators opposed to repeal.

While Morgenthau reaffirmed his stand against the silver purchase legislation, the Coloradoan said, he gave assurance that no steps to repeal it were contemplated by the Treasury.

To a question by Millikin as to whether the Treasury planned to sell silver instead of leasing it under a recently announced program of making the metal available for use in war plants, the Senator said Morgenthau gave a flat negative, explaining that the law permitted leasing only, with minor exceptions.

The meeting, called by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada was an outgrowth of a recent gathering of Silver State Senators opposed to silver purchase laws repeal.

At that session, Millikin said, it was decided to call the Treasury Secretary before making definite opposition plans, to ascertain just how far opponents of the acts had gone and whether they intended to introduce legislation seeking repeal.

The Senator observed that in light of yesterday's statement by Morgenthau, further action now appeared unnecessary.

Yesterday's meeting was attended by Senators McCarran, Millikin, Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, and Murray (Democrat) of Montana; Clark (Democrat), of Idaho; Thomas, (Republican), of Utah; Downey (Democrat), of California; Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Shipstead (Republican), of Minnesota.

U. S. Suffered As Cartels Helped Nazis

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

The Nazi government of Adolf Hitler ruled important segments of America's prewar economy to the gain of Germany's rearmament program and to the disadvantage of United States production of materials now essential in American war production, the Senate Patents Committee was told yesterday.

Heinrich Kronstein, formerly a cartel lawyer in Germany and now a special Assistant Attorney General in the alien property division of the Justice Department, declared that the Nazis took over the German cartel system and through this system and its alliances with big American industries exercised certain industrial controls in this country for the benefit of German war aims.

"American corporations were the puppets of the German government," asserted Chairman Boyne (Democrat) of Washington, whose committee for two weeks has received evidence from Justice Department files of the restrictive effect on American production of patent pooling agreements between United States industries and German cartels.

Vital Materials Restricted

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, the department's "trust buster," and his assistants charged before the committee that these agreements for division of world trade restricted production of such important materials as magnesium, used in the production of dive bombers; plastic glass, used in the nose and gun compartments of combat aircraft; tungsten carbide, a highly efficient steel-cutting material necessary for speedy manufacture of tanks and other weapons; tetracene, an improved primer for ammunition, and synthetic rubber, vital substitute for natural rubber supplies cut off from America by Japanese conquests in the southwest Pacific.

Through extension of monetary policies from controls intended to protect Germany's tottering monetary system to direction of German purchases of foreign property, the Third Reich gained absolute domination of all German-owned or controlled property in foreign countries, including patents, Kronstein stated.

Involved Mutual Control

Members of the committe recalled that the German-American agreements involved the pooling and mutual control of American as well as erman Gpatents.

With the entire German economy, after the rise of Hitler, dedicated to the single aim of rearmament, Germany's restrictive financial laws and decrees operated to penalize American patent owners, Kronstein said.

"Because no assignment of a right located in Germany is recognized in Germany unless approved by the German authorities, the American owner of a German patent can sell or license his patent only after obtaining permission from the German currency authorities," the witness stated. "Such permission is granted only if it is considered to be of advantage to the German Reich."

Senator Bone declared that he was unable, from Kronstein's testimony, to "escape the conclusion" that restrictions on American production "came from the German government."

Church Leaders Back Plan For Marriage Counsel Unit

By Robert Tate Allan

The Post Church Editor

Recommendations for creating a marriage counseling bureau for growing numbers of war workers yesterday drew favorable comment from ministers, and Government personnel executives.

Miss Frances Humphrey, employe service adviser for the OCD and former assistant director of the Federation of Churches' social welfare department, urged such a counseling agency at Tuesday's joint meeting of the Family Welfare and Child Welfare Committee of the Council of Social Agencies. It was a part of her eight-point proposal covering new Federal workers' needs here.

Such a bureau should supplement, and not supplant, the marriage counseling work of individual ministers, according to the Rev. Dr. Warren D. Bowman. It should be spiritually centered, having clergymen well qualified in the field of religion and marriage as one of its consultants, he added. He is pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren and chairman of the Federation of Churches' committee on marriage and the home.

Important Decision

Mrs. Mary McFarland, employe service director of OEM, in expressing her opinion, said she felt such a bureau should function under and be financed by the Council of Social Agencies. Better prepared marriages mean less problems for that council in the long run, she added. Federal personnel bureaus would be eager to cooperate in referring employes to marriage counseling bureaus, she added.

"No more important decisions is ever made than the one of marriage," commented Grover L. Hartman, director of the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, "and all the advice and counsel which can help young people to decide wisely and to play efficiently are certainly desired and need to be encouraged."

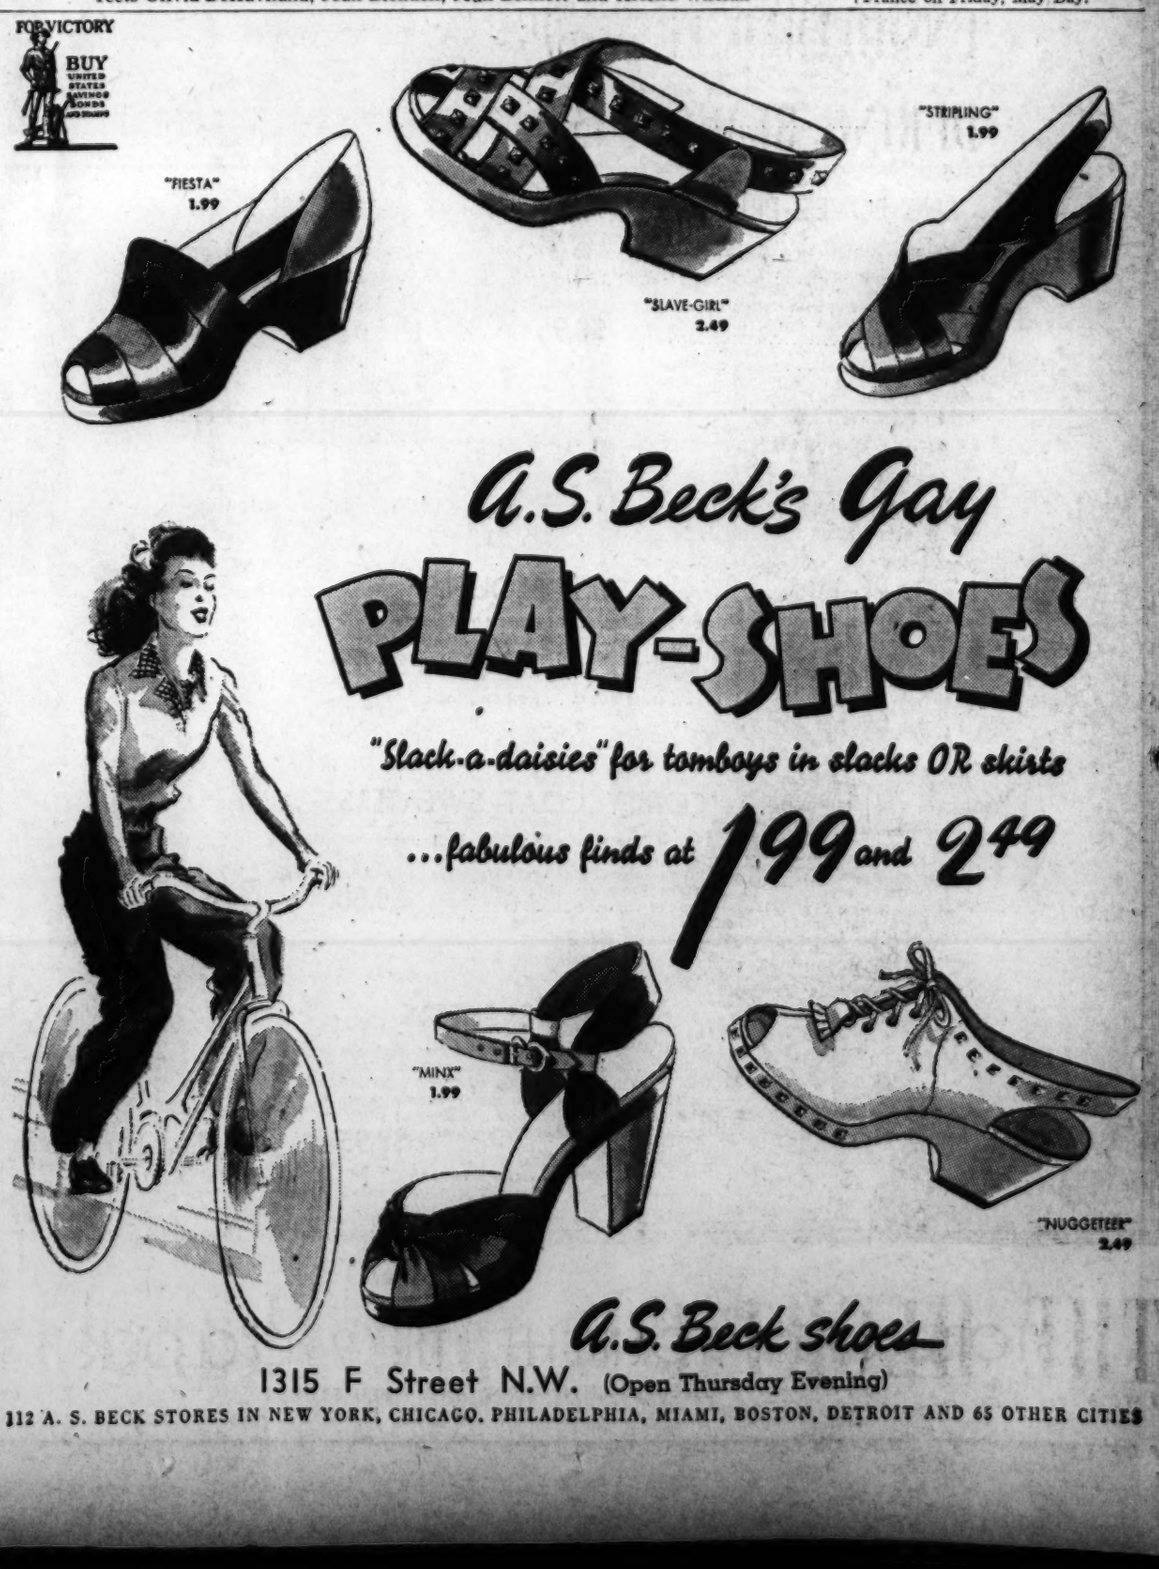
Hartman is president of the Foundry Forge of Foundry Methodist Church, which has a class on love and marriage at its Sunday evening sessions on Christian citizenship.

Meanwhile, it was learned that a marriage counseling bureau has been set up at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, under the guidance of Mrs. Virginia B. Sholar, recreational secretary. A university-level course on preparation for marriage is being offered, one of the consultants being a woman with a master's degree in psychology from Columbia University.

About 40 Enrolled

According to Mrs. Sholar, about 20 girls and 18 boys from 20 to 30 years old—all selected for their serious approach to the subject of marriage—have enrolled in the course, which began three weeks ago.

Coincidental with the interest in launching a marriage counseling bureau is the fact that Christian Family Week observance will begin in local and nearby Protestant churches this Sunday as a feature of the United Christian Education Advance now being held in major cities. A dinner and mass meeting will be held May 6 at 6:30 p. m. at Albright Memorial Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest, sponsored by the Federation of Churches' committee on marriage and the home.



Friede Assails Landis' Criticism of Defense Communications Setup

Chaos Seen In Suggestions Of OCD Chief

Lashing back at critics of the District defense communications system, Communication Chief Herbert A. Friede yesterday reported that the decentralization suggested by James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense would result in "chaos and confusion."

In a 5-page answer to the citation of weaknesses in the communications system made by Landis on April 26, Friedea pictured most points of Landis' report as being an impractical attempt to fit all of the problems of all cities into the pattern of a single pamphlet.

Friede denied that the control center had failed during the last blackout, and quoted Landis as praising the process of spreading the alert. Although the charge that the communications system was the major weakness revealed in the blackout was made by other civilian defense officials, Friede stated that he had received no official notification of the local defense office's dissatisfaction.

Landis' objection that the two control centers here are not coordinated and should be supplanted by a number of subcenters under the direction of the main one was answered by Friede who said that the control center in the Municipal Center was not running simultaneously with the MacMillan Park one, but was simply stand-by service in case the main one failed.

He claimed that the decentralization of the control system had "no advantage" and was not favored by municipal signal engineers. "If this were practicable," Friede wrote, "such a scheme would have been adopted by our American municipalities in the dispatching of emergency equipment."

The appointment of a "Controller," whom Landis would put over the entire communications service was attacked by Friede on the grounds that it was up to the chiefs of service to assume the responsibility for their units. He pointed out that no executive could, in the case of a bomb hit at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue, know what size gas main, power line, telephone wire or water main had been damaged. These are the domain of the various utilities, and no controller could determine all of these question, no matter how many control centers there were, he asserted.

To Landis' complaint that no written plan for the communications system had been drawn up, Friede reported that such a plan had been submitted to Civilian Defense Executive Director Bolles on March 25, but has never been acknowledged.

The switchboard jamming in the control center the night of the last blackout was ascribed by Friede partly to the presence of "far too many spectators," and partly to the lack of instructions given wardens. He reported that there are 12 telephonists at the control center, instead of two as Landis had said.

He pointed out that lines were provided to the Virginia and Maryland suburbs included in the Washington civilian defense picture, to all military posts, the White House, the Capitol and to the chief signal officer. He said that the switchboards, which Landis had thought unnecessary were recommended by both Friede and the telephone company engineers.

He added that the control center can only receive and transmit a limited number of calls, the police and fire departments being counted upon to relay many of the messages, as they do in emergencies today.

Friede praised the work of the control center personnel, who, he said, handled 700 to 800 calls in an hour during the heavy snow of March 28.

"Since the communications system affects all branches of the municipal government, especially the emergency departments such as fire, police, sewer, water and highways, it must now be decided if the existing operating methods of these departments shall be changed to meet an entirely new, untried scheme or that it may be more effective and efficient to train the newly formed emergency agencies to adapt themselves to a tried and proven plan which has been in existence in our American cities for many years," Friede wrote.

He recommended that definite instructions be given each of the services as to just how and when they will be mobilized, and reminded Landis that even in the OCD pamphlet there is no plan for communications devised for many services, such as feeding and housing.

British Leave, U. S. Troops Now in Full Control of Iceland

By Phil Ault
United Press Staff Writer

United States Army Headquarters, Iceland, April 29 (U.P.).—The Americans are in full control of Iceland and the few British troops remaining jokingly are called "Free British," it can be revealed now.

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel, former head of the United States forces, now commands this base, replacing British Maj. Gen. H. O. Curtis, who was presented with the United States Distinguished Service Medal before he left.

(The transfer of commands was announced in Washington Monday.)

Curtis became commanding officer of this base in midsummer, 1940, when the comparative handful of British troops who started arriving on May 10, built wooden guns and lines of unoccupied Nissen huts to give German scouting planes the impression that it was a strong base, not to be attacked except by a large force.

The first Americans arrived July 7, 1941, and have been replacing the British gradually for the past few months.

Bonesteel, at a farewell dinner given Curtis and his staff by American headquarters, read the citation for the award—which was given at the direction of President Roosevelt.

The medal, according to the citation, was given for exceptionally meritorious service to the Government and Army of the United States and for unfailing cooperation and limitless assistance during a difficult and complicated relief.

Curtis praised the cooperative attitude of the Americans, and hoped that he would meet them again—"side by side in offensive action."

The largest American relief came recently when thousands of doughboys marched ashore from transports which later took the British home. American marines sailed for the United States several weeks before that transfer.

One British soldier said on leaving: "Our boys are happy as hell—the Americans can have Iceland."

There was considerable good-natured joshing as the Americans dumped their barracks bags in their camps and inspected the Nissen huts recently occupied by the British. The British tommies and doughboys tossed their luggage back and forth at each other with the Americans asking their Allies: "Why didn't you guys leave this place clean?" And the British replying: "You're welcome to it, lads, we've had it long enough."

When Curtis boarded his ship for home, an honor guard of American and British troops, and members of the R. A. F. and Royal Navy was drawn up in a square and they were reviewed in a bitter Arctic wind.

Curtis shook hands with the American staff and the Diplomatic Corps and stood at the rail of his ship as he pulled away while an American band played "Auld Lang Syne."

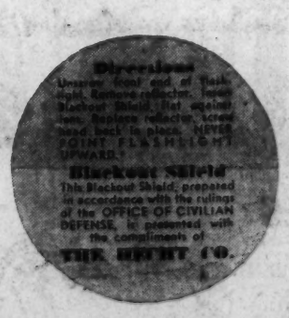
O.C.D. CAUTIONS AGAINST THE USE OF UNSHIELDED FLASHLIGHTS DURING BLACKOUTS

In an actual blackout, the flares of flashlights would be far too brilliant for practical use. To this end, the Office of Civilian Defense suggests the use of a shield, until further instructions are issued. They also advise you to always hold your flashlight so that the light will reflect downward . . . and never flash it on a reflecting surface.

THE HECHT CO. IS NOW READY TO SUPPLY YOU WITH PAPER FLASHLIGHT DIMMERS WITH OUR COMPLIMENTS

These discs are made of the required thickness of paper, colored red, to more adequately diffuse the light. Cut to the right size to fit most flashlights. When properly inserted there will be no light escaping around the edges and your flashlight will give off a soft, red glow of light sufficient for you to find your way around in the dark, but not sufficient to give aid to any enemy planes. Even with this dimmer in place, never point it upward.

(Reviewed and Passed by the Office of Civilian Defense)



Directions
Unscrew front end of flashlight. Remove reflector. Insert Blackout Shield flat against lens. Replace reflector screw head back in place. NEVER POINT FLASHLIGHT UPWARD!
Blackout Shield
This Blackout Shield, prepared in accordance with the rulings of the OFFICE OF CIVILIAN DEFENSE, is presented with the compliments of
THE HECHT CO.

Simply unscrew the front end of your flashlight, remove the reflector and insert the disc flat against the lens. Then replace reflector and screw the front back on again.

Ask for these discs wherever flashlights are sold in the store . . . Stationery and Sports Shop, Main Floor — Scout Shop, Second Floor — Housefurnishings, Seventh Floor.

Hollywood's Invasion of the Willard Hotel Established a Bridgehead From Which Conquest Will Be Made Complete Tonight at the Capitol

THEY CAME, THEY SAW AND THEY CONQUERED their scripts under circumstances of utmost confusion and difficulty yesterday afternoon. At any rate, even if the conquest part was not made complete, it advanced appreciably toward the goal of perfection sought for the first performance on their transcontinental junket, in Loew's Capitol Theater tonight at 8:30—and that despite the presence of all us yokels jamming up along the sidelines and gratuitously supplying a superabundance of impediments to orderly concentration on zippy lines and amusing stage "business."

JOAN BLONDELL

I mean to say that yesterday afternoon the Hollywood Victory Caravan, the most luminous constellation of stars ever assembled under one roof, took over both ballrooms in the Willard Hotel to whip tonight's Army-Navy Benefit, at Loew's Capitol Theater, into something a step nearer final form. The "form" was a bit difficult to detect, but it was there for the schooled eye to discover, scattered as it was in a hundred different spots.

In the small ballroom, the 30-piece orchestra was going through its musical paces—and right handsomely, too, for a first time out—under the baton of Alfred Newman, one of Hollywood's foremost conductors.

Except for the milling about of the bewildered laymen of the social stratum, the Army, Navy, press and innocent bystanders without portfolio, the large ballroom looked as little like a theater as barren ballrooms usually look. Yet, there was "show business" in action all over the place—quietly, unobtrusively and as efficiently as conditions would permit.

In that group over there, are James Cagney, Merle Oberon, Alexander Korda and "supporting cast" getting up in the lines of one of the sketches in which they will be seen for the first time tonight. Across the room, with Alan Scott holding the book, Olivia de Havilland, Joan Blondell, Joan Bennett and Arleen Whelan are going through both lines and action of what should prove an hilarious travesty on a first experiment in first aid—by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, I think they said.

Back yonder? Oh, those fellows are Frank McHugh and Groucho Marx, with nobody recognizing the Marx because he has neglected to put on that grease-paint mustache.

And there are a couple of smart operators, too. Coming out of that little side room, up there at the far end, are Claudette Colbert and Charles Boyer, who evidently have been shrewd enough to grab themselves a small hunk of quiet in which to run through their scripts.

Hiding behind that big screen, in a purely stag huddle, you'll discover Mark Sandrich, director of the whole gargantuan undertaking, in conference with Gene Ford and Harry Krivit, of the Capitol, threshing out scene plots, lighting and all the other minutiae of a giant production which must do in 36 hours what most big musicals accomplish in 36 days.

And that's the way it was going all over the hall, up to the time our astigmatic eyes got themselves permanently crossed trying to keep track of it all.

All of these illustrious people, so busily engaged in a great cause, are virtually dead on their feet. Or were late yesterday afternoon. Two days of intensive rehearsing on the West Coast, three days of it on the train and then yesterday's hectic business, had them physically fagged, but spiritually inspired. Nothing the matter with any of them that a couple hours sleep wouldn't remedy. But when? After the Willard goings-on, there would be a little time out, but beginning last midnight and continuing until 8 this morning, the rehearsal moved onto the Capitol stage and really began to make time. When the curtain goes up tonight at 8:30, those lucky enough to hold seats will see what everybody concerned enthusiastically believes will be the greatest show of its kind ever put together. We have practically taken the words right out of Groucho Marx's mouth. He has confided to intimates that this Victory Caravan Revue is the best one he's ever been in. That makes it pretty good.

Hello, How Are You, Goodby!

There are a lot of old friends scattered about in this star-spangled troupe. When we asked Joan Blondell how long it had been since her last visit here, when she played the Earle, she had to think a minute. "Let me see," she let-me-see'd, "that was three babies ago. Must have been about 1933!"

Olivia de Havilland, whom we once were prevented from escorting through one of those kaleidoscopic President's Birthday Ball nights, graciously wanted to know how we'd come out with the recurrent attack of the bubonic plague that had laid us low. It really was the leprosy, but that is all that could have stopped us.

Jimmy Cagney, just down from his New England farm, was glad, finally, to be making good the inscription he placed on an autographed photo for us back in 1931—"Not Bill Robinson, just another hoofer!" You'll see him dancing in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," picturized, by an odd coincidence, just to the north.

Alexander Korda, newly landed in New York last Friday and constantly listening for "his master's voice"—that would be Merle Oberon's—feels the spirit of victory in the minds and hearts of the English-speaking world on both sides of the Atlantic and glories in the new signs of the times.

And so, far into the deadline!

You-Might-As-Well-Save-Your-Time Note

No, I can't do anything about getting you a ticket for tonight. You should have thought of that sooner and lined up at the box office!

Posed on Horse

Joel McCrea posed on a rearing horse for photographs which were guides in the making of the huge staute of him used in "The Great Man's Lady," in which he teams with Barbara Stanwyck.

No, Not the Victory Caravan

JEAN CAGNEY, JAMES CAGNEY, JOAN LESLIE in a red, white and blue episode from the Warner Brothers production of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the celluloid biography of George M. Cohan, in which Cagney plays the title role. In spirit, if not actuality, it might almost be a scene from the Hollywood Victory Caravan's' benefit for Army-Navy Relief, at Loew's Capitol Theater tonight, since Jimmy Cagney is one of the trainload of stars in that one, too

HEDDA HOPPER

Always Belittlin' Is Too Often!

Hollywood, Calif., April 29. It's a funny thing how unwilling people are to concede success to anyone who breaks away from the industry. When Adrian left Metro to go into dress designing on his own, such head-shakings and viewings-with-alarm and tut-tutting as went on—despite the fact that for some years past, he's been one of the best-known, most-talked-of and most-frequently-copied designers in or out of pictures. The sensational success of his initial collection, both here and in the East, does nothing to discourage these snipers who, at every miss, raise their sights, shut both eyes, and blaze away again.

SONJA HENIE

For the benefit of the public, who like a little truth mixed in with their fiction, the results of Adrian's venture have outstripped his wildest dreams. He is not returning to Metro—he's remaining in his own business, where he's solvent, successful, satisfied and doing very nicely, thank you!

ᔓᔕ

Hear tell that if Dan Topping goes into the Navy, Sonja Henie will take over the management of the sports interests. Well, if she handles them as she did her ice show, they all ought to be able to retire after one season.

ᔓᔕ

Andre Charlot, famous producer-director of the Charlot Revues, after 40 years of bossing the other guy, has just completed a small part in "The Constant Nymph" and enjoyed it thoroughly. Charlot, who's been living in retirement here for several years, was persuaded to don make-up by Director Edmund Goulding, who 20 years ago, as a young actor in London, played for a season in one of Charlot's revues.

ᔓᔕ

When Tim Holt completed his added scenes in "The Magnificent Ambersons" and made ready to depart for the Air Corps, Dolores Costello, who plays his mother in that picture, handed him a leather correspondence kit. With it was a card reading: "Good luck, son. We Ambersons know you'll be magnificent."

Incidentally, Tim had to work right up to the last minute—and we're wondering what the boys will say when he arrives at camp wearing that 1890 haircut he had to have for the picture!

Not only gentlemen, but Hollywood producers, seem to prefer blondes. Ann Miller tested for the title role of "My Sister Eileen" while a brunette, but boys over at Columbia said she looked too much like an average American girl. So she bleached for "Priorities of 1942," and officials, after a gander at it, are bringing her back for retakes on "Eileen" test.

By the way, Ann was offered the part opposite Ray Bolger in "Warrior's Husband," but turned it down for pictures. She wants to forget dancing and become a dramatic actress.

Kay Aldridge, formerly the Nation's leading cover girl, lost the lead role in a road company of "Claudia" because producer found out she was a former model and thought she'd be too statuesque. She encountered some trouble in pictures till she got a chance, along with 200 girls, for lead in Republic's new serial "Perils of Nyoka."

They wanted a rip-snorting, fist-swinging wench for that part, and after eliminating gals through various tests, took last five to the back lot, put them to climbing trees, wrestling, jumping fences. And 'twas then that Kay, who was raised on a Virginia farm, proved she had 'em all skinned by a country mile when it came to taking care of herself in a free-for-all.

New York, April 29.

A United Nations exhibit in Chicago will feature items of warfare never before shown in America. Among the exhibits will be the two-man Japanese submarine. And if the transfer can be arranged, the plane in which Rudolf Hess flew to Scotland also will be exhibited . . . Mayor LaGuardia is planning a Civilian Defense show for our city. He's conferring with Billy Rose, and has asked him to stage it.

Alexander Ince, the producer and publisher of Stage magazine, lectured recently at the Drama School at Yale. He told the students that the theater is a full-time profession to which the hopefuls must devote their fullest measure. "If you're to be an actor," Ince advised, "you should see all the New York shows, read every theater magazine, study everything written by the drama critics, attend all the drama lectures" . . . "But how can a young actor find time or money for that?" one student asked . . . "A judge once sentenced a 75-year-old criminal to serve a 20-year term, and the criminal protested that he was too old for that," Ince replied, "What the judge said is the same as my advice to you—Do as much of it as you can."

Leopold Stokowski is writing a book about music . . . Ania Dorfman, the pianist, will be Toscanini's soloist Friday afternoon—her second appearance with the maestro. Miss Dorfman is the only woman soloist ever to perform with him . . . Prince Bernhardt, husband of Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, confided the other day that the R. A. F. won't permit him to fly over Nazi territory—because the Nazis have publicly declared what they'd do to him, if captured . . . Bernhardt also revealed that he learned to speak Dutch in three weeks . . . Irene Lee, the Warner Brothers, story-editor, is coming East for her new boss, producer Sam Goldwyn.

George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart are writing the biographies of each other, to appear in the Random House publication of their collected plays . . . When Irving Berlin produced "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" at Camp Upton 25 years ago, he invited the famous Cantor Josef Rosenblatt to sing there. Berlin now is producing the new Upton show. Among the soldiers there is the cantor's son, Henry—who, as Paul Dennis, sang in Radio City Music Hall, for the Rudy Vallee programs and the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air . . . At the Iceland cafe, Joe Frisco announced that he and Jack Benny have one thing in common: "I play horses like Benny plays the violin."

This is the story circulated in Russia, before the yarn became dated by Britain's commando raids and the R. A. F.'s mass-attacks: Lord Halifax is alleged to have discovered an unusual congregation of men who, in their small house of worship, took turns in repeating a single prayer so that it was being delivered every minute of the day. Halifax visited the congregation and asked one of the men: "What do you pray for?" . . . "We're praying for the defeat of Hitler," the man informed . . . "Good," said Halifax, and left . . . The man reported this visit to the leader of the sect, who said: "You shouldn't have told him about our prayer. I don't want him to rely on us entirely."

W. Averell Harriman will return here shortly . . . George Grosz, the noted artist who was banished from Germany because of his anti-Fascist cartoons there, has completed a new series of paintings about the Hitler regime . . . Alexis Thompson, the sports promoter, has been unable to housebreak his dog. He offered the animal to John Ringling North, head of the Ringling Brothers circus. North refused it. "At the circus we can train tigers, lions, bears, and even have elephants do a ballet," he explained. "We can do all those things—but we can't train a dog to be housebroken" . . . Al Lackey, Sophie Tucker's former husband, joined a group in the discussion of the $25,000-a-year limitation on earnings. "I foresaw that three years ago," he stated, "That's why I went broke."

During the question-period which followed a lecture by Leon Henderson last week, a member of the audience raised his hand, and said: "May a rank amateur ask a question?" . . . "Go ahead, amateur," Henderson invited . . . "When the New Deal came in, at the same time that Hitler came to power," the amateur began, "the New Dealers explained that we couldn't match Hitler's unemployment-cure because the Nazis were putting men to work on a war-program. Now we too have a war-program, which almost has cured our unemployment—but now it's causing an inflation problem. Since Hitler never worried about inflation, how is it that . . ." . . . "Wait a minute," Henderson interrupted. "Don't go any further—or you'll lose your amateur standing."

'The Story of the Vatican' Opens at the Little Theater

By Richard L. Coe

Of universal interest, the "March of Time's" feature-length "The Story of the Vatican" finally has arrived at the Little, sharing the screen with a film of similarly universal if thoroughly different appeal, Walt Disney's rollicking "The Reluctant Dragon."

This is the Capital's first view of the Vatican film for which Catholic University's noted Monsignor Fulton Sheen does the accompanying commentary. It is the first complete motion picture to be made inside the tiny state that marks the temporal power of the great spiritual leader; as such it is a profoundly interesting document. Filmed under direct supervision of the Vatican itself, it boasts the authority and perception that could come only from such a source.

Editor Richard de Rochemont guides his camera through the art galleries of the Palace itself, down into the crypt of St. Peter's and the tombs of the Popes, up to the dome of the great church with its superb views of the tiny state's official buildings as well as Rome itself, into the press and radio headquarters in which all tongues of the earth are the rule rather than the exception, into that large postoffice from which flow papal stamps and coins into all corners of the world.

Pope's Visit Recalled

The film's sequences of His Holiness are of particular interest here, since they show him not only as the Pope, but also as Cardinal Pacelli when he visited Catholic University several years ago. The point is also made that both Pius XII and his predecessor have imbued the spirit of the Roman Catholic Church with the scientific advances of our time, recognizing and aligning the processes of religion and science.

The film was made since the beginning of the war, but prior to America's official entrance into it; this makes its relation with the Italian state all the more impressive. It is noted that working—and even more, living—in the papal state is an honor highly valued by the Italians who find its living conditions far superior to those in the Fascist state which hems it in on all sides. One pauses to wonder at the fate these days of Osservatore Romano, the outspoken Vatican newspaper which the power of the church has maintained in Italy over the force of the Fascists.

"The Dragon" Still Delights

There has been evident and natural effort to tread carefully in making this film. It lacks, as a result, the fluidity and living quality that would so well befit its subject. The musical background, too, with the exception of some Gregorian chanting and measures from Mozart and Hyden, is completely unworthy of its setting.

Having always considered "The Reluctant Dragon" and its adventures in the Disney studios one of that master's happiest inventions, the reviewer rejoices in its return. This Technicolor feature is the one which introduced "Baby Weems," the mighty brain; "Casey, Junior," the train with a soul, and Goofy's wondrous advice on "How to Ride a Horse." It's a honey of a comedy, even for Disney, and with Robert Benchley as its central human personality has an informality the films don't often achieve.

Contrasting as they are, these two film journeys into places most of us are not privileged to travel form a notable novelty for the jaded picture palate.

Mrs. Sazama Wins Tulip Sweepstakes

Capturing first and third awards for the "best flowers," Mrs. J. J. Sazama, 6324 Ninth Street Northwest, won the sweepstakes at the twenty-seventh annual tulip show of the Takoma Horticultural Club, which opened last night at the Takoma Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar Streets Northwest.

Two bright red "City of Harlem" tulips won the blue and white ribbons for Mrs. Sazama. A native of New York City, she began gardening when she came to Washington six years ago. It was the first time she had scored so highly in any of the club's shows. She also was credited with five blue ribbons, five reds and two whites. Many visitors were attracted to her display of a dozen pansies of different colors, each flower meauring about 3 inches in size, arranged in a low, white pottery bowl.

Miss Lois Wellington, a 17-year-old Calvin Coolidge High School student, of 218 Spruce Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., took a blue ribbon for her exhibit of a rose-colored "Venus" tulip adjudged the second best bloom. She also took three blue ribbons and five reds.

Second runner-up was Miss Isabell Smith, 612 Ogelthorpe Street Northwest, who won five blues and four red ribbons, scoring two first in the miniature arrangements.

Judges were Winn T. Simmons for specimens, Dr. Furman L. Mulford for hearty flowers and shrubs and Mrs. Mathilda Kolb Bartlett for arrangements. R. H. Fiedler was chairman. The show will be open to the public today from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m.

Nice Old Man After Information Just Marches, Marches

Rock Springs, Wyo., April 29 (AP).—An old man shuffled into a group of husky young men on courthouse square.

"Is this——" he began.

His question was cut short by a crisp:

"Fall in!"

There was a scrambling and the old man found himself lined up with the Rock Springs Auxiliary Police Force, starting civilian defense drill. For half an hour the auxiliaries—and the old man—marched and marched and marched. Came a rest period. The old man—his name undisclosed— limped up to H. E. Tannehill, civilian defense coordinator.

"I've got a bad leg," he apologized, "and I don't keep up very well."

"Then drop out," said Tannehill. "We don't want anyone to endure any hardship."

"Oh, I can do it," the old man protested"—only I get mighty tired."

More marching, marching, marching. The old man again approached Tannehill.

"How much longer have I got to do this before I get my sugar ration card?" he inquired timidly. Tannehill tactfully directed the old man to the line of commercial sugar users waiting on the other side of the courthouse to register for ration cards.

DEATH IN A LODGING HOUSE—David H. Edwards (left), 19-year-old West Roxbury, Mass., youth was questioned yesterday in the death from knife wounds of Catherine McCarthy (right), 28, in a Boston lodging house. Edwards was photographed at police headquarters

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 29.—Lying on the floor of her room, Catherine McCarthy, 28, was found dead in a lodging house today after a 19-year-old boy told police he stabbed her because she rejected him as a suitor, Police Lieut. Gustaf Hollstein reported.

Hollstein identified the youth as David H. Edwards of the West Roxbury section, and said he was being held.

The lieutenant quoted the boy as saying he and the woman quarreled when she pointed to the disparity of their ages

Police discovered her body after the youth was taken into custody by two policemen who found him alone in an automobile.

The policemen, John Gilmore and Fred Bemis, said that they found a hose extending from the exhaust pipe to the interior of the car, that the doors and windows were locked and that they broke in when the youth refused to come out. A knife with a 6-inch blade was found on him, Hollstein said.

Last Rites Set Tomorrow for Frank Reeside

Final rites will be held tomorrow for Frank Perry Reeside, 40, investment broker, who died Tuesday at Garfield Hospital following an operation.

Services will be held at 4 p. m. in Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, 1764 N Street Northwest, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Albert Joseph McCarthney. Private interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Reeside had been in the brokerage business for about 15 years with the firm of Merrill, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, and was at one time connected with the American Security & Trust Co. His father, Frank Patton Reeside, had been president of the Equitable Building Association.

Chairman of the golf committee of the Chevy Chase Club, where he made his home, Mr. Reeside held numerous golf trophies including the Horsterman, Liberty and Japanese Cups. He was also a member of the executive committee of the District Golf Association.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Henry D. M. Sherrerd of Haddonfield, N. J., and three brothers Alan E. Reeside of Washington; Arthur M. Reeside of Westgate, Md., and Robert Reeside, also of Washington.

Surgeon Sews Muscle to Brain

thesia of the scalp. The only shock to the patient is the sound of drills and saws going through the skull.

Dr. Kredel opens up the scalp and peels off the temporal muscle—the one which attaches to the lower jawbone and aids in chewing and talking—from the skull. He then makes four small holes in the skull just above the ear and with an electric saw cuts a small 'window" into the brain.

When the brain is exposed, he cleans out the area if necessary and then with a series of quick, fine stitches attaches the temporal muscle to the dura, or outer covering of the brain. A small portion of the skull is then sawed away to accommodate the lower part of the muscle, the skull cap is replaced and the scalp sewn back.

Grows to the Brain

The operation is done on the side opposite the one paralyzed because the brain works in reverse, the left portion controlling the right side of the body and the right portion controlling the left. The part of the brain operated on is known as the motor area, which controls the muscles of the body used in walking, talking and eating.

The temporal muscle, which is fed by a large artery, begins to grow to the brain within a few days and tiny blood vessels between the two begin to connect automatically. The result is that the motor area begins to revive and paralysis gradually disappears.

7 Army Fliers Die as Planes Collide in Air

Orlando, Fla., April 29 (AP).—Seven Army fliers were killed today when a bomber and a pursuit ship collided in midair about 9 miles west of here.

The dead were announced by Col. Thomas S. Voss, commandant of the Orlando Air Base, as:

Second Lieut. Joseph S. Smith, of Yoakum, Tex.

Second Lieut. Richard R. Carnevale, of Columbus, Ohio.

Pvt. M. C. Brown, of Detroit, Mich.

Pvt. L. A. Gerhart, of Wernersville, Pa.

Pvt. William E. Wimf, of Holland, Mich.

Second Lieut. Robert S. Boyce, of Chilicothe, Ohio, pilot of the pursuit ship.

The bomber, carrying the crew of six, was attached to MacDill Field, at Tampa, and the pursuit plane was from the Orlando Air Base.

Both ships burned following the collision, the wreckage of the bomber falling into an orange grove and the pursuit plane coming to earth 2 miles away.

Gen. T. Iglesias, Ex-War Minister Of Peru, Dies Here

Brig. Gen. Teofolio A. Iglesias, 54, former minister of war of Peru, died here last night after an extended illness.

General Iglesias was subdirector of the Peruvian War College before he came to the United States in October, 1940, in an attempt to recover his health. He had been a patient at Doctors Hospital here since last December 16.

He is survived by his wife and three children. They accompanied him to the United States.

A career soldier, General Iglesias was graduated from the Peruvian Military Academy in 1906. In addition to being minister of war, he had also held several high military positions, including chief of staff of the Peruvian army and chief of cadets at the Peruvian Military Academy.

Officials at the Peruvian Embassy said the general's body would be shipped to Lima for burial.

Boy, 16, Hunted in Bludgeoning Legless Man

A 16-year-old Washington boy, a fugitive from an Army guardhouse in Pennsylvania, was sought last night for the apparent bludgeoning of Lee Cornett, 39, of 233 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, who was near death at Casualty Hospital.

The suspect is believed to have fled in Cornett's automobile.

With his skull crushed by blows which appeared to have been inflicted with a machinist's hammer, Cornett, a legless cripple employed in the office of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, was found unconscious in his second-floor apartment.

Marshall Tyson, a janitor, said he entered the flat with his pass key a few minutes before noon.

"I was sweeping the floor in the corridor," he declared, "and I heard groaning in the apartment. When I opened the door and saw what was there, I ran and called police."

Youth Is Identified

Tyson later supplied police with information that brought about identification of the youth sought in the assault.

Cornett was found on the bathroom floor with his head supported by a pillow. He was fully clothed. Police believed he had been in a semiconscious condition for almost 8 hours.

A machinist's ball hammer was found outside the bathroom in an entrance hallway. A telephone nearby had been jerked from the wall and its bellbox smashed.

The Negro janitor told Detective Sergts. Charles Carver, E. E. Thompson and E. E. Scott of a woman friend of Cornett's and, with investigators, canvassed the neighborhood until he learned the identity of Mrs. Florence Simmons of 1356 South Carolina Avenue Southeast. She told police she had gone to Fort George Meade Tuesday night with Cornett to visit Arthur Kleisath, Cornett's former roommate, who was drafted into the Army last Monday.

Picked Up Youth

Returning, Mrs. Simmons said, Cornett picked up an Army sergeant and another young soldier at Laurel. The latter, she said, talked about himself, gave his name and said his home originally was Lexington, Ky.

It developed that Cornett, also a former resident of Lexington, was acquainted with the boy's family.

At Fifteenth and H Streets Northeast the sergeant asked to be let out and the three others then drove to her home, where she left Cornett and the boy, Mrs. Simmons said.

She was unable to supply any additional information but Cornett, who regained consciousness at Casualty Hospital, told police he and the youth drove to his apartment.

He was unable to tell the investigators just what happened and said he thought he had fallen and struck his head in the bathroom. He identified the youth sought as having been at his home.

A resident of the apartment, Harry Hardin, a Washington Post proofreader, said Cornett's automobile was parked behind the building when he came home about 2:30 a. m. It was not there when Cornett was found and police flashed a broadcast for it.

Military authorities supplied the information that the youth escaped from a guardhouse at Indiantown Gap, on April 20, and that he had been sought since that time. His age was learned after he had enlisted.

Late yesterday District police obtained a warrant from United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage for the boy's arrest.

In the meantime, doctors at Casualty Hospital said Cornett's condition was critical.

CIO Group Drops 'Labor-as-Usual' Idea for Duration

Declaring that "labor-as-usual belongs to the past," the national executive board of the United Federal Workers (C. I. O.) concluded its third semiannual meeting here yesterday by voting to adjust the union's entire program to the war and abandon "for the duration traditional attitude on wages and hours." The statement of policy will be sent to President Roosevelt, the board said.

The past position of the United Federal Workers on wages and overtime pay was expressed by two bills the union succeeded in having introduced in the House last fall.

"As representatives of a war union we will not try to use war conditions to bring about permanent changes in our industry. We are interested in only one fight—the fight against fascism. We will take up other issues when that fight has been won, and not divide our attention now."

We Speak For Them

In years past The Washington Post National Folk Festival has thrilled its audiences with proof that America, land of many peoples, has its own folkways, some indigenous to the New World and others adaptations from the Old. This year, against the somber background of war, the festival will also emphasize the gayety and zest as well as the sorrow and pathos in the folkways of our Allies. That is most appropriate. The great silence about which Stefan Zweig wrote so poignantly shortly before he died by his own hand has stifled for a while the expression at home of European folkways. Hitler's iron heel is trying to stamp it out. As John Steinbeck tells us in "The Moon Is Down," "you cannot crush a people's spirit with forbiddings," but you can curb it. Fortunately we can keep Europe's manifestations of folkways going till gentler times come back, and so the forbidden songs will be heard and the forbidden dances danced at the festival in Washington. It will be a great opportunity to refresh ourselves in our common brotherhood.

Rumors About Italy

The evidence by this time is overwhelming that the Italian people are sick of the war, hate their German rulers, and would like nothing better than to be rid of the mess they find themselves in. It does not necessarily follow from this, however, that there is the slightest substance in the rumors, emanating from Buenos Aires and elsewhere, that a shake-up in the Italian government is about to take place. The reports say that General Badoglio will replace Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel III will then sue for peace. The fact of the matter is that Italy today is just another conquered country incapable of exercising any freedom of choice. There are, it is estimated, between 15,000 and 20,000 Gestapo agents in the kingdom. They occupy key spots in all the government bureaus. They control all the telephone lines. It is they who give orders which the King no less than Mussolini must execute. Moreover, the illusion that the Italian monarch, a tragic weakling, is capable of serving as a standard against the Fascists has long since been exploded. It was he who, in violation of his royal oath, invited Mussolini to take over the government in 1922. He has supported him throughout even to the point of giving his approval to the cowardly attack on France in 1940. The revolt of Italy will come, but it will be part of the revolt of all occupied Europe.

Canadian Plebiscite

Last Monday Canadian voters went to the polls and by a vote of two to one released their government from its commitment not to conscript men for overseas military service. Thus the hands of Premier Mackenzie King and his colleagues have at last been freed of a self-imposed restriction that must have grown irksome during recent months and particularly since this country's entry into the war last December. In the original Selective Service Act passed by our Congress in 1940 there was a prohibition against the dispatch of selectees to areas outside this hemisphere. That provision was eliminated soon after Pearl Harbor, however. American selectees are now serving in Australia, Northern Ireland, Iceland and elsewhere abroad. In consequence, there has been a growing agitation in Canada that the dominion follow our example in this particular.

The vote to lift the restrictions imposed on the employment of drafted men does not necessarily mean that the ban will immediately be lifted. Although two out of every three Canadian voters have declared themselves in favor of such action, the voters in the province of Quebec rolled up a very large majority in opposition. This time, as in the last war, Quebec is opposed to the drafting of men for overseas service. In view of this opposition, the King government, recalling the violent form this opposition took in World War I, may decide to move slowly and warily.

This circumstance should not blind Americans to the fact that Canada's contribution of man power to the common effort being made by the United Nations is very considerable. Indeed, it is far in excess of ours, relatively. Nor has Quebec, in that particular, been behindhand in the war effort. The quota of volunteers from that province for foreign service has been filled. Still the inhabitants remain suspicious of and opposed to governmental coercion in any form. The vote on the plebiscite is further proof of that—even as it is proof of the intent of Canada as a whole to go all-out on the war effort.

Closing The Gap

Both the nature of the inflation in which this country is caught and the seven-point solution offered by the President have now had extended expositions. The dread evil of inflation has been put in classic terms by Mr. Henderson. There was in Mr. Roosevelt's description of his cure the simplicity of treatment and the appeal to the best and highest instincts of the American people which have distinguished all Mr. Roosevelt's war speeches. He talked to both our minds and our hearts.

Some people, according to the President, are already taking the position that every one of the seven points is correct except the one point which steps on their individual toes. That is human enough. But nothing was more calculated to shake any lingering selfishness out of the American people than the President's citation of some of the glorious deeds which already have been done in our national name by our brothers in arms. Those deeds are their own sermon on the privilege of sacrifice on the home no less than on the battle front.

The object of the battle on the home front is to reduce the standard of living. That does not mean somebody else's living standard. It means everybody's. Only by this means can this country defeat the menace which, as Mr. Henderson said, would ruin everybody but the speculators. An umbrella over prices, no matter how extensive or firmly held, is not even an offensive weapon in this campaign. Nobody is better aware of this than Mr. Henderson himself. He speaks of the new universal price ceiling as only "the framework for other policies which will diminish the inflationary gap." The price order merely makes possible "an effective war labor policy, more stringent income and excess profit taxes and greatly enhanced savings." The battle itself can be won by closing the spread which separates the reduced goods for civilian consumption from the swollen money incomes available to buy them.

Clearly there are two direct ways of closing the gap. Either the goods for civilian consumption could be increased or the surplus money could be taxed away. There is not much leeway on the goods front. Aside from the fact that half our resources are being devoted to war purposes, the retention of the 40-hour week will mean that there cannot be an all-out productive effort among the factories turning out civilian goods. The time-and-a-half penalty rate can be passed on to the Government on war contracts, but the consumer goods producer has no such Santa Claus back of him. Accordingly the main attack must be waged on the money front, and, obviously, to be effective it must be waged in the regions where the money is.

This money is concentrated precisely in the economic group which has always been the object of President Roosevelt's solicitude. That is the wage-earning group. Salaries and wages last year accounted for over 70 per cent of the rise in the national income, and this year, doubtless, the ratio will be even higher. Salaries of executives account for a minor share of the total. They do not increase with production, at least not to the same extent as do wages. The zone at which the main fight against inflation must be waged is thus the wage-earning brackets; in other words, among the many. In ordinary times the increase in income of the low-income groups would be welcomed as lifting the national living standard, but nowadays, to repeat, the living standard must be lowered, not improved.

This is what the President would call the blunt fact in licking inflation. It also must be a painful fact for him. One of the reasons he struggled so unsuccessfully to ward off war was that he knew that with the oncoming of war all the social gains of his Administration would have to go into cold storage. War is the time for civilian contraction, for belt-tightening; not for expansion.

The President's message is his first recognition of the realities of war finance, though the approach so far is not as bold as the war effort itself. His recipe as to wages, for instance, is to stabilize them. To be sure, he recommends a new tax bill for the withdrawal of more purchasing power than would be withdrawn by the pending tax bill. But his recommendations seem to be concerned only with the capital of the few, not the income of the many. That would be shadow-fighting inflation. A vigorous attack upon inflation can be won only by the obvious route of diverting into the Treasury the war wages and profits for which there are no corresponding goods. In the present emergency which the President and Mr. Henderson have so well explained, that can be accomplished only by a general sales tax or by lowering the income tax exemptions. We may have to do both as well as to enforce saving if war incomes continue to mount and goods continue to shrink.

Suburban Rents

The Office of Price Administration showed good sense in ruling that rents in all Maryland-Virginia suburbs of the Capital must be frozen at the level prevailing on January 1, 1941. For it is an established fact that ever since then suburban rents have been advancing at a rate greater, in many instances, than was the case here in the District during 1941.

As of the first of this year, Washington rents were frozen at the January 1, 1941, level, so it is only just that the same level should apply across the District Line. Indeed, for some months now, the District Rent Control Office has been besieged with demands that something be done about the rent-hoisting tactics of suburban landlords. Naturally, the District office has had no authority to act, but the undesirable situation which has developed in adjacent counties is now to be met by Federal order.

This means that State and local officials must cope with more or less the same difficulties already encountered by the District Rent Control Office. Apparently, OPA officials conferred repeatedly with the local office before issuing the suburban rent order. And Maryland and Virginia authorities might well do likewise, taking advantage of District experience. They will find, incidentally, that it is no easy job to establish equitable rents for new dwellings or for dwellings which were not for rent on January 1, 1941, or, in some cases to distinguish between capital improvements to property and routine repairs. Yet it is a job which has to be done fairly and rapidly as a vital adjunct of the Government's anti-inflation program.

Weather Side

What the learned Professor Haushofer and his pals should have established is an Institute of Politico-meteorology. There was a hint that the Germans had, in fact, something of that sort when the conquests of Poland and France were expedited by unusually fine weather. The Nazi propaganda bureau made it appear as though the weather had been part of careful long-range planning of the general staff. They began to speak of "Hitler weather" in the same proprietary tone that Napoleon used in speaking of "Austerlitz weather." Now, however, Herr Hitler explains his reverses in Russia on weather grounds. He says he had no way of knowing in advance that the Russian winter of 1941-42 would be the worst in a century—far worse, for example, than the winter of 1812-13 about which so many terrible chapters were written by the survivors of the Grande Armee. What was the Institute, if any, doing?

It may well be that weather rather than weapons, raw materials or man power will play the decisive role in this war. Take several examples. If the British and Chinese in Burma can manage to hold out until the monsoon season, which normally begins about the middle of May, the Japanese advance will be impeded and perhaps arrested. The monsoons are followed by the rainy season in upper Burma and in a considerable part of India, and the rains would afford a delay or breathing space of several weeks in which to permit the bolstering of Indian defenses and the organization of a counter-offensive. Moreover, in Libya the hot season will soon make desert operations well-nigh impossible, and so, unless General Rommel gets going pretty soon, he can scarcely get going at all.

Finally, there is the new situation in Russia. Some talk is now heard that Hitler's long anticipated Spring offensive in the Southern Russian theater—which has inexplicably not yet got under way—may turn into a northern drive for the possession of Murmansk. The loss of Murmansk would be a serious blow to Russia, since it would close the supply line from the United States. But it would not be quite as serious as it would have been a few months ago. For now the ice around Archangel is breaking up, and presently that port will be accessible not only from Iceland, but also from San Francisco.

ON LOOKING AT TRAVEL FOLDERS

We have said farewell to the season of sring,
To the green world, to the sails in the fresh wind,
To the curve of the new world where birds sing
An unfamiliar song in the first hour of morning.
We have said farewell to the Eastern veil scattered with stars,
To the secret door carved from ivory,
To the stair circling to the white roof under the blue sky.
On the walls of this room hangs the map of the world.
Under the ragged flame and the rust of smoke
The world is still colored with rose and yellow and green.
The waters are blue and dove-grey and the color of air . . .
Colors of the season of spring. Here we once sailed
And shall sail again though winter is here
And we have said farewell to the season of spring.

Friendly Washingtonians

I have been stationed at Quantico in the Marine Corps for two months and I can safely say that in those two months I have been treated with more genuine kindness and friendliness in Washington than I have ever met with in any other city. I have only been in the Marines a few months, but I have been in long enough to find out that a man in a Marine uniform or in any uniform of the armed forces is fortunate when he is stationed near Washington.

This past weekend, for example, I was flat broke. I didn't even have a penny to toss to decide what to do in Washington. I went to the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club and was able to borrow a dollar from a friend. While there one of the USO workers told us that the Presbyterian Church was serving free chow at the Friendship Center, Massachusetts Avenue. Naturally we headed that way. Take my word for it, that was one of the best spaghetti dinners I have ever eaten and the thing that made it enjoyable for me and for the others there also, was the homey atmosphere and genuine desire on the part of everyone there to make us feel at home. We (my buddy and I, an Army man no less) spent the night at the Unitarian Church. Next morning we went to Catholic Mass and after Mass we were pretty hungry sitting on a park bench philosophizing on our chances of catching a couple of fish out of the Potomac, when a former Marine came up and asked us if we'd like to have breakfast at his house. Of course we liked the idea and when we ate the delicious steak breakfast we liked it even better. Then this kind gentleman took us into his family, introduced us all around and had his daughter sing for us. I played the piano for her and we had a grand time. Later he drove us downtown and insisted that the next time we were in town we should stay at his house overnight and consider it "our home in Washington." It is the kindness of people like this, that makes Washington such a grand city. I'm from the North and Southern hospitality really is hospitality with all that the word implies.

Married Navy Men Want Wings

I have known for some time that the Navy was going to lower its requirements, educationally, for its flight training program. This was confirmed in today's papers.

It is understandable that in wartime the needs of the services are greater, and consequently that it is necessary to sacrifice some quality for quantity. There is no reason why a high school graduate should not make every bit as good a military pilot as would a man who has had two or more years of college. The training is specialized and, starting from the bottom in specialized education of that type, either man has a chance to learn to perform his duties as a pilot of military aircraft as well as the other.

But there is a question, which seems to be one of policy as much as anything else to the Navy, which I, for one, as well as numerous men of my acquaintance who are also members of the naval force of this greatest of Nations, cannot understand.

There are many men in the ranks of our Navy, both officers and enlisted personnel, who desire to make combat flying their part in fighting this war. They are educationally (many of them, including myself, with college training), psychologically and physically qualified for flight training, and at least as important as the above qualifications, they know about and feel the tremendous import of this war because they have and are serving in the military service, and yet, although these men would give up almost any privilege for the chance to get those "wings of gold," they are not allowed to enter flight training.

They are married.

The underlying reasons for not allowing a married man to receive flight training are many and varied. I have been given reasons by captains and ensigns and C. P. O.'s. And their reasons vary as the winds. One says it's because a married man could not stand the gaff of living in barracks for seven months after being used to a pleasant home life . . . another says it's because a married man naturally has more concern for his neck because he is constantly thinking of his wife and his duty to return to her, and because of that his efficiency as a fighting unit is impaired. Oh, there are many reasons I have been given, and all of them semfofficially.

But I cannot understand. A man is allowed to marry as soon as he is completely trained, that is, at the end of his flight training period, and many of them do. The Army has a very efficient Air Corps, and they have recently lowered the bars to admit married men. Our greatest air hero in this war, a certain Lieutenant Commander O'Hare, of whom you might have heard, was met at the airport by his wife. Certainly his fighting efficiency was not impaired by a concern for his neck so that he might return safely to his wife . . . or if it was, may I submit that it might be a good thing to have others with the same concern.

There are some of us who are willing to go to the extreme of spending no small sum in order that we may send our wives to Nevada for divorces (and it runs into $400 or $500) in order that we may make ourselves acceptable for flight training in the Navy. We intend, of course, to remarry as soon as the training period is completed, but why must it be made necessary for such a thing to be done in order that those of us who are fortunate enough to have been blessed with good bodies, but unfortunate enough to have found the woman that we desire to spend the rest of our lives with, in order that we may better serve our country in this fight for its very life?

Cannot something be done to allow the men in the Navy the same opportunity for flight training as that offered by the Army? We want the chance, and we can make good pilots, and the field, if opened, will yield much fruit.

More Effort Needed

The fact is terribly true that only through utmost sacrifice and only through utmost speed will we win.

The First World War, according to careful research of the 902 major wars since 500 B. C. was over six times greater than all the other 901 wars combined. This World War is still greater and more devastating.

The first World War cost the United States nearly 30 billion dollars. Congress has voted for this Greater World War over 120 billion dollars.

In the first World War Japan was on our side. Now she is on Germany's side and has conquered many territories and many millions of people with startling speed.

In the first World War Italy was our ally. Now she is Germany's ally and is completely dominated by Germany.

In the first World War France fought valiantly at our side. Now, conquered and helpless, she works for Germany, and Germany may get the powerful French fleet.

Then it was a war of men and machines. Now it is a war of machines and men. China has a man power greater than ours. Britain and her dominions have a man power greater than ours. Russia has a man power greater than ours, but we alone have the ultimate machine power to win this machine war.

If capital, if management, if labor, if politics, if anything puts hindrances in the speed of war production it must be swept aside. All home life and all happy living that hinder our supreme war efforts must be sacrificed.

It is a titanic life and death struggle. Victory depends chiefly on our willingness to put aside everything else and with utmost speed get into the fight with more and more ships and tanks and guns and airplanes.

Majority Speaks

I belong to and believe that I am speaking for that majority in our Nation who hold membership in no union, block, pressure group or favored class; are recipients of no Government salaries, doles, grants, subsidies or favors and but scant consideration.

We are engaged in thousands of activities necessary to the maintenance of civilian life upon which the Nation's existence and the war effort also depend. We have no increased incomes, overtime, defense wages or guarantees of continued opportunity to survive. We are accepting the hazards, paying taxes, furnishing our sons for the national defense and carrying on in the conviction that it is the price and not too great a price for the preservation of our national life. We cannot believe a short day, high wage, financial profit or political advantage to be more sacred than the careers and lives of our sons.

We have the right to expect and to demand that all nonvital Government agencies, activities and expenditures be discontinued; political jockeying adjourned, and that Congress insure enforcement of the three declarations of the President: (1) "We shall not stop work for a single day;" (2) "We shall not demand special gains or privileges or advantages for any one group or occupation;" (3) "We shall give up conveniences and modify the routine of our lives if our country asks us to do so."

The Post Impressionist

His Truth Is Marching On

Men in uniform will hardly feel sympathetic toward Tin Pan Alley and its pitiful and puerile attempts to write a popular 1942 war song. To write one that the men in uniform will sing you've got to feel as the men in uniform feel. That's where Tin Pan Alley does a nose dive in trying to palm off the usual juke box cacophony and plagiarized "tintinnabulation.

But Tin Pan Alley does not grope alone. For want of new and better things to say and do to fit the tremendous task that faces our beloved country, men high in public life are going back to the days of the Revolution to quote Thomas Paine's "These are times that try men's souls." The modern song writer doesn't feel that his soul is being tried, so when he pours out what soul he can muster, nothing comes out.

To fit the needs of the day like a Virginian fits into Charlottesville or a Californian into Oroville, why not go back to music written by William Steffe in 1852 and words written by Julia Ward Howe in 1862?

Steffe's tune was marched to by the soldiers of the Union Army and the words were "John Brown's Body Lies A. Mouldering in the Grave." The words were not big enough to fit the torture rack in which the Union found itself although the free-swinging march music was and still is the answer to a military bandmaster's prayer.

As the marching columns swung down Pennsylvania Avenue, Julia Ward Howe wrote the words, during the long hours of the night, of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Of that effort Alexander Woollcott wrote only recently, "A valiant and gracious woman to whom, in a dark hour in this Nation's history, it was given to put down on paper, words which have since been recognized as an imponderable and inalienable part of the national wealth, words which will last as long as America does. Perhaps longer."

Julia Ward Howe had said, "I had often prayed that I might write something worthy; something that would live."

Tin Pan Alley has a long way to go to tie the little old lady who lived to be over 90 and who, on her ninetieth birthday, wrote "I march to the brave music still."

It took "brave music" to march to in the heart-breaking days of the War Between the States, just as it needs "brave music" today.

Break down the words of the "Battle Hymn" and fit it, verse for verse, to conditions of 1942. It needs little fitting, viz:

We had our "grapes of wrath" at Wake Island, Pearl Harbor, Manila, Java; on the Hamilton, Truxton, Jacob Jones, Houston and others. The "fateful lightning of the terrible swift sword" struck your shipmates and mine. But we move ahead to eventual victory and so, as in 1852:

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword
His truth is marching on.

Struck in the back, our country prepares for the eventual pay-off. Our leaders and our soldiers and sailors pray and our men muster about "watch fires" from North Carolina to San Diego, from Ireland to Australia, readying for the "righteous sentence" to come:

I have seen Him in the watch fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps,
His day is marching on.

Our President has let Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini know we "shall never call retreat." Many in civilian life do not get the word. They still hope to fumble through with "business as usual." "How can I make an extra dollar out of the unnatural war situation; what can I get out of it?" Not "what can I put in?" Labor strikes while men die at a dollar a day! Fake movie heroes still grace the covers of magazines, while the enlisted men of the services, by their service and their dying, have long since proven they are the real heroes whose "souls were swift to answer," whose "feet were jubilant," while "hearts of men are sifted out:"

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat:
O be swift my soul to answer Him: be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In Japan, your shipmates and mine are prisoners on a diet of fish heads and rice, while they reclaim swamp lands. They hope for the day of freedom as they pray to Him who was "born across the sea" and whose cause is carried by our country's men in uniform if ever, through the war-torn history of our pitiful world, men in uniform fought the fight of the lowly Nazarene, recognized for 1942 years as the "Prince of Peace:"

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea;
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free!
While God is marching on.

Yes, we could do a whole lot worse than forget the thus far weak-kneed efforts of Tin Pan Alley and just swing along with Julia Ward Howe's effort of 1852 and its brave music:

Glory! glory! Hallelujah!
Glory! glory! Hallelujah!
Glory! glory! Hallelujah!
His truth is marching on.

Tin Pan Alley, like many another section of American life, just hasn't "gotten the word" yet.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Seven-Point Program

UNDER THE GENERAL principles of the President's seven-point program everything needed can be done eventually. But until the President makes up his mind to overrule the Treasury Department's tax and savings policy, he will not have begun to come to grips with the inflation.

LIPPMANN

For since inflation exists when there is too much money in the hands of those who wish to spend it, price control and wage control, however desirable for other reasons, cannot cure and cannot prevent inflation.

Mr. Henderson cannot stop the inflation. In fact, Mr. Henderson cannot control prices unless Secretary Morgenthau reduces the inflation. The War Labor Board cannot stop the inflation, and the Treasury has no program which can stop the inflation.

THE HEART of the problem is the fact that even after Congress has enacted the new tax bill, and even if the Treasury's bond-selling campaign goes very well indeed, there will be at least 10 billions excess purchasing power loose in the market during the coming year. This is a conservative estimate. Probably it underestimates the rapidity with which the war production program, now rolling, will actually turn out munitions of war. Therefore, it probably underestimates the rate at which materials and labor will be mobilized away from the civilian consumer. And very probably it overestimates the capacity of the Treasury to sell bonds to genuine investors.

Now 10 billion dollars of loose money is quite enough to blow the ceiling off any system of price and wage control that Mr. Henderson and the War Labor Board can devise. It is a terrific inflationary force. Yet the Treasury is not even proposing to try to regulate it.

For the great increase of aggregate income during the past 18 months has gone to wage earners and to some farmers who are barely touched or not touched at all by the present income tax. This added income is at the present time in the highest degree inflationary because about half of all consumption goods that are bought in this country are bought by the great mass of people who have small incomes. Because they have small incomes, they tend to spend extra income as soon as it is earned. They are not reached by the income tax, and they do not ordinarily save to invest. They have bought less than 10 per cent of all savings bonds.

THEREFORE, the Treasury policy cannot possibly cure the existing inflation or prevent an even greater inflation. Until there is a tax bill which reaches the lower incomes, which have recently been in the aggregate greatly increased, and until there is a compulsory savings plan, the Administration ought not to pretend that it is dealing with inflation. Necessary and desirable as it is to tax the rich and the moderately well-to-do, the cold fact is that their taxes cannot and will not in themselves deal with the inflation. Nor can selling bonds to these people deal with inflation. If the banks buy the bonds, all that does is to make the inflation greater, and if investors buy bonds out of their normal savings, little is accomplished because what is saved and not spent is not inflationary anyway.

This is the specific and critical weakness of the program as it now stands. The weakness can be overcome as soon as the President decides to make the Treasury's tax and savings policy conform to the recommendations of his other economic advisers. For it is no secret that Vice President Wallace, Mr. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, Mr. Henderson, and the Director of the Budget, Mr. Harold D. Smith, are agreed that the Treasury policy is wholly inadequate. The bottleneck is between the White House and the Treasury. It will have to be broken if we are to deal with inflation.

THE REST of the program as it affects manufactures, farm products, and wages can be made manageable only when the inflationary pressure of excess purchasing power is drained off by taxes or dammed up by savings that cannot be spent during the war period. Even then the problems will be formidable. But they are not insoluble, and on the whole it seems to me that the President's approach to them is wiser than many of his critics are willing to admit.

This is especially true of his leadership in the field of labor where he has clung stubbornly, and as the event shows successfully,—to the idea of the largest possible amount of voluntary agreement. It is all very well for Congressmen or newspaper writers to say: let us pass laws forbidding strikes, laws freezing industrial relations, laws freezing wages. They do not have to administer those laws. The President would have to administer them. And if he can outlaw strikes, if he can preserve order in industrial relations, if he can stabilize the wage structure, if he can do all these things with the active assistance of labor leaders and labor unions, the ultimate effect will be infinitely surer and more satisfactory. Let us never forget that you can lead a horse to water but that you cannot make him drink. You can lead a workingman to his tools but you cannot make him work with his whole heart.

OBVIOUSLY we cannot win the war and have strikes. We cannot win the war and have endless wrangling about the closed shop. We cannot win the war if wages go into a competitive spiral as employers bid against one another. But in our eagerness to deal with these matters, let us be careful, let us be very careful indeed, not to impair the will to work by getting into a position where it even looks as if we were using the emergency of war to break up the unions and to destroy collective bargaining.

If we make that terrible mistake, we shall destroy the influence of the patriotic leaders of labor, and their power to arouse enthusiasm and to instill discipline. We shall create the most serious of all labor problems, that which exists when men feel oppressed, and are sullen, and work listlessly, and are ready to listen to irresponsible agitators and adventurers. In these matters, details aside, the President is wiser, and more sure-footed than his critics, at least as anxious as they to win the war, and as well aware of what it will take to win the war.

A MORE TEMPERATE and a more understanding approach to the farmers, would also serve us well at this time. I do not think it does any good for those of us who live in cities to talk about the farm bloc as if we were more patriotic and unselfish than the farm bloc. The sons of the farmers are on all the fighting fronts, perhaps a larger proportion of them than from any other group of our people.

No good end is served by talking about the complex question of parity prices in a tone of righteous indignation. The question is a practical problem in economics, and in its current phase it is at bottom a question of how to achieve the production of the necessary crops in the right amounts. Almost certainly the recently adopted 110 per cent of parity formula is wrong, and the President is asking Congress to revise it. But it will be revised more easily if we recognize that this is an economic and not a moral question, that our objective is farm production which fits the peculiar needs of this war, and that if we fix a lower ceiling on farm prices, we may in order to get the right kind of production have to support the ceiling by paying subsidies. My impression is that Secretary Wickard and Mr. Henderson understand the problem better than most of us, and that the general public will do best to give them its confidence.

Colombian Elections

By Jean Anne Crawford

Bogota, Colombia.

WHICH OF TWO Liberals will be the next President of Colombia? This question, to be decided at the polls May 3, has precipitated one of the bitterest political campaigns of recent Colombian history. Not since 1930, when the Conservative Party split and allowed the election of a Liberal candidate, has the political future of the country known such uncertainty.

In international policy, the platforms of the two candidates are similar. Carlos Arango Velez has expressed his belief that Colombia should offer all possible aid to the democracies in the present struggle, including, if necessary, a declaration of war.

Alfonso Lopez, early in 1941, severely criticized President Santos' policy of political cooperation with the United States without adequate guarantees of economic aid. To his great distress many U. S. newspapers interpreted this criticism as being pro-Nazi. During the Rio Conference he took the opportunity to put himself on record with the statement: "There is no blow given to the United States on the sea, on the land or in the air which all America does not receive."

WHEN I ASKED Dr. Lopez for a further declaration on American solidarity he said: "The war, in which international democracy begins to take the offensive, and which will terminate with its victory, can progress only on the basis of American solidarity. At the same time will be created the foundation of a future peace, in which the hemisphere will be more strong because it will have understood and appreciated the advantages of cooperation and reciprocal aid in all times, especially in difficult and dangerous times."

If this were not enough to dispel doubts as to the position of Lopez and his followers on the question of solidarity against the totalitarian aggressors, there is in existence an unpublished letter on the subject. This letter, written July 22, 1941, is directed to Dr. Lopez and signed by his supporters in Congress. "The Parliamentary Junta," it reads, "expresses its agreement with the administrative work of the government presided over by Dr. Santos, as a continuation of the liberal policy of previous administrations, and the adhesion to his international policy of American solidarity, of increasing and reciprocal cooperation with the United States and other countries of the continent in the political and economic fields, of constant attention and no indifference before the development of the world conflict which endangers the fate of democracy in the world"

The great differences between the candidates lie in their domestic policies and the type of support which they enjoy. Lopez is a liberal of the "new deal" type, much of the work of his previous administration (1934-1938), having been in the field of social legislation. He even eliminated some members of his own party who fear that another Lopez government will not be able to control the labor movement which it has started.

CARLOS ARANGO VELEZ is a liberal of more moderate convictions. As a result, he has gained the support of former Lopez supporters who want to vote with the Liberal Party, but doubt the economic ability of Colombia to undertake more social reforms at this time.

The mass backing of Lopez comes from laborers and salaried workers. The popular vote for Arango is a gift to him from the Conservative Party. Laureano Gomez, Conservative chief, early announced that he would back any candidate opposing Lopez, and even threatened publicly to start a revolution if the latter were elected. At this time there is no indication of what price, if any, the Conservative Party may have asked for its support.

In case the Conservatives could assert control over an Arango administration, deviations might be expected from the candidate's declarations on international policy. The position which the Conservative Party has taken with regard to the war is what Dr. Dario Botero Isaza, party leader, likes to describe as "vertical" neutrality. The reasons given for this policy are (1), that Colombia is insufficiently prepared and too small to take any military action; and (2), the party does not feel that the country is threatened in any way.

Concerning the ideologies represented in the struggle, the Conservative party also states "vertical" neutrality as its policy. This doesn't mean that the personal actions of the party leaders have conformed with requirements of neutrality. Laureano Gomez, epitome of the more vocal anti-American Conservatives, has been publicly accused of receiving Nazi financial aid. A Falangist, Gomez has used all the tactics common to totalitarian "fifth columnists." Most often his attacks take the form of calumny against Cabinet members and government officials.

WHEN it became apparent that the departmental assemblies, in which Arango has a slight majority, would be used to continue political propaganda during the pre-election "cooling-off" period, the government postponed their opening until after the election. Gomez, speaking through his newspaper, El Siglo, denied the constitutionality of the decree and ordered the assemblies to convene. Distorted in importance by Conservative departmental newspapers, this order reached Buenos Aires as a rumor of impending political strife. The day before the usual reconvening date of the assemblies, the story was retransmittted from Berlin as a report of nationalist revolution in Colombia.

Expectation of violence increased with this episode over the assemblies, although their failure to meet except in isolated cases was a victory for the government. Rumors have been current for several months that the Conservatives are distributing propaganda among army personnel, and that illicit shipments of guns have been confiscated at the Ecuadorean border. Certain administrative steps, such as the joint plea by President Santos and the archbishop of Bogota to refrain from violence, and the decree forcing residents of Bogota to declare and deposit their arms with city officials tend to confirm these rumors.

Most Colombians with whom I have talked, jealous of their well-earned reputation for democracy, deny that there will be violence even if Lopez wins by a much smaller majority than was originally predicted. From members of both parties I have frequently heard the opinion expressed that Colombia can make no greater contribution to the democratic cause at this time than by giving peaceful recognition to the decision of the electoral body of the country.

Oil From Venezuela

By Virginia Prewett

Vital To The Allied War Effort

WITH THIS hemisphere under attack from east and west, each American nation has strategic importance by reason of geographical position or its potential in the battle of production. Our closest South American neighbor, Venezuela, derives importance from both.

It is at present an efficiently functioning producer in the democratic war plant. At Maracaibo, where American engineers have set up a field in lake waters as deep as 185 feet, in the jungle swamps of Quiriquire and elsewhere, oil wells are pumping out more than 700,000 barrels of crude a day. Now outstripping the great Russian fields and second only to the United States in output, Venezuela is the best protected source of export oil for the democracies, as well as the most productive by far.

As crude or after refining at Aruba and Curacao, Venezuela's oil is tankered to Brazil and the Argentine, where factories are running night and day; to the United States and Canada. Great quantities go to Britain, fuel for the engines of commerce and the planes and ships of war.

A glance at the map will show that Venezuela's north coast bounds the Caribbean from Trinidad, bottom peg of our Eastern Canal defenses, halfway to the Canal itself. Any attempt to flank these defenses by way of Africa and a land-air attack based from a point of penetration at the bulge of Brazil would have to roll up, through Venezuela on its way toward us.

Along this north coast are five ports of our air life-line to the Guianas—where our troops have moved in—Brazil and the Argentine. At Maracaibo, Coro, La Guaira, Barcelona and Caripito, heavy American graders are plowing and smoothing red Venezuelan soil to enlarge runways. Pan-American Airways planes now reach Maracaibo from Miami via Port au Prince in 10 hours. Strata clippers could fly it in around six.

SHIP SHORTAGE has thrown a heavy commercal load on this Pan-Americas trunk line since war began in Europe. The certain future intensification of submarine warfare in the South Atlantic gives these ports vital importance as a line of communication and supply movement.

A close common interest between the United States and Venezuela is nothing new. The hundreds of millions of dollars invested in oil production in Venezuela make up 27 per cent of the country's national wealth and over 75 per cent of this is American investors' money. You understand why the famous mountain highway from La Guaira to Caracas is lined with advertisements of American luxury products when you learn that, even outside oil company purchases, Venezuela is the largest per capita buyer of our goods in Latin America. It is our third largest peacetime market in South America.

War catches Venezuela at a time when social and economic changes that it took our country decades to pass through are being telescoped into a few short years of its national life.

From 1905 till December, 1935, the dictator Gomez ran Venezuela as his private business. He got titles to all the good farm land. When oil came in in the late 20's, he made shrewd deals with the companies and became one of the richest men in the world. Venezuela's government, on a skeleton budget, was little more than a graft machine for his henchmen.

TO BUILD an adequate labor supply, the foreign companies had to give better living conditions and higher pay than Venezuelan labor had ever known. The best workers gravitated to their employ. Towns mushroomed near oil camps.

Oil prosperity under Gomez touched only his clique, an importing merchant group, partly foreign and to a lesser degree oil labor and merchants in oil centers. As against a population of 3,500,000, oil workers were few, only 14,000 in 1935.

Most of the urban population outside the circle of oil prosperity were poorly educated and exposed to endemic diseases. The rural population lived primitively. Liberals who protested against their complete neglect were exiled. Venezuela, a nation that had once exported liberating armies and liberal culture throughout South America, was a prisoner of dictatorship.

After Gomez's death in late 1935, Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, as President, brought about an abrupt change. He began to plow oil profits back into Venezuela.

The country's problem was—and is—the health of its people. They suffer from malaria, hookworm and malnutrition. Better health for towns means building sewage systems, water supplies, hospitals—and training doctors and nurses. It means educating a neglected people—and to educate them you must first get to them. This means roads and bridges for a country whose population is thickest where roads are most difficult to build—in the tropical jungle belt and low mountains of the Caribbean coast and the rough lower slopes of the Andes, in the southwest.

IN 1939, the year of peak income, nearly 2½ times as much was spent on deral public works as in 1935, three times as much for schools, almost four times as much for agriculture and five times as much for sanitation and health. Twice as much went to states as subvention for public services. A model labor law gave workers new high rates of pay and social benefits.

People now work in an expanding oil industry and on public works who yesterday lived in the wilds. Increased government and business activities have created white-collar employment where little was. Merchants, growing rich in commerce, are investing in real estate in growing centers, especially at Caracas. A building boom gives more work.

Enterprising Venezueleans naturally gravitate to this sphere of prosperity where work is and a decaying agriculture has further decayed. Dependence on imports and a high tariff make urban living costs extremely high.

It must be pointed out that Venzuela's high tariff, especially on food, is scheduled to stimulate domestic production of necessities at the same time that it provides revenues for the government to subsidize improvement programs. It does in fact protect certain small industries now starting and a fairly extensive truck-gardening area developing around Caracas.

INVESTIGATION reveals that large food surpluses outside of the export items—cattle, coffee and cacao—have never been produced, and agriculture's decay is mostly an export decay. The rural population, now 55 per cent of the whole, today produces little more than subsistence. With more people eating better than ever before as the result of wider spread of oil prosperity in urban centers, large quantities of such items as flour, lard, powdered milk, canned vegetables, rice, cured meats, cheese and potatoes have to be brought in.

In the past the class who could afford manufactured articles to any extent have always imported from abroad. Since 1935, the government has encouraged industry, and cigarettes, drinks, vegetable oils, some cotton textiles, shoes, sugar, soap, wrapping paper, furniture and about half the country's cement needs are made at home. Concessions have been made for a new General Tire Co. factory at Caracas and to Bethlehem interests to mine iron in the State of Bolivar. The labor laws and high wages that benefit the Venezuelan working for foreign companies tends to discourage the small Venezuelan manufacturer, however.

The government fosters agriculture, but the road system and methods of shipping, conserving and distributing must be vastly improved. Above all, a sickly rural population must be made healthy and trained to produce.

Great strides have been made since 1935 and Venezuelans, when healthy and well fed, are capable and competent. Today 93 per cent of American oil employes are Venezuelan. But with many long-term improvements to make, even the hundred million dollar annual revenue spreads thin. It will take time for Venezuela to get on a more balanced economic basis.

THE FIRST PHASE of World War II showed how exposed Venezuela's economy is in its present stage of transition. Loss of European markets for coffee, cacao and hides in 1940 reduced foreign exchange by 15 per cent. Supplies formerly bought in Europe cost more from us. Imports fell. Reduced customs revenues—they normally provide about 35 per cent of the total—checked improvement programs. Our entry into the coffee and cacao market eased the situation, however and an Export-Import Bank loan spanned a gap in revenues.

When our defense effort began to affect delivery of supplies in 1941, Venezuela found itself faced with a serious possibility. Of the country's three and one-half million people, around 600,000 are gainfully employed. The oil industry accounts for 25,000, but a large section of labor is now employed in the public works programs and in the building industry. If imports should be drastically cut, and supplies become unobtainable, unemployment could quickly grow serious. Agricultural development is tied in with the program for roads, education and health, and cannot be pushed far ahead of them. If the present situation should collapse, many of Venezuela's lately urbanized population might find themselves faced with the prospect of going back to the beans, bananas and yuca diet of the rural sections.

These factors explain why Venezuela was the first Latin American country to send a commission to Washington to lay its case before the Economic Defense Board. They have been promised that, with other Latin American nations, their basic needs will be taken care of.

When war spread to this hemisphere, Venezuela has reaffirmed friendship and cooperation with us and has taken steps to protect common interests within its boundaries. With a line of supply stretching from oil wells and its national economy hanging by the thread of continued supplies from us, Venezuela is very conscious of the interdependence of its interests and our own today.

Winter's getting tougher—
Ice is thicker, too;
Frozen ground is rougher,
I am telling you,
Than when Bonaparte and
Other men of old
Tried a flying start and Dared the Russian cold.

II.

Frostbite's much more biting,
Snow is not the same,
Wind is much more blighting—
(It's an awful shame);
Feet today get colder,
Winter's not much fun;
I had more to shoulder
Than Napoleon!

III.

Ach, that Russian snow is Heavier by far;
Russian ice I know is
Ten points under par;
Bonaparte was lucky
(Twenty-five below!)
Such a mark is ducky;
I don't call it low!

IV.

Thirty below zero . . .
Pfui! What is that?
If you'd be a hero
Work in 50 (flat)!
Nappie was a quitter—
What a break he got!
Weather he called bitter
Was, to my view, hot!

V.

I miscalculated;
Winter crossed me up!
It was underrated
Both by me and Krupp;
Snowstorms most excessive,
Blizzards far from nice—
Who could be aggressive
In that "Jewish ice"?

VI.

Russia? Bah! It's easy
(When the weather's right);
Stalin? He's a cheesy
(When the frosts don't bite);
Bonaparte? I know him;
He just quit in there;
Some day I will show him . . .

The National Restaurant Men's Association at a convention in California announces that ham and eggs constitute America's most popular dish. The others, in order, are given as roast beef, steak, lobster thermidor, the New England boiled dinner, fried oysters, baked ham, breast of capon, filet of sole and deviled crab. To which we say "Phooey!"

Roast beef and steak, perhaps, are close to the top, but no list that excludes the hamburger, beef stew and franks and beans is authentic. We would put the hamburger and frankfurter nine miles ahead of lobster thermidor. And even meat balls with macaroni would come ahead of deviled crab.

OPA Puts Ceiling On Virtually All Cotton Goods

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration imposed a price ceiling yesterday on virtually all types of cotton goods and yarns which apparently put it up to the mills to bargain the farmers down from their superparity demands or to reduce their own profit margin.

The order was designed to stabilize the manufacturers' and wholesalers' prices of cotton goods at March levels, in line with the overall price freezing. The method appeared significant in view of the restrictions which the congressional farm bloc placed in the price control law, over Administration opposition.

The ceiling on the fabricated goods was based on a price of 20.37 cents a pound for raw cotton although the Price Control Act provides, in effect, that farmers should not be barred from receiving at least 21.47 cents. This arises from the provision in the act that prices on agricultural products may not be fixed at less than 110 per cent of parity (the level which would give the farmer a purchasing power equivalent to that of 1909-14).

Fair Enough

Origin Of The $25,000 A Year Plan

OFFICIALLY, it was the President who proposed to Congress that no person be allowed to receive a net income, after taxes are paid, of more than $25,000 a year, but, in actual fact, I think the country may thank the United Automobile Workers of the C. I. O. for the revolutionary suggestion of a top limit on the price of every American's ability and ingenuity. This is a fine organization, composed largely of captive workers brought in by armed thugs, which fostered the strike at North American Aviation in loyalty to Mother Russia to prevent the construction of planes for this country and Britain when Stalin and Hitler were yet allies. The limitation would apply to all incomes, even if derived from activities utterly apart from the war program or its industries. It is not confined to war profiteers.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who protests rather angrily that she is a private person and not a political force, also had a part in the play.

ON APRIL 9, Mrs. R. wrote in her private, nonpolitical column:

"I listened to a news commentator this morning who gave such a gloomy picture of the future and of the leaders in every field in this country that I wonder whether the effect would not be to discourage people. Just to give the gentleman a ray of hope as to the good intentions of some people I would like to draw his attention to an item in the newspaper wires on April 7:

"'The executive board (of the U. A. W.-C. I. O.) proposed today a legal limit of $25,000 a year on family and individual incomes for the war's duration, in return for which union workers would accept nonnegotiable bonds in lieu of all overtime pay for more than 40 hours a week.'

"The gentleman said there was no unselfishness left in any of us. I am not going to contend that this suggestion is entirely unselfish, but at least it is a constructive suggestion showing that someone is doing some thinking. It gives me hope that there may be others who are not as totally devoid of altruism as this news commentator seems to feel."

HAVING RECEIVED this gracious nod from the nonpolitical personality who peddles political chat, the union four days later presented its plan in newspaper advertisements in some of the leading capitalist dailies.

In the ad the union presented an offer, 99 per cent fake, to "forego all demands for double pay for Sundays and holidays and time and a half for Saturdays." This startling proposal dwindles to practically nothing in the next sentence which insisted, nevertheless, that time and a half be paid for all work over eight hours in any one day, for all over 40 hours in any seven-day week and for all work on the sixth day of a seven-day week period, and double time for all work on the seventh day in any such period.

There followed then the promise to accept the nonnegotiable bonds, presumably bearing interest, in lieu of cash for all such overtime and an inadvertent admission that this overtime revenue would continue to be "tremendous."

The union slipped up here in a boastful declaration that this acceptance of the bonds would "mean a tremendous source of income for financing the war effort," thus confirming Mrs. Roosevelt's tiny suspicion that the suggestion was not "entirely unselfish." Incidentally, the plan pointedly refrained from saying whether the union treasury would gather in this "tremendous" fund for political or other use at the discretion of the boss unioneers or the bonds would be paid to the individual faceless slaves of the boss-altruists. The difficulty of issuing bonds in units of odd dollars and cents would suggest a preference by the union for general custody of the "tremendous" pool and workers learn that they rarely get back any money paid into union treasuries.

Remembering that the President himself denounced as communistic the sabotage strike of this union at North American Aviation, it will be interesting now to observe whether the Congress or the whole American people will take dictation from the U. A. W., relayed through the White House, in this revolutionary proposal, as it has in many other matters.

Coke Oven Crews Go Back to Jobs After 2-Day Strike

Johnstown, Pa., April 29 (AP).—A 2-day-old walkout of C. I. O. coke-oven workers at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Cambria works, affecting between 1200 and 5000 men, ended tonight.

The striking C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee members voted unanimously to return to their jobs when they were assured their demands for a 12½ cents an hour wage adjustment would be referred to the War Labor Board "with priority over all other cases for an immediate decision."

James B. Gent, subregional director of the union, and Harry E. Roulfs, labor consultant for the War Production Board, gave the assurance in a joint statement. Gent said the strike was unauthorized, but that it had the union's support.

The workers, whose pay ranges upward from a minimum of 72½ cents an hour, claimed they have tried for 11 months to get an increase which would make their rate similar to that in other mills.

Are Your Finger Nails Brittle? Better Eat More Spinach

By Ida Jean Kain

If your fingernails break easily, it may be because you don't eat your spinach. What is the connection? The green, leafy vegetables furnish vitamin A in abundance, and a deficiency of this vitamin is one reason your nails break.

Nobody could tell you exactly what makes your nails brittle, but vitamins A and B are both necessary to strong nails. You might need more of the B vitamins, which come in whole grain bread and cereals and in the newly enriched varieties

Green Vegetable Daily

The nutritionists stress the rule of having a green leafy or a yellow vegetable every day. Of the two, the green leafy is better, for it is a good source of vitamin A and also contains iron and some of the B vitamins. Your family should have a green, leafy vegetable routinely—just like potatoes.

You can't count macaroni, spaghetti, noodles, grits and rice as vegetables. They are cereals, and not the whole grain kind. They are good foods and high in calories, but they are more valuable when combined with tomatoes or green pepper for vitamin A, or with cheese for vitamins, minerals and protein. To round out the meal a green salad should accompany these dishes.

For one reason or another you need the whole list of vitamins. Another very important one is vitamin C, which is obtained from oranges and grapefruit and their juices, lemons, pineapple and tomatoes. You should have one of these daily. Orange and grapefruit juice contain vitamin C in equal amounts; tomato juice, half the quantity; pineapple juice, only one-third as much.

Fresh or Canned?

Busy homemakers are always asking if it is all right to squeeze the orange juice the night before. It is, provided the juice is placed in a tightly covered contained and kept in the refrigerator. Vitamin C is lost through exposure to air. Another often asked question is whether the canned fruit juices are as good as the fresh ones. There is very little difference.

If you like as many as six kinds of fresh vegetables and four kinds of fresh fruits, you very likely get enough of the vitamins and minerals. What you probably need to check up on is milk. Even though you are grown up, you need at least two glasses every day. Choose the right foods. They not only affect your fingernails, skin and hair, but make a vast difference in your feeling of well being

Mary Haworth's Mail

Unable to Cope With Outstanding Indebtedness Since Husband's Induction Into Army, Woman Faces Loss of Property; How Save Her Holdings?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband was very recently called into the armed service and is now on foreign duty, with a pay status much lower than his former civilian employment. Our income is not now sufficient to meet certain obligations—including purchase of a home—which we had previously contracted. The short notice he received prevented our making proper long-range plans, even if we had known what measures actually needed to be taken, and I admit our comparative ignorance on that score. Furthermore, the fact that my husband is now on foreign duty makes it extremely difficult to communicate with him, concerning a sound adjustment of our business affairs.

If I were to add the expense of legal counsel to my already burdensome debts (and I am not sure that it is legal help I need), I would be hopelessly swamped. Yet, I believe that someone who understands finances better than I, someone who knows what lenience the laws allow service men in the matter of debts, might be able to help me stretch our income so that we can keep the few possessions we have and maintain a home for our dependents. Is there an agency which will give me such information and assistance?

I realize I have stated my case in general terms, but I have deliberately done so for two reasons—first, to preserve my own anonymity; and, second, with the thought that there must be many service wives facing a similar predicament, who would find the answer to their problem in your answer to mine. Sincerely, MARY ELLEN.

Legal Aid Bureau Handles Such Cases

DEAR MARY ELLEN: The Legal Aid Bureau, a Community Chest agency located at 1400 L Street Northwest (telephone NAtional 8674), is helping service men's families solve this type of problem. And the person, like yourself, who has need of the bureau's expert assistance, should take to a conference with its representatives all documents that have a bearing on the case—so that the situation can be analyzed at one hearing, and a feasible plan of relief immediately established.

As you perhaps know, the Congress adopted legislation in 1940, described as the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act, providing for reasonable deferment (or longer-term financing) of "time payment" debts, such as mortgages on real estate, installment purchase of home furnishings, cars, etc.—in order to give selectees more peace of mind concerning the economic security of partial dependents. No doubt some provisions of this act can be invoked on your behalf by the Legal Aid Bureau, and explicit arrangements made to tide you safely through the worrisome emergency.

Staff members of the bureau are "on call" at headquarters between the hours of 2 and 4 p. m. from Monday through Friday, and between 10 and 12 a. m. on Saturday. Persons employed full time, who cannot make themselves available for consultation during these hours, are given the courtesy of a special appointment—at a mutually convenient time—if, in the bureau's judgment, the concession seems warranted.

Says Aging Face Framed By Dyed Hair Is Pitiful

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The tremors experienced by "Joyce," whose question of whether or not she should dye her hair was answered in your column last Thursday, probably will strike a responsive chord in the breasts of many women, who have faltered over the same decision. And all these women will read with interest your discerning reply. However, it seems to me you missed the crux of the question—in arguing that a decision should be reached on the basis of personal esthetic choice.

The passing of time is the treacherous element with which a woman must reckon, if she dyes her hair. Suppose Joyce decides, on the basis of esthetic choice, to dye her hair—rightly believing that in so doing she is improving her appearance. For a year or two—so long as the artificial coloring she uses resembles the natural shade of her hair—she will look younger than she is. But by and by she will not be able to duplicate her natural coloring.

Also, if she travels at all, she will have to put herself in the hands of a succession of beauty operators, each with different ideas. If she goes abroad—and people still do go abroad!—she may face the problem of trying to explain, in a foreign language, what she wants done. If she cares at all for outdoor life, she may find herself in situations where there are no beauty operators. And sun and wind and sea water play havoc with dyed hair. In short, she will have either to go through a great deal of bother to sustain one hair color; or, she will have to be frankly artificial and many different colors.

Some years ago, I went through the same throes of indecision which Joyce now suffers, and of the many times since, when I have congratulated myself on voting in favor of gray hair, two stand out. One was the time when I contemplated the iridescent blue-green tresses of a friend who was camping with me in Maine, and who was obliged to forgo her weekly visit to a Bar Harbor beauty parlor, after salt water had taken away much of the lovely golden sheen she affected. The other time was when I met, after 13 years, an older woman who had been coloring her hair for a long time.

Black ringlets around a 65-year-old face are not beautiful. The hair doesn't look like hair at all. The face doesn't look real. And when the person behind the hair and the face is a lovable human being, the principal reaction in the beholder is one of compassion. It takes twice as much effort, I should say, to feel "young and ardent and adventurous and desirable," (to quote your words), when face and hair are in continuous tell-tale conflict. My advice to Joyce is to look ahead a few years before deciding to dye her hair. Sincerely, M. G.

Germ-Killing Rays Developed By Westinghouse

Bloomfield, N. J.—Development of a new ultraviolet unit to combat the spread of colds and other airborne infections in homes, offices and schools by means of invisible germ-killing rays has been announced here by Dr. H. C. Rentschler, research director of the Westinghouse lamp division.

By irradiating the natural currents of air which circulate even in a closed room, the new ultraviolet unit is capable of exterminating approximately 75 per cent of all bacteria in a given area, according to Dr. Rentschler. In appearance, the fixture resembles a modern residential lighting fixture of the pin-to-wall type. It is of steel with ivory finish and is 42 inches long, 4 inches high and 5 inches deep. The bactericidal rays come from a slender, rod-shaped ultraviolet lamp called a sterilamp, which is concealed from view by a panel of frosted, ribbed glass.

"The new lamp was designed to meet the wartime problem of controlling the rapid spread of colds and other infections in over-crowd-home as well," Dr. Rentschler explained. Each unit, he said, will control an area from 100 to 150 square feet. Air circulating within that radius is sterilized as it passes in range of the ultraviolet light which is directed toward the ceiling.

The unit can be pinned to the wall wherever convenient, and plugged into an outlet, the same as an ordinary reading lamp.

Slenderizing Trick

For that slim, up-and-down look—up and down lines. One way is to accent the seams of a gored skirt with lines of narrow bilding in a color in contrast to the frock. This is managed cleverly in the coat dress of beige rabbit's hair which Dorothy Lovett wears in "Powder Town." Skirt gores are outlined with brown binding, matching the narrow brown piping on the bodice.

Shopping Stick a Victory Measure

Take Your 'Stick' to Market; Carry Home Your Parcels

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

"HAND me down my walking cane," is fast changing into "hand me down my shopping stick." This device is expected to be seen increasingly in Washington as women carry their own parcels as a victory measure to save delivery truck tires and conserve our paper supply.

Washington merchants are now inaugurating a campaign to enlist all shoppers in a movement to carry their own parcels.

This shopping stick will no doubt prove a blessing to the American housewife as it has to the London shopper. It is a walking cane contraption on wheels, with hooks attached for anchoring shopping bags.

And if you want to see shopping sticks "in person," go to the annual Flower Mart to be held on Friday at the Washington Cathedral, for they will make their Washington debut at that time. The hours will be from around 11 in the morning until 6 p. m.

The shopping stick is but one of the many items to be for sale at the Flower Mart. Among the edibles will be Crab Apple Jelly and Pear Preserves made from fruit grown in the Bishop's Garden. Mrs. Daniel Knowlton, chairman of the garden committee of All Hallows' Guild, which is sponsoring the Mart for the fourth consecutive year, has given me the recipe for these two sweets which will be sold on the Pilgrim Steps of the Cathedral.

The Crab-Apple Jelly was made from the fruit of the tree in the Bishop's Garden, given by Miss Elizabeth D. Long in memory of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Foster Long. Following is the recipe:

Crab Apple Jelly

Wash and quarter crab apples and cook until soft in 2 quarts of water to 1 of fruit. Let drip through coarse muslin bag but do not squeeze pulp. Measure the juice, let come to a boil, then add measure for measure of granulated sugar; stir until sugar dissolves and allow to cook at a rolling boil for about 15 minutes or until the jelly "sheets" from spoon. Crab apples jell very easily.

The lovely pear tree growing near the Wayside Cross was given to the Gardens by Mrs. Walter B. James of New York, in loving tribute to her 10 grandchildren. It is from this tree that the pears were taken to make the Pear Preserves that will also be for sale. The recipe by which they were made follows:

Pear Preserves

Peel, core and cut into quarters, 2 quarts of pears. Add 2 quarts of sugar, 4 slices of lemon, 1 stick of cinnamon, about 2 dozen cloves and pieces of ginger root or several slices of crystallized ginger. Let fruit stand for several hours or over night before cooking. Boil slowly until fruit is clear and then put into hot sterilized jars while the preserves are hot.

Fabric Gloves Important to Spring Attire

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

FABRIC gloves are an all-important item in the late spring and summer wardrobe. Pale tones and natural shades especially are coming into the limelight. These light shades require laundering after each wearing to look fresh and give that cool touch to dark cottons.

A recent edition of the Fashion Accessories magazine gives the following tips on washing fabric gloves, pointing out that all types should not be washed alike:

Average fabric gloves of cotton in white or light colors should be washed in lukewarm suds, on or off the hand. Squeeze the soap through the gloves, rubbing the soiled spots with the fingers. Rinse well in fresh, lukewarm water, squeeze out water, roll in a towel to blot excess moisture.

Drying Process

To dry, unroll the gloves from the towel and pull into shape. Pull the fingers up gently to avoid breaking the stitching. Dry in an airy, cool spot. Do not expose to the sun or radiator to prevent streakiness. Press into shape when slightly damp.

For quick drying place fabric gloves on glove forms or stuff them with tissue paper. The circulation of air throughout dries them more quickly.

Sheerer meshes, rayons, nylons and vinyons should be washed in lukewarm suds, working the suds into soiled portions with the fingers. Fabric should not be rubbed against fabric to prevent threads breaking.

Colored Gloves

Sturdy, colorful gloves must be washed in warm water with a mild soap quickly to prevent colors from bleeding. Do not soak. Rinse and dry as other fabric gloves.

Combination colored gloves or those with contrasting embroidery are washed and rinsed in the same way as other gloves but the moisture is blotted out. Do not squeeze, twist or roll in a towel. Stuff the gloves with paper to prevent contact of one fabric color with another.

Sturdy white gloves may be washed in hot water and plenty of soapsuds. Rub soiled spots with a soft brush, but not fabric against fabric.

Black, navy or brown gloves also should be washed frequently to keep them looking fresh and to retain their sweet odor.

Make a Gadget Out of Hatpins

Michele Morgan, the popular young French star, is involved in an artistic effort with bars of sealing wax, an amusing idea worth passing on.

At the dime store, Michele buys short hatpins with plain heads, bars of sealing wax in her favorite colors. She dips the heads of the pins in melted wax, allowing each coat to set before applying the next. She lets it solidify in odd shapes, no two alike. For some, she blends the colors, finding there are as many ideas as there are for coloring Easter eggs. After she has built up the heads to sizeable gadgets, she thrusts the pins into the front of a plain sailor hat, or wears them in clusters on her suit lapels.

Decorative, novel—and inexpensive.

Two-Century Old Gift to Be Returned to England; Envoy's Widow to Make Presentation at British Embassy Today

IN APPRECIATION of a gift from a Queen of England 213 years ago, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, widow of the former United States Ambassador to Great Britain, will present $1600 to the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, this afternoon.

He, in turn, will dispatch the gift to Lady Astor, who personally will present it to Queen Elizabeth for British war use.

The ceremony this afternoon will take place at the British Embassy at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Bingham, who will arrive in Washington this morning, will make the presentation in behalf of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, of which she is the Kentucky director. She is also national president of Bundles for Britain, Inc.

Lady Astor, the foundation's director for England, will turn over to Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, both the money and a letter from Mrs. Charles D. Lanier of Greenwich, Conn., president of the foundation. The complete gift will commemorate a significant page in the history of Anglo-American friendship.

Mrs. Robert W. Bingham

THE STORY, briefly, is this: Back in 1729, when Queen Caroline was reigning in England in the absence of her husband, King George II, she saw fit to make a restitution to Thomas Lee, a magistrate of Virginia. As a servant of the crown, Lee had imprisoned a band of criminals, several of whom escaped and set fire to Lee's home in Westmoreland County, Virginia. Complying with a petition in Lee's behalf, Queen Caroline sent him 300 pounds to help finance the building of a new home, Stratford Hall, which stands to this day.

Queen Caroline of Britain

Thomas Lee was the chief negotiator of the purchase of the Ohio Valley from the Iroquois through the Treaty of Lancaster. Residing at Stratford at the time of the American Revolution was Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee, the only brothers in the list of 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence. Light Horse Harry Lee, another Stratford dweller, led the fight for the ratification of the Constitution in the Virginia Assembly. Robert E. Lee, greatest hero of the South, was born at Stratford, and the place has been preserved as a revered patriotic shrine by the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation.

It is most fitting that Mrs. Bingham should make the gift presentation. She has known Queen Elizabeth since she was a girl. She is a charter member, as is Lady Astor, of the foundation, and when she was in England as wife of the Ambassador, she purchased a Charles Jervas portrait of Queen Caroline, which she brought to America and gave to Stratford Hall. It now graces the dining room of the historic mansion.

LAST SPRING the board of directors of Stratford voted to repay the 213-year-old compliment by returning the long-ago gift of Queen Caroline. A box, labeled the "Queen Caroline Fund," was set up beside her portrait at Stratford Hall and tourists shown through during the annual garden week contributed to the gesture. Today, the 300 pounds sterling is increased by about one-third—which might be considered interest on the "loan"—and the gift will be presented at a gathering witnessed by a number of directors of the foundation.

Arriving in Washington shortly before noon today, Mrs. Bingham will be at the Shoreham Hotel. Tomorrow, she will accompany Mrs. Harry B. Hawes to Stratford, where the foundation will have its annual spring meeting.

"Planning a luncheon for Mrs. Bingham tomorrow?" I asked Mrs. Hawes yesterday afternoon.

"Can't plan anything now," was the answer. "I'm in the throes of moving." And that's the first I had heard about the recent sale of the Hawes home on Fordham Road. Seems the place has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ellison, who have been living at the 2101 Connecticut Avenue. The Ellisons will move to their new home on Monday and Mr. and Mrs. Hawes on the same day will shift their belongings to 4822 Quebec Street.

MEANWHILE, Mrs. Hawes plans to spend most of the weekend at Stratford Hall, where an annual ceremony is scheduled to take place on Sunday afternoon. Each year a State delegation is in charge of the program. This season, it's Florida's turn, and Senator Claude Pepper is to be the principal speaker.

Among directors of the foundation, in addition to Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Hawes, who are expected to attend the ceremony at the British Embassy this afternoon and also the weekend meeting at Stratford Hall, are Mrs. Breckinridge Long of Washington, Mrs. Horace Vandeventer of Washington and Tennessee, Mrs. Peter Arrington of North Carolina, Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball of Indiana, Mrs. Harold Lee Berry of Maine, Mrs. Charles E. Bolling of Virginia, Mrs. William Cabell Bruce of Baltimore, Mrs. Frank H. Griffin of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Edbert Jones of Mississippi, Mrs. Charles W. Kellogg and Miss Helen Knox of New York City, Mrs. Walter D. Lamar of Georgia, Miss Elsie Packard of Maryland and Mrs. Walter C. White of Ohio. Also among those present will be Maj. Gen. B. F. Cheatham, superintendent of Stratford, and Mrs. Cheatham.

Louise Burke To Be Married On Saturday

Miss Louise Burke, whose engagement to Ensign Murat Williams, U. S. N. R., of Richmond, was announced just yesterday, will be married Saturday at 5 o'clock in All Souls Episcopal Church.

No date had been set for the wedding, when the engagement announcement was made; but a few hours later the couple decided to be married on Saturday. Plans for the ceremony were completed shortly afterwards.

Miss Margaret Burke will be maid of honor for her sister, and Mrs. Richard W. Emory of Richmond, another sister of the bride, and Mrs. John W. Burke, jr., will be her other attendants.

Ensign Williams will have his brother, Lieut. (j. g.) Armistead Williams, Medical Corps, U. S. N. R., as best man. The ushers will be Richard B. Williams, Air Corps, U. S. A., brother of the bridegroom; Lieut. (j. g.) Richard W. Emory, U. S. N. R., and Lieut. (j. g.) F. E. Nolting, jr., U. S. N. R., all of Richmond; Ensign John W. Burke, jr., U. S. N. R., of Washington; Lieut. (j. g.) Oren Root, jr., U. S. N. R., of New York City; Lieut. (j. g.) Harry F. Byrd, jr., U. S. N. R., of Berryville, Va.; Ensign Francis P. Brawley, U. S. N. R., of Greenville, S. C.; Ensign Henry A. Page, 3d, U. S. N. R., of Aberdeen, N. C., and Lieut. Robert C. Morton, U. S. N., of Norfolk.

Following the ceremony there will be a small reception at the home of the bride for the immediate members of the family.

Mme. Henry to Arrive Today

Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett will have as their guest in Washington for a time, Mme. Jules Henry, widow of the French Ambassador to Turkey, who will arrive in the Capital today from New York.

Mme. Henry, who will spend the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Garrett in their Virginia home, will be the Garrett's guest at the Sulgrave Club. Mme. Henry's late husband was well known in Washington where he served for many years as Counselor of the French Embassy here. He held a diplomatic post in Rio de Janeiro before becoming his nation's Ambassador to Turkey. He died less than a year ago at his post in Ankara.

Arnolds Entertain At Informal Fete For Mrs. Hauer

Inviting a group of friends out to their Virginia home for a buffet-supper last evening, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold assured them that there would be one major attraction—Mrs. Royall Hauer, sister of the hostess—and two minor attractions—the blooming lilacs and wistaria.

Ranking guests at the informal party were two Supreme Court justices and their wives, Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas. In the group were a number from Senatorial circles, a goodly representation of officialdom and a sprinkling of residentials.

Mrs. Hauer, who has been the house guest of her brother-in-law and sister for several weeks, will return to her home in Stamford, Conn., in a short time.

Party Planned for Mrs. W. I. Causey

Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter will entertain at cocktails this afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Porter's party will be in honor of Mrs. William I. Causey, wife of Captain Causey, U. S. N., who has recently arrived in Washington from California.

Mrs. Causey, however, is no newcomer to Washington, having been here on numerous occasions and is well remembered for her activity during the last war in organizing the first women's land army. In addition to honoring Mrs. Causey, Mrs. Porter's party will serve as one more link in the series of chain parties being given in the Capital for the benefit of the Save the Children Federation.

Among the guests will be Mrs. C. C. Windsor, Mrs. William Bride, sr., Mme. Michal Kwapiszewska, Mrs. A. H. Ferrandou, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Anderson Chenault Dearing, Baroness Von Rosenberg, Mrs. Frances Whitman, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Charles McEnerney, Mrs. Robert C. Jones and her sister, Mrs. Overton Bounds, of Oklahoma.

FRANK LLOYD DAVIS AND JACQUELINE ANN GOODHUE

Mrs. A. H. Goodhue has announced the engagement of her daughter, Jacqueline Ann, to Frank Lloyd Davis, son of Capt. and Mrs. D. S. Davis, of Coronado, Calif. The wedding will take place in Coronado on June 6.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of the late Capt. Wells Eldredge Goodhue, U. S. N., was graduated from St. Nicholas School for Girls, in Seattle, where she was a member of Lamda Theta Epsilon Sorority.

Mr. Davis is now attending the University of Southern California College of Dentistry. He is a member of Xi Psi Phi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternities.

Costa Rican Educator Honored At State Department Luncheon

Rogelio Sotela, secretary of the University of Costa Rica and former Governor of Puntarenas, and Senora Sotela were guests of honor at a luncheon at the Cosmos Club yesterday at which Charles A. Thomson, chief of the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department, was host.

Senor Sotela, who is at present secretary of the University of Costa Rica, is in this country on the invitation of the Department of State. While here he will visit a number of our educational centers and libraries. He is an outstanding literary figure in his native land; his latest work, a large one-volume anthology of Costa Rican prose and poetry, having just been published. A former deputy to the National Congress of Costa Rica, Senor Sotela has also been secretary of the Costa Rican Embassy in Peru. He has given lecture courses on Costa Rican literature at both the Inter-American Summer University and the University of Panama.

Other guests at yesterday's luncheon included the Minister of Costa Rica, Dr. Luis Fernandez, Miss Irene Wright, Miss Muna Lee, John Cabot, Murray Wise and Arturo Morales of the Department of State, Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union; Dr. Lewis Hanke and Dr. Crawford N. Mrs. A. R. Lawton Leaving for Atlanta

Mrs. Alexander Robert Lawton will leave today for her home in Atlanta, Ga., after spending a month in Washington. She has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Holdrege.

A number of parties have been given for Mrs. Lawton during her visit. Having come to the Capital frequently, she has a number of friends here.

Mrs. Ferguson Is Honored at Three Parties

Leaving Washington in a burst of social glory, Mrs. Walter Ferguson, who will return to her home in Tulsa, Okla., tomorrow, held the spotlight at three parties yesterday.

Mrs. George Mesta entertained at a luncheon in her honor at the Sulgrave Club, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Parker were hosts at a 5 to 7 o'clock party for the visitor in their home on Twenty-fourth street and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja feted the Oklahoman at a buffet supper in their home in Wesley Heights.

Mrs. Mesta, who is staying at the Sulgrave Club, has come to the Capital from her ranch near Phoenix, Ariz., and plans to be here about ten days. So enthusiastic is she about life "on the range" that she has decided to return there for the summer months instead of going to Newport, as has been her custom.

Guests dropped in informally to the Parkers' home yesterday afternoon to meet their house guest. Among the Oklahomans present were Senator and Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Representative and Mrs. A. S. Mike Monroney and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walker.

Diana Barton Selects May 16 As Wedding Day

When your fiance is in the Naval Reserve, wedding plans cannot be made too definite or too far ahead, but Miss Diana Jane Barton, daughter of Mrs. Albert Edward Barton, has gone so far as to choose May 16 for the date of her marriage to Midshipman Armistead Jones Maupin. St. Paul's Church in Alexandria will be the scene of the ceremony.

Her matron of honor will be Mrs. Thomas Sebrell, jr., and her maid of honor will be her sister, Miss Penelope Barton. Bridesmaids will be the bridegroom's sister, Miss Nancy Maupin, and another of the bride's sisters, Miss Jennifer Nell Barton.

The best man and ushers list must remain unsettled until later, but it is hoped that Mr. Maupin's brother, Lieut. Addison Maupin, will be able to obtain leave to serve as best man. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Alfred McGhee Maupin of Raleigh, N. C., and the late Mr. Maupin. He is at present in training for a commission at the Midshipmen's Training School at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. Before enlisting in the Naval Reserve, he was a practicing attorney in Raleigh.

Miss Marianne Popp Names Nuptial Day

Miss Marianne Popp, whose engagement to Charles Noyes Heckman was announced recently, has selected May 28 as her wedding day. The ceremony will take place in Pontiac, Ill.

Among the many pre-nuptial fetes at which Miss Popp has been honored was the shower Tuesday evening at which Miss Virginia Poindexter was hostess in her apartment at the York.

Late Afternoon Informal Events Accented by Two

The 5-to-7 hours yesterday brought with them two fetes, both informal. A visitor to Washington was the guest of honor at one; but at the other the "honored role" was left vacant, for the party was another one of a series of similar fetes the hostesses are giving.

Mrs. McKeldin Thorne was hostess honoring her mother, Mrs. John George Simmons, who arrived Saturday for about a week's visit. Mrs. Simmons is enroute to their summer home just outside of Boston, Mass., her husband having gone on ahead of her to prepare the way. Six months of the year they spend at Miami Beach, Fla., and the other six in Massachusetts.

The honored guest, however, has one more stop before she settles down for the summer. She will spend some time visiting another daughter, Mrs. Wilfred E. Shaw, in Stamford, Conn.

The other fete yesterday afternoon was that given jointly by Mrs. Sydney A. Cloman and Mrs. Kenney Phillips. The party was set for "after 5" and was one of a number being given at intervals by the hostesses this season.

Child Welfare Leaders Wait Parley Here

LEADING child welfare representatives of South and Central American countries will arrive in Washington during the weekend to attend the eighth Pan American Child Congress opening here Saturday at the Pan American Union. The congress—the first one to be held in the United States—will continue through May 9.

The District of Columbia will be represented by six of its members serving on committees and as individual representatives of the congress, according to announcement made yesterday by Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, and chairman of the organizing committee for the congress.

Seven of the previous Pan American Child Congresses have been held in Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, Peru and Mexico.

A Western Hemisphere movement to safeguard children in the war today and in the postwar world is the main objective of the congress. Committees of the congress will consider four fields of the general problems of safeguarding children in this hemisphere. These are essential service for mothers and children in wartime, protection of mothers and children in danger zones, plans for children in the postwar world and inter-American cooperation.

One session of the congress, strictly limited to official delegates, will be held at the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt will address the luncheon meeting on May 6, when the United States delegation will be hosts to delegates from the other American republics.

Philadelphia Missionary to Be Guest Speaker for Church Women Tomorrow

MRS. CORINE MENGES MACHETZKI is coming down from her home in Philadelphia to be guest speaker at the annual meeting tomorrow of the Washington Council of Church Women, 10:30 a. m., at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol Street. At the afternoon session she will discuss missionary work in South America, where she worked extensively in the Argentine and British Guiana.

After her marriage in 1933 to the Rev. Paul O. Machetzki, another missionary, she spent some time working among settlers from Europe in the Misiones Territory, many miles from Buenos Aires on the Brazilian border. East Indians as well as Arwak Indians of South America were among her parishioners.

Miss Etta Mai Russell

The session will open with reports by Miss Etta Mai Russell, executive secretary for the board of directors, and by Mrs. Richard A. Sauer, treasurer. Miss A. Barbara Wiegand will present a report of the budget.

A processional of the denominational representatives will be led by Mrs. Charles F. Jackson. Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, newly elected president of the organization, will speak on "Joining Hands With Ten Million Church Women."

Installation of officers and an address by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder will follow an offering of Christian unity by Mrs. Morgan. Luncheon at 1 p. m. will follow the morning meeting, after which Mrs. Machetzki will speak.

Zonta Club Holds Annual Banquet

NO DULL, routine business details marred the Washington Zonta Club's annual banquet last night in the Garden House at the Dodge Hotel. Reports of the year's work were in booklet form, one being laid at each member's place along with a souvenir. These could be perused at leisure at home.

Estelle Foster told how contributions from the club members were supporting 20 Chinese children who had been adopted for the duration. Others reporting on various projects of the club were Mabel Strider and Mrs. Helen T. Steinbarger, the incoming president, who was installed last night. Others installed at the banquet were Miss Kathryn Nelson Fox, vice president; Mrs. Alice Underwood, secretary, and Miss Florence E. Thompson, treasurer.

Mrs. Ethel Hess, retiring president, installed the officers in an original ceremony. Each retiring officer presented the incoming officer with a rose as Mrs. Florence Sindell sang "Only a Rose." Dr. Florence Marshall, vice president of the club, presented a set of sterling silver goblets to Mrs. Hess. The gift was from all members of the club.

P. E. O. Honors Charter Members

THREE charter members of chapter B, P. E. O. Sisterhood—Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins (first president), Mrs. William E. Andrews and Mrs. W. A. Overton—were honor guests at the fortieth anniversary celebration of the chapter Tuesday. The gala luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Carl T. Curtis, 109 Worthington Drive, Yorktown Village, Md.

Instead of the traditional birthday cake, a four-branched candelabra was used to denote the four decades of the chapter's history. The four candles, green for the first ten years, pink representing youth of chapter, blue for the peaceful period before this war, and gold personifying maturity, were lighted by Mrs. Overton.

Mrs. Robert H. Young, vice president, presided over the business session following the luncheon. Mrs. Eugene H. Pitcher, president of chapter B, is attending the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Fort Worth, Tex.

Veterans Unit Will Move More Activities to N. Y.

Veterans Administration will move more of its activities to New York. Yesterday it was announced that its Issue Sections would be transferred along with the Premium Accounts and Collections Division whose move was made public a week ago. A Veterans' spokesman explained that it was decided to move the Issue Sections because the original decentralization order didn't affect as many employes as had been anticipated. More than 1000 employes, most of them new, will be sent to New York. It's estimated that 3500 new employes will be hired in New York.

Both units to be decentralized are in the National Service Life Insurance Division. The division is now receiving applications for policies from the boys in the Army at the rate of 20,000 a day. Under present plans the policies will be issued, collections received, and accounts kept in the New York office, but the claims section will be maintained here. Veterans has agreed to keep a maximum of 6300 employes in the Washington office.

Paul McNutt is running into plenty of trouble lining up a staff for his man power commission that is agreeable to all factions. The line-up reported last night was: Fowler Harper, vice chairman; Arthur J. Altmeyer, Social Security Board chairman, executive officer, and Eric Nicol, chief of operations. McNutt would much prefer to have Gen. Frank J. McSherry as either executive officer or as chief of operations, but labor leaders are reported to be dead set against having an Army officer as operating head of the commission, no matter how capable he is. And McSherry is plenty capable.

As expected, Labor Secretary Perkins is reported to be needling McNutt. McNutt is said to have offered John Steelman, chief of Labor's efficient Conciliation Service, the job of executive officer, but he's reported to have turned it down and many suspect Miss Perkins had plenty to do with keeping him on his present job. The Labor Secretary also is understood to have protested against the proposed appointment of McSherry. She would have liked to have been appointed man-power czar herself.

May Not Get Judgeship

Alexander Holzoff, the Justice official, may not get that local judgeship after all. He has been recommended by Attorney General Biddle for the job, but the White House is understood to be peeved over the advance publicity . . . There are three jobs open, and reported to be under consideration are Interior Solicitor Nathan Margold, Commerce Solicitor South Trimble, William T. Kelley, general counsel of Federal Trade Commission, and Ed Rhetts, WPB official . . . Civil Service exams: machinist helper, $1080 to $1320; surveyman, $1440 to $1800, sheet metal worker and helper, $1260 to $1980.

Many moves are in the works. Coast Guard will be moved into the Farm Credit Building at 1300 E Street along with the old Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation. Maritime will get much more space in the Commerce Department Building. Board of Economic Warfare will be moved to Temporary T and U buildings when the Army Air Corps moves to its new building on the airport grounds. Alley Dwelling Authority will be moved from the Farm Credit Building to 1737 L Street. War Production Board will take over Railroad Retirement's building at Tenth and U Streets.

Man power commission has been assigned nearly 100,000 feet of space in the new Social Security Building. WPB will get the rest. War Department will be moved out. Office of Price Administration has been assigned the LaSalle Building at Connecticut Avenue and L Street. Census is now using the building to train 800 machine operators, but they'll be moved to Suitland . . . For no apparent reason, Justice limits annual leave to only two days even in some divisions where the work is slack . . . Clarence Marshall, Commerce information specialist, gave Byron Price, the censor, his first job with the Associated Press . . . Merle Fainrod, Harvard professor who helped on Government reorganization plans, has been appointed chief of OPA's Retail Trade and Service Division which covers the 10,000 local rationing boards.

Every Man to His Taste

Alexandria (Va.) police yesterday were searching for a man with a rare hangover. The lookout was posted when J. P. DuVinage, 317 South Lee Street, reported his home was broken into by an intruder who ignored valuable jewelry and cash but made off with a bottle of sweet vermouth and a can of beer.

Sub-Marginal Land

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told her press conference yesterday that Department of Agriculture experts whom she had consulted about planting a model victory garden, had reported that the White House ground was not good enough to grow vegetables. It is only good enough for lawns, the experts said, adding that if gardeners dug underneath they would find old bricks and rubble.

Counsel Ask Dismissal in Brutality Case

With motions that charged "vicious perjury" and "the most flagrant misstatements ever uttered at a trial," defense attorneys yesterday demanded that accusations of brutality be dismissed against Policemen James E. Stabler, jr., and Henry J. Martin.

Both motions were presented late yesterday after Assistant Corporation Counsel Fred C. Icenhower announced the completion of the trial board case against the two suspended Third Precinct privates.

Edward A. Dent, chairman of the board, said the motion would be taken under advisement and it was decided to adjourn the hearing until today, when it is expected that the defendants will testify in their own behalf.

At the beginning of yesterday's proceedings Dent announced that the board had decided to overrule two previous defense motions asking for the dismissal of specifications dealing with two complainants—Luther N. Sockwell and Cain Robinson.

Eleven Complaints

Eight specific counts of brutality were heard by the board yesterday before the hearing was continued. Two others had been heard on Monday and Tuesday, and an eleventh complaint was dismissed because of the death of the alleged victim, Sylvester Palmer.

James Hughes, attorney for Martin, presented the motion to dismiss a specification against his client regarding the alleged beating of Sockwell when that case was heard Monday. The motion was based on the fact that the complainant was present in the hearing room when Icenhower made the prosecution's opening statement.

The motion to dismiss the Cain Robinson charge was made Tuesday on the grounds that Robinson was unable to identify either of the two policemen he accused of assaulting him Labor Day, 1940.

Dent, District tax assessor, who is chairman of the three-man civilian board, denied both motions and informed counsel that the cases will be considered along with the others.

Absence of one Government witness, a 14-year-old boy, created a temporary furor in the afternoon when Icenhower suggested that the board hold the youngster "or whoever is responsible for his not being here," in contempt of the board.

Had Been Subpenaed

The boy, Eugene Nickens, had been subpenaed personally, it was said.

Icenhower, however, agreed to withdraw his demand for the contempt citation when the defense agreed to admit in evidence a signed statement made by the boy two days after he allegedly was struck on the leg by the two policemen.

Other victims accusing one or the other of the defendants yesterday were John Jackson, Ham Dykes, Callie Campfield, George E. Chinn, Grafton E. Williams, William Jackson and Leroy Lenox, all Negroes.

Each stated they were struck by the two officers during the night of September 2, in the Foggy Bottom section.

The officers have been suspended from the force since shortly after the attacks are supposed to have occurred and have undergone trial in District Court on assault charges. All cases against Stabler were dismissed at court and Martin was convicted for assaulting Sockwell. He was sentenced to a year in jail and is at liberty pending a review of the case by the Court of Appeals.

Marlene Dietrich Will Headline Ft. Meade Shows

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 29 (AP).—Film Star Marlene Dietrich will "meet the boys" and headline the USO shows at Fort Meade tomorrow, Friday and Saturday nights.

She will be met at a Baltimore railroad station tomorrow by Maj. Richard C. O'Connell, Third Corps Area morale officer, and be escorted to headquarters of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckford, area commander.

Miss Dietich will also visit soldiers in the Fort Meade Post Hospital.

Will Bradley, band leader now playing at the Hotel Roosevelt, Washington, will bring his band to the camp Saturday afternoon.

American U. Publications Chiefs Named

Editors and business officials of American University publications for next year were announced last night at the annual publications' banquet held in the school dining hall, where Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalism fraternity, tapped five new members.

The Eagle, student weekly, will be operated in 1942-43 by an editorial board composed of William Bosien, Silver Spring, Md., and Ted Sandler of Atlantic City. They succeed Walter D. Barkdull, jr., managing editor, and Marian Mattes, news editor. Ned Krousop was named business manager of the Eagle.

Belle Simon of Miami Beach, Fla., will edit the 1943 edition of Aucola, the university yearbook, succeeding Robert Shenton. The retiring business manager is Fred Carl, who will be succeeded by Ruth Gross. All selections were made by the school's publications board.

The new members of Pi Delta Epsilon, which sponsored the banquet, are John Abbadessa, Constance Barrows, Judson French and Gerry Weible, all of Washington, and Miss Simon.

W. D. Barkdull, sr., deputy administrator of the District defense savings committee and former newspaper advertising man, made the principal address at the banquet, discussing particularly the importance of advertising revenues in newspaper publishing.

Housing Ills Here Deplored By ADA Head

"The housing situation in metropolitan Washington is cause for deep concern," John Ihlder, head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, said yesterday in a talk before members of the Washington Housing Association. "There is urgent need for thousands of additional family dwellings," he said, "but their construction is postponed."

He said it is inevitable that thousands of dormitories will be built here and placed within easy access of the temporary office buildings. But he warned that these dormitories will not be adequate to last throughout the war. They are to meet the immediate six months' need.

Because of this he said it is essential that there be a balanced housing program for metropolitan Washington, "the most important war area in the country." That program will provide, he stated, dormitories, family dwellings of the demountable kind and permanent dwellings.

No one part of the program will meet our need, either temporarily or for the "long haul," he said. Ihlder stated that private enterprise cannot do the job alone.

John B. Blandford, jr., head of the National Housing Agency, outlined the progress of that organization and its objectives in the war effort. J. Bernard Wyckoff, president of the Washington Housing Association, presided at the meeting, which was held in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

14 Garden Clubs Will Seek Prizes At Flower Mart

Several innovations will mark the fourth annual flower mart tomorrow from 12 to 6 p. m. on the Pilgrim Steps of Washington Cathedral.

Fourteen garden clubs from the District and nearby sections will vie for prizes for most attractive booths, and there will be displays by the Red Cross and the American Woman's Voluntary Services.

Mrs. Richard Bissell is in charge of arrangements for the Red Cross exhibit, which will depict the camp and hospital work conducted by the Red Cross services for the armed forces. The mart is under the general direction of Mrs. George Garrett and her committee of 100 women.

Half Million May Sign for Sugar Ration

The 500,000 persons expected to sign up here for themselves and their families next week in the sugar rationing program must do so on certain days according to an alphabetical arrangement, Lawson J. Cantrell, District rationing supervisor, announced yesterday.

Those whose last name begins with the letters from "A" to "E" must register on Monday.

Those whose last name begins with the letters from "F" to "L" must register on Tuesday.

Those whose last name begins with the letters from "M" to "R" must register on Wednesday.

Those whose last name begins with the letters from "S" to "Z" must register on Thursday.

The general public during these days will visit 121 public school buildings throughout the city between the hours of 4 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Cantrell said that there are no boundary lines for the various schools in which registration is to take place. Individuals should, however, go to the school nearest their home.

Every person in the city, except members of the armed services and those confined to institutions, will be registered during these days for sugar ration books. Approximately 8000 volunteer workers will assist 3000 school teachers in the registration.

One adult member, 18 years or more, must appear to register for the entire family. However, it was said that individuals who are unable to go to the registration places may authorize in writing some one to register for them.

Those who come to the schools should have the following facts about themselves and about those for whom they register: their names, address, height, weight, color of hair and eyes, age, the amount of sugar, brown and white, owned by the family on the day of registration.

Whoever signs up must declare the amount of sugar on hand on Monday evening in the household. Two pounds will be allowed per person without removing stamps from "War Ration Book No. 1." For any amount above 6 pounds per person no ration book will be issued until the supply is diminished to 6 pounds or less.

After two days registration, Cantrell announced that a total of 3525 industrial users of sugar had enrolled. Far short of the estimated number predicted to sign up, he said the figures disclosed 1345 wholesalers and 2180 restaurant owners had registered.

House Votes 29½ Millions For Housing

Measure Authorizes Dormitory Funds Only; Family Dwellings 'Out'

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday an appropriation of $29,500,000 for war housing and public works in the congested and underequipped National Capital area.

Frowning on "families as usual" among Washington-bound war-workers, the measure authorizes housing funds only for the construction of dormitories to shelter single employes. A request for 18 million dollars to erect some 4000 family dwelling units was rejected by the Deficiency Appropriation Subcommittee before reporting to the House.

Allotted to the National Housing Administration and Federal Works Agency, pending Senate approval, are 12 millions for eight tentatively located dorms and $17,500,000 for such public projects as sewers, water facilities, schools, hospitals, highways and recreation.

Also cut out by the subcommittee in the process of whittling the appropriation down from the 50 millions originally authorized by the Lanham Act amendment were $2,500,000 from the public works funds—a reduction from 20 millions requested to the $17,500,000 allotted.

Lack of Testimony

Principal reason given for the deletion of the family dwelling units funds by Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the subcommittee which held hearings on the resolution, was a lack of "explicit testimony" on the intended use of the money.

The view that the NHA had presented insufficient information on the housing program was also indicated in the transcript of testimony taken at the hearings and made public yesterday.

"The data concerning these projects has been so nebulous and so uncertain," Cannon told NHA representatives at one point, "and so lacking in accuracy that no private board of directors would accept it as the basis on which to invest money."

Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (Republican), Massachusetts, also asserted during the brief debate on the resolution yesterday that the housing testimony was "just about as weak as possible."

Other Reasons Cited

Other reasons cited in the report and debate for restricting the housing program to dormitories were:

(1) Doubt that the need for such accommodations will exist after decentralization and rezoning measures have been resorted to.

(2) Doubt as to whether the NHA could get the requisite priority-ridden materials.

(3) A view that men coming to Washington to do wartime work might well make the sacrifice of leaving their families at home for the duration.

(4) A suggestion that private builders could provide permanent housing facilities required.

It was pointed out by Representative Fritz G. Lanham (Democrat), Texas, who authored the legislation providing authority for the program, that the total authorization for 50 million dollars still remains—permitting further appropriation should the need develop. Lanham asserted that his Public Buildings and Grounds Committee was "taking no exception" to Deficiency Subcommittee's fund-shaving.

Nor was exception taken by the FWA to the reduction in public works funds. It was pointed out that the deletion of family dwelling units from the building program would automatically reduce the need for new facilities.

Sites for the dormitories, as revealed in the transcript of testimony, show that the largest of the buildings is tentatively slated for Arlington Farms, Va., where rooms are to be provided for 6500 to 7500 workers. Second largest—housing from 3500 to 4500—is to be built at the Potomac Park Polo Field.

Others include a 2000-person dorm near the National Airport, one for 1000 persons at Suitland, Md., one for 1000 persons at the so-called stadium site on East Capitol Street, one for 880 persons at Third and Constitution Avenue—D. Fresh Music Plays Vital Role In War Effort, Says Kindler

With the manufacture and sale of recorded music drastically curtailed for the duration, it is more important than ever that living music should continue, Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, said yesterday, before leaving for Toronto, Canada, for two guest-conducting assignments. He will open the Promenade concerts, corresponding to Washington's Water Gate concerts, there on May 7.

Dr. Kindler's statement was made in reference to the National Symphony's drive for a $114,000 sustaining fund, the success of which will determine whether the orchestra will be able to continue through 1942-43.

"Of course," Dr. Kindler said, "recorded music is a marvelous source of solace, morale and propaganda, in the best sense of the word. But inasmuch as it is probable that this source will be cut off, or at least drastically curtailed, we need uncanned, fresh music more now than ever before."

People may smile at the idea that symphony music can mean a great deal to a nation at war, and, particularly, to members of the armed forces, he went on. "But," he said, "870 soldiers attended our last concert in Richmond, Va., last month, and each of them paid 35 cents to hear two great big symphonies—there was no 'pop' stuff at all."

Dr. Kindler also cited the reply of the British government to an English conductor who wanted to resign his post in order to fight, as further proof of the value of symphonic music in wartime. "The British government, which has felt the assault on the body far more than we have, wrote to this man, 'We want you to remember that we shall not fight any the better, no, nor as well, if we fail to maintain the very things we are fighting for'."

At last report, $41,760 remained to be raised in the Symphony drive, which closes next Wednesday, May 6.

Policeman's Car Kills Md. Boy, 4

John Caruso, Jr., Is Fatally Injured In Front of Home At Forest Glen

Four-year-old John Caruso, jr., was killed in front of his home near Forest Glen, Md., yesterday by an automobile driven by a Montgomery County (Md.) special police officer.

The child, who lived at 1604 Seminary Road, was pronounced dead at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, where he was taken by a passerby and Officer John A. Smith, who was driving the car which struck the youngster, according to County Police Chief Andrew M. Newman.

After a preliminary investigation of the accident by Montgomery police officials, a technical charge of negligent homicide was placed against Officer Smith pending a hearing. Chief Newman said Officer Smith, who was off duty at the time, was driving with his own child in his car when he apparently lost control of the vehicle.

Questioning of Officer Smith was postponed until today because he was "in such a nervous condition," Chief Newman said. The charge against the officer was "a technical one and in accordance with the usual practice in deaths caused by auto accidents, the police chief added.

The child was struck several feet off the side of the road, according to the police report. Blood stains were in the driveway leading to the house. There is no pavement at this point.

Angry Grocer Decides To Stop Sugar Sale

Hagerstown, Md., April 29 (AP).—The various wartime emergency registrations finally got one rural storekeeper's goat—so he's decided "I won't bother selling sugar."

When the ration board office here told the grocer he'd have to sign up at the high school, the man said "this is too much trouble."

"Yesterday I registered for selective service," he said, "and next week I've got to register as an individual sugar consumer, and it's all taking up too much of my time."

WASHINGTON DEFENSE

Defense Staff Will Exhibit Model Center

District Civilian Defense officials, from United States Coordinator John Russell Young down to the smallest Boy Scout messenger, will portray themselves on the stage of the departmental auditorium today in two performances of the Army Civilian Defense's model control center operation.

The control center itself will be set up on the stage, and at various places in the auditorium six dummy switchboards, representing warden posts, will be manned by sector wardens from the Stanton Park civilian defense area.

Hypothetical calamities, all occurring in the Northeast section, will be postulated to these wardens, who will make appropriate reports to the chiefs of service through the control center.

Besides Young, who will play commander, Maj. Edward J. Kelly will be police chief, Stephen Porter, fire chief; Clement Murphy, chief air warden; Dr. John A. Reed, chief of medical service, and Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director—the same roles they will play in a real air-raid. All other protective service chiefs will also participate in their own parts.

The performances, at 3 and at 8 p. m. are designed to give in a compressed and visible form, the overall picture of what the communications system does in real and practice blackouts.

The afternoon performance is especially for the civilian defense chiefs in Federal and District government buildings, apartments, stores and industrial buildings. The evening show is for the deputy wardens and members of the various civilian defense services, but both performances are open to anyone.

Col. Thomas H. McHatton, commanding officer of the United States Army's Civilian Defense School at College Park, Md., will conduct the demonstration. Henry Baukhage and Morgan Beatty, radio commentators, will act as masters of ceremonies.

First Lady to Get Honorary Degree From Md. College

Chestertown, Md., April 29 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be one of three women awarded honorary degrees at the Washington College commencement May 25, Dr. Gilbert W. Mead, president of the school, announced today.

Mrs. Roosevelt, the commencement speaker, will receive an LL. D., Dr. Mead said. Sophie Kerr, noted novelist and short-story writer, and Mary Adele France, head mistress of St. Mary's Female Seminary, Leonardtown, Md., will be awarded the degree of doctor of literature. Miss France is a graduate of the class of 1900.

Dr. Mead said it was the first time in the history of the school honorary degrees had been awarded to women. The college this year is celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of coeducation at the school.

Governor O'Conor is scheduled to present diplomas to approximately 60 seniors at the commencement ceremony and Dr. Mead will present the honorary degrees.

Southwestern Va. Forest Fires Seen Under Control

By the Associated Press

Fires which burned extensive areas of timber in southwest Virginia in the last three weeks were believed to be under control yesterday after scattered showers came to the aid of the weary firefighters.

N. Clarence Smith, chairman of the State Conservation Commission, said from the fire front in Bland County that "everything here is just about under control, and it looks like we're going to get some sleep for a change."

A survey, he said, indicated that Bland County was the worst sufferer, having some 18,000 acres burned over. More than 40,000 acres of forest and woodland in southwest Virginia were burned in the last 10 days.

Victory Sidelights

Washington Youths Progress In Various Branches of Army

Washingtn men were well represented in Army advancements throughout the country yesterday, according to the latest Army press releases.

Gail Richard Holmes, a former student of Bullis Prep School here, has begun to take his preflight training at Maxwell Field, Ala. Cadet Holmes was District junior golf champion in Washington in 1938.

Irving Fox, a graduate of George Washington University, has been commissioned as first lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps of the Army Medical Corps at Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico. Lieutenant Fox was the winner of a scholarship to Iowa State College where he received a degree as doctor of philosophy in 1941. For the past year, he has been teaching biology at the University of Puerto Rico.

Four members of the 121st Engineers, former D. C. National Guard unit, have begun a three months' officer candidate course in the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. They are Sergt. Charles A McAleer, a former employe of the Washington Star; Sergt. Arthur Snee, formerly with the W. R. Winslow Paint Co.; Staff Sergt. Leroy McMullen, who was foreman of the National Guard Rifle Range here; and Corpl. Aubrey W. Wayland, who worked for the Bureau of Prisons. All four were inducted into the service in 1941.

First Aid Courses At Jewish Center

First Lady Advocates Women in Services

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt believes that the proposed Women's Auxiliary and Navy Reserve Corps should be parts of the armed forces.

At her press conference yesterday, she said she did not understand how the auxiliaries could be out of the armed forces and at the same time a part of them subject to discipline and receiving military pay. They might be branches of the services Mrs. Roosevelt said, but still must be a part of them.

The Army Corps bill passed by the House was recommitted in the Senate after debate on making it part of the Army, instead of providing that the women would serve with but not in the Army. The Navy bill, also passed by the House, would put the sailorettes into the Navy.

Murphy Gives Ultimatum to Defense Units

Civilian defense committees have until 6 o'clock tonight to complete the organization of sector and warden posts. After that, according to orders from Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy, the deputy wardens "move in."

The committees, which were named at mass meetings last fall, were supposed to make nominations for wardens in the 370 zones and 2410 sectors into which Washington is divided for civilian defense organization. But Murphy estimated two weeks ago that the warden service was only 70 per cent organized.

Maps showing the exact boundaries of the zones and sectors also were requested of the committees, and will be drawn up by the deputy wardens if not received before tonight. Most of these have already been filed, but there are several still defaulting. The zones have roughly the same boundaries as citizens' associations.

Murphy's original order preceded by one day orders from the Third Defense Area headquarters in Baltimore that gaps in the defense organization must be filled immediately because reprisal bombings of the East Coast "by the ally of Japan" were expected.

England Prepares Own Invasion, Britisher Asserts

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

England is not now preparing to repel an invasion, but to launch one —"at the proper time."

For "the offensive spirit is very much alive in England today." And while the little island expects heavy Nazi retaliation on British cities for the constant R. A. F. bombings of German-held industrial areas on the continent, she is full ready for it.

These confident statements came yesterday from Ronald Tree, member of Parliament and Parliamentary Private Secretary in the Ministry of Information in London. He is on a survey trip of the United States.

Officials Dissatisfied, N. Y. Dims Lights

New York, April 29 (U.P.).—Midtown New York, including Times Square theater district, turned its lights down low tonight after learning that authorities generally were dissatisfied with lighting conditions last night, the first on which the Army's dimout orders went into effect.

Big advertising "spectaculars," brightly lighted upper windows and hotel signs were dark, and much of the glare caused by massed electric and neon signs was gone from the sky above "the Great White Way."

MacLeish Becomes ASCAP Member

New York, April 29 (AP).—Archibald MacLeish, a poet and director of the Office of Facts and Figures, today was elected a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Gene Buck, former president, was named by the board of directors to a consultant and advisory post at an annual salary of $25,000. He was given a 15-year contract.

The board also announced that General Manager John G. Paine hereafter would have full authority to conduct the business of A. S. C. A. P., subject to the approval of President Deems Taylor, the executive committee and the board of directors.

Police Help as Negroes Occupy Housing Unit

Detroit, April 29 (AP).—Protected by armed State troops, State and city police, and jeered by neighboring white residents, Negro families today began occupying the one-million-dollar Federally sponsored Sojourner Truth housing project in northeast Detroit, scene of bloodshed two months ago.

In contrast to rioting between Negroes and whites near the 200-unit project February 28, in which nearly a score of persons were injured, there was no violence today. At least 15 persons, including 6 Negroes, were taken into custody as police dispersed picket lines as quickly as they formed. All were released after questioning.

With Shirley Povich

Spring is here, and you don't have to look at the calendar to verify it. Merely glimpse the American League standings and you'll find the Cleveland Indians on top, a surer sign of spring than the astronomers' vernal equinox. A trinity hard to put asunder is late April, the Indians and the league lead.

POVICH

Life is always at its best in Cleveland in the spring. The ball team blooms, fish leap in the stream and there is a bounce to the step of Clevelanders. Pennant hopes well within. But can summer be far behind? That's when the ball team wilts, the manager wants to leap in the stream and the footsteps of the good burghers are heavy with the thoughts of a league lead lost.

In the best traditions of Cleveland managers, Rookie Lou Boudreau has the Indians out in front in late April, and at last reports was operating with a 10-game winning streak. Nor war, nor blackouts nor the loss of Bob Feller can seemingly halt the perennial spring stampede of the Indians. Without looking, we seem to know that the Cleveland sports pages are already acclaiming the Indians as pennant winners. They always do in the spring.

Equal to Any Spring Wonders

The Indians were on just such a winning streak last spring when one Cleveland baseball writer cooked up a pretty sentence that he was forced to devour before the month was out: "The Indians," he wrote, "are in the saddle and running the American League race to suit themselves." That same week the Yankees bumped them off three straight and the race was being run to suit the Yankees. The Indians ended the season not as the pennant winner but with merely a half-interest in fourth place after failing to play .500 ball.

There are no wonders, however, that the Indians seemingly cannot accomplish in the spring. They weren't supposed even to enjoy their brief sojourn at the top this year what with Bob Feller in a Navy uniform and Hal Trosky retired to civil life with a pounding headache. But, sans Feller and Trosky, there the Indians are, in their accustomed spot at the top, outbreaking everything in the league, as if first place in the spring were their heritge, as it probably is.

The suspicion is that young Boudreau may have, indeed, worked some kind of magic on his Cleveland athletes and that their league lead may endure longer than usual this year. This Cleveland club seems to have a bounce that other Indians didn't own. In the past, the Indians slid out of contention on the wings of their first losing streak. This year, the Indians lost their first four games in a row and bounced back with a ten-game winning streak. Perhaps Boudreau has done a job on 'em.

The amazing part of the show the Indians are staging is there pitching which was supposed to be wrecked by the absence of Feller. To the contrary, the Indians have been getting the best pitching in the league. The fellow who has been keeping the Indians up there is big Jim Bagby who now owns three impressive victories in his first three starts of the season. Bagby was supposed to be a good pitcher when he was with the Red Sox, but he never was able to untrack himself and joined the Indians last year happy to be away from the methods of Joe Cronin, who has never been famous for handling pitchers.

Indians' Infield Good as Yankees'

No mean factor in the Indians' early success is Boudreau, himself. Aside from whatever inspiration that intelligent young man has provided the club with his passion for hustle, Boudreau does a considerable job of it himself at shortstop. He's the best defensive shortstop in the league, and when he teams with Ray Mack at second base, Boudreau gives the Indians a fielding combination that concedes nothing to the famed Yankee pair of Phil Rizzuto and Joe Gordon. The play of the Cleveind infield is a tremendous lift to their pitchers.

Two of Boudreau's rookie experiments have clicked nicely. At first base where he installed Les Fleming, a 414-hitting recruit from Nashville, Boudreau has been getting consistent hitting power. And in the outfield where he stationed Oris Hockett, another product of the Nashville club, Boudreau has no complaints. Hockett, Jeff Heath and Roy Weatherly give the Indians their best-balanced outfield in several seasons.

My man on the Cleveland club, though, is Ken Keltner, who so far outstrips every other third baseman in the league that it is no contest for the honors. Keltner not only is the best fielding third baseman but he is the biggest batting threat among 'em and we'd say he's the best ball player on the club.

Why, then, can't the Indians stay up there? The historians say for a picture of the future, look into the past. The Indians always blow. Nine of their first 12 games were against the weaker Western Division clubs. That may be the tip-off.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 29.—Sportin' around.

Why are we picking Alsab to win the Derby? That's simple, Cholmondaley: The colt's name begins with A, which we understand is the first letter of the alphabet; Alsab has five letters and hasn't won in five starts as a 3-year-old; L stands for lightning, S for speedy, A for effort and B for before we go much farther we'd better get hot. Need anything else to convince you that our system is infallible?

CONSIDINE

In keeping with the decision of the New York tracks to give $500,000 to the war effort, if they get the $500,000, we herewith offer to give a cool million: If Uncle Aloysius gets off the dole, strikes it rich and leaves it to us . . . we think Babe Ruth would be a sensation in uniform. He's still the most arresting figure in sports . . . A press release from West Point, listing the men who won major A's for athletics at the military academy, shows one D. MacArthur, cited for baseball in 1903, and one J. W. Stilwell, cited for football in 1904. Doing pretty well, the talk is.

Our recent blast on ticket scalping, of course, was not aimed so much at the legitimate brokers as at the fly-by-night boys who set up their business in side-street "fruit-stores," or under their hat, and flout the law while removing the toupees of native and visitor alike. The legitimate guys, who say they want aid in policing their business, hope to drive the others out of business by legislation—or protect themselves from the fly-by-nighters. Where the public will wind up in this struggle is up to the public.

Adolf Hitler will be pleased to learn that the United States Navy suffered a double loss in a recent (and successful) pounce on a Nazi sub: Two medicine balls lost overboard during top-deck calisthenics. . . . Tom Smith, the practically mum, but not dumb, trainer of Charley Howard's horses, thinks that some untouted 3-year-old will come along to win the Derby and become 3-year-old champ of 1942. Looks like a great spot for Radio Joe.

The Gehrig picture close-ups will show Gary Cooper taking cuts at the ball, and fielding an occasional onion, but when the camera gets far enough away "Gehrig" will be your old pal, Babe Herman. Babe Ruth, who plays the difficult role of George Herman Ruth, blew some of his lines so they helped him a la Barrymore by printing out his speeches on a blackboard out of range of the camera. The recently taken sequences utilizing Jim Farley and Mayor LaGuardia came out swell. The mayor was so overcome by it all (he plays the part of the Mayor of New York) that the part almost ran away with him. It was explained to him that all he had to do was make some gestures and move his lips: That his voice would be taken off a newsreel of Gehrig day, that still incredibly dramatic testimonial to Lou. Instead, the mayor launched into a fine speech about Lou, despite the fact that silent cameras were trained on him. Seven retakes. Seven speeches.

Lo! The Poor Indians. Losing Feller certainly kicked their heads in. They had won nine straight up until yesterday . . . The reports persist that Branch Rickey will split with Sam Breadon after this season. If no baseball job shows up for Branch, there ought to be a place in the suddenly awakened horse-trading business for him—after selling Dean, Medwick, Mize, etc., for upwards of $300,000, without hurting the team. . . . Those who like to abuse the Dodgers are taking delight in the fact that on their invasion of the West they rode in the car immediately behind Ben Whitaker's Requested and William Woodward's Apache.

Wonder what will become of the baseball salaries of higher priced stars who run restaurants, bowling allies, etc., on the side? For instance, if Joe DiMaggio clears $25,000 out of his restaurant next year, will he have to play for the Yankees for nothing—or turn over all of his Yankee salary? . . . Nobody ever dropped out of the sports pages more completely than Bill Terry. . . . Even the Penn Relays seem colorless, compared to indoor track meets.

Worsham Wins Golf Driving Event

Lewis Worsham, jr., the Burning Tree pro who has won the only two pro sweepstakes played here this year, came away with two of the three War Savings Bond prizes in the East Potomac driving range opening last night.

Worsham smacked a drive 307 yards to outdistance such long-hitters as Cliff Spencer, Charlie Malone, Eddie Ault, Claude Rippy, Buddy Sharkey, Bill Rohrey and Jack Donahue.

Joseph Kotman, an amateur, won the approaching contest by hitting a short iron short 4 ft. 3 in. from the pin from 140 yards out. Worsham was second, 5 ft. 6 in., and host pro Al Jamison third and fourth. There were only two prizes, however.

Nats' 15-Hit Attack Beats White Sox, 10-4

Chicago Held To Four Hits; Zuber Stars

Hudson, Wild, Taken Out; Vernon Slams Homer; Double by Early Ends 4-4 Tie

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats have found somebody they can lick twice in a row. They poured it on the White Sox like bullies yesterday after some delay, occasioned by four Chicago runs that tied the score in the sixth, and swatted Bill Dietrich for a 10-to-4 victory.

The White Sox were in the ball game as late as the seventh inning despite the fact that they were rationed to four hits for the afternoon while the Nats were spraying the premises for 15. A wild spell by Sid Hudson in the sixth inning ended his attendance at the contest and cost him credit for the ultimate Washington victory.

Bill Zuker took charge after Hudson's unceremonious exit in the midst of the four-run Chicago uprising. The Zuber man thereafter tossed 3 2/3 innings of hitless ball at the White Sox and was the winning pitcher.

Spence Opens With Hit

The Nats' most important run was none of the four they scored in the third inning, nor none of the five they slammed home in the eighth. It was a lonesome seventh-inning run which broke the 4-4 tie and produced coheroes in Stan Spence and Jake Early. Spence opened that seventh inning with one of his three hits of the day, a single to centerfield and languished on first when Mickey Vernon took a third strike in high disgust. He moved to second on a wild pitch and to third when First Baseman Murrel Jones took a hit away from Bruce Campbell. Then it was that Early dragged his bat to the plate with a hitting average which at the moment, read .150 for the season, and thumped a two-bagger into short leftfield for the decisive blow of the ball game.

Mickey Vernon was present also at the ball game. For the second time in two days he slugged a home run over the right-field wall. This one occurred with Spence on base and was the highlight of a five-run assault in the eighth that knocked all the game-winning notions out of the White Sox.

George Case Singles

George Case, who had a considerable day of it, what with four consecutive hits, including a double and a stolen base, set in motion four Washington runs in the third inning when he singled to left for the Nats' first hit of the game. Spence scored him all the way from first with a double to left, Vernon singled to right to score Spence, Campbell beat out an infield hit, Early's infield out scored Vernon and a bit later Repass singled to drive in the fourth run of the inning.

The Nats' eighth inning explosion was touched off by a miserable fumble of Zuber's grounder by Kolloway. Then followed five consecutive hits. Case doubled to left,

Consensus Derby Choice Is Devil Diver

By Jack Guenther
United Press Staff Writer

Louisville, Ky., April 29.—Through the far reaches of the stable area along the barns behind the backstretch the shrewd, sharp-eyed gentlemen who make racing their business agreed today that the horse who can beat a big bay beauty from Greentree Farm is the horse who will win the sixty-eighth Kentucky Derby.

The trainers give you Devil Diver as the horse to beat.

He isn't what you would call a "big" horse, a glamor horse or even a favored horse with the public, but the husky son of St. Germans is the horse on whom 15 rival stables are cocking their sights. Slam home ahead of him, the trainers say, and you've slammed home ahead of them all.

From the corner of Churchill Downs occupied by Milky Way Farm to the big barn which houses the hopes of Valdina Farm, the men who know horses best are certain that if they can whip Devil Diver the $75,000 Derby pot is theirs. A few of them still lean toward Requested, but on a 2-to-1 ratio they fear the Greentree baby the most.

All Like Diver

Ben Jones, the boss of Calumet Farm who won with Lawrin in 1938 and with Whirlaway last year and will be shooting for a third triumph with Sun Again, says he has seldom seen a horse "work faster or more impressively than that St. Germans colt." Plain Ben says there are others who will make trouble, too, but not nearly as much as the Diver.

Roy Waldron, who sneaked Milky Way's Gallahadion home to a narrow upset over Bimelich two years ago, says his Dogpatch has a chance

Cleveland Extends Lead to 2 Games By Win Over A's

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 29.—The red-hot Cleveland Indians stretched their winning streak to ten in a row today by coming from behind to beat the Athletics, 11 to 6.

The victory gave the first place Indians a two-game lead over the New York Yankees who lost again to the St. Louis Browns.

Roy Weatherly started the game by blasting a 3-2 pitch by Phil Marchildon over the right field wall for a homer, but it took a six-run uprising in the fourth to saw up the contest.

The six-run outburst came after the A's had fashioned a 3-1 lead in the second on four consecutive hits by Elmer Valo, Pete Suder, Marchildon and Mike Kreevich.

Les Fleming started Cleveland's big fourth with a single to left. Then Marchildon lost control and walked Lou Boudreau, Ray Mack and Gene Desautels, forcing home Fleming. Al Milnar brought home Boudreau with an outfield fly. Weatherly doubled to center, scoring Mack and Desautels, Oris Hockett's pop fly fell for a Texas League single. Kenny Keltner sent Marchildon to the showers by singling to center, scoring Weatherly and Hockett. Jeff Heath greeted Fred Caligiuri with a single, but Fleming and Boudreau were infield outs.

The A's knocked Milnar out of the box in the fourth, but Joe Heving came in to pitch excellent relief ball, giving up only two runs in the eighth on Suder's homer,

Hassett's Home Run Futile in Yankees, 2d Straight Defeat

By the Associated Press

New York, April 29.—The New York Yankees were given their worst drubbing of the season today as the St. Louis Browns stormed to an 11-to-6 victory, their second in succession over the world champions after losing nine in a row in the West.

As a result the Yanks dropped into third place in the American League, half a game behind the Detroit Tigers.

Manager Joe McCarthy revised his batting order, one of the changes sending Buddy Hassett to first base in place of long Ed Levy, who had hit .122 till today. Hassett notched a home run in the third for the Yanks' first score, but otherwise the champs' attack was puny.

Dennis Galehouse allowed eight hits and errors helped the Yanks get two of their tallies.

On the other hand Walt Judnich hit two homers and Glenn McQuillen one in an 11-hit assault on four New York hurlers. The Browns had two three-run innings and another good for four.

Stake Winner Found Doped, 2 Suspended

By the Associated Press

New York, April 29.—The New York State Racing Commission announced today the suspension for 30 days of A. G. Robertson and Ernest Edgarson, trainer and groom of Waller, winner of the Excelsior Handicap at Jamaica on April 18.

The action was taken at a formal hearing following detailed inquiry after an official saliva test, taken after Waller's race had disclosed the presence of benzedrine. The testimony, however, showed no participation in the drugging by either Robertson or Edgarson.

The ruling is in conformity with the tradition of the turf and the rule of the commission and the Jockey Club, that the trainer and groom are always responsible for the condition of horses in their care.

Waller's share of the Excelsior Purse will be paid to the Barrington Stable, owner of Olympus who finished second. Boysy, who finished third, will be given second money, and Sir Jeffrey, originally fourth, will be placed third in official records and given the third horse's share.

All horses now in Robertson's hands as trainer, will be barred from racing during tht suspension until transferred to another trainer approved by the racing commission through Francis P. Dunne, presiding steward.

The winner's share of the Excelsior Purse was $8,775.

Wynn Vs. Lyons Today as Nats and Chisox End Series

Rookie Early Wynn, probationally restored to good standing on the Nats' staff after two unimpressive starts, will face the Chicago White Sox today in the finale of the current three-game series at Griffith Stadium.

Wynn has been withheld from action since his last dismal performance against the Athletics when Manager Bucky Harris declared the chunky right hander was not in condition.

Today, Wynn' pitching opponent will be 41-year-old Ted Lyons, now in his twentieth season with the only big league club he ever played with.

Police Commissioner Makes Announcement As Part of Program To Dim-Out Coast

By Bob Considine

New York, April 29.—Night baseball, which President Roosevelt called for in abundance just before the start of the season, will almost certainly be canceled in New York, Brooklyn and coast line cities within the Second Corps Area.

Charged with enforcing the dim-out regulations recently put into effect by Maj. Gen. Irving J. Phillipson, Second Corps Area commander, New York Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine said late today that baseball and other nocturnal sports events would be "affected" along with all other illuminations which might serve as a beacon for an enemy offshore.

Earlier in the week baseball officials in this area had been given soothing assurances by Army authorities that even in the midst of the blackouts that the lights at the Polo Grounds, Ebbets Field, Rupert Stadium in Newark, Roosevelt Stadium in Jersey City and other parks would not be doused.

Lights Can Be Seen

But when the Army today formally turned over to the police department the task of trimming the lamp wicks of the world's brightest region, Valentine quickly removed the tacit deferment which baseball and sports in general were expected to enjoy.

"The dim-out regulations will naturally affect baseball and other sports at night," Valentine asserted, "being that lights used at night can be seen above the horizon."

The Office of Civilian Defense has been given the task of policing the police. It will serve as a liaison between the Army and the law-enforcement body, report flagrant violations of dim-outs to either

Samaritan Gives $200 for Soldiers' Boxing Tickets

An anonymous party has donated $200 for the purchase of tickets to the Navy Relief boxing show and he asks that the tickets be distributed to the men in uniform. This fine gesture was followed by offers of others who want to help, that service men stationed nearby may see the May 21 show at Griffith Stadium.

Tony Neri, Post boxing writer, who has added $10 to the fund, will buy the first block of tickets Tuesday when they go on sale. If any readers care to donate, they can mail any amount (no matter how much) to The Post Sports Department. Soldiers, sailors and marines will enjoy seeing that fight card.

Mrs. Meckley Takes Gross With 81-85

Kenwood Shotmaker Wins 1st Local Cup With 159 Net Total; Mrs. Olney Second

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. H. W. Bashore, who had to be persuaded by a clubmate to enter the tournament, won the eleventh renewal of the Keefer Cup play yesterday at Chevy Chase with a two-day gross total of 191, minus a combined handicap of 32 for a net score of 159.

After an erring out nine of 51 Mrs. Bashore came back in 43, one of the lowest nines of the day over the long, watered layout, and took advantage of high scoring in general to win her first tournament in three years of local competition. The new champion has been playing at Kenwood in that time and reduced her handicap from 25 to 18 to be eligible for the Class A play.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley went up four strokes from her opening 81 but was an easy winner of gross honors with 81—85, 166. Mrs. W. R. Stokes, the District champion, came back with the best round of the day, an 83, but an opening 89 left her at 172 while Mrs. Myron Davy ran into a seven- an eight and three-putted five greens to soar to 90 and a 173 count.

The first day's leader, Mrs. George H. Bailey, jr., found all sorts of trouble and finished out of the prize list by adding an even 100 to her opening 88 and deducting a two-round 20 handicap allowance for 168. Mrs. Bailey was virtually out of the running as she turned the first nine in 52 strokes.

Tie for Second Low Net

Mrs. A. C. Olney, of Army and Navy, and Mrs. Meckley tied for second low net but Mrs. Meckley was the gross winner and left the former alone at second place with a 94 and 96, minus 14 handicap strokes each day for 162.

Mrs. Ed Widmayer, Argyle Club champion, and Mrs. Max Taylor of Manor tied for third, with Mrs. Widmayer winning out by matching cards. Mrs. Widmayer had 98—95, 28, 165, and Mrs. Taylor 99—102, 36, 165.

Mrs. Walter L. Weible, the District Women's Golf Association president from Kenwood, was in the thick of contention for the big cup as she played the first nine in 45 strokes, but she required 56 coming back for a second straight 101 and a net score of 168. Mrs. Weible won by matching cards over Mrs. Stokes for the fifth and last net prize, the latter trying with 172—6, 166.

Saving-Stamp Prizes

All prizes except a replica of the big cup, given by the donor, Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, were in war savings stamps. Host Pro Bab Barnett insisted that the prizes scheduled to be purchased in the golf shop be turned into defense stamps.

Mrs. Bashore was in fourth place at the end of the first day's play with a 97-16, 81, as she also had trouble with the first nine in turning in a 51-46. After getting over a four-putt green on the first nine yesterday the Kenwood player settled down to a consistently good performance on the back nine to take the cup to the River Road Club for the first time.

Mrs. Meckley, in starting the season as she left off last year, by dominating the gross scores in the medal tournaments, was spotty from tee to green but was right at home on the putting greens and saved gross honors with strokes to spare. Mrs. Davy could never get going while Mrs. Stokes had an excellent round but was too high the first day. Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, was the only other entrant with a comparatively low gross total with 85 and 90.

Devil Diver Consensus Derby Choice; Liked by Other Stables

—maybe a real good chance. It will take a lot of luck to win this Derby, Waldron claims, "but if you are looking for the really solid horse it is either Devil Diver or his stablemate, that Shut Out."

Frankie Catrone, the tiny former jockey who is now head man for Valdina, is convinced that his Valdina Orphan is the winner, but he, too, agrees that the Texas-bred has his work cut out before he can make a triumph official. "We got to beat Greentree, I guess, and that may be a real tough job if Devil Diver runs like he has indicated he will."

Almost to a man, the sentiment was the same. Dick Handlen of Foxcatcher Farm is shooting with Fairy Manah. Young Lex Wilson hopes to pull an upset with Sweep Swinger. Ben Whitaker and Blakie McCoole are riding on their game little Requested. Pinky Grimes expects to win with his rheumatic With Regards. But they all fear Greentree.

The powerful stable owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney will start both Devil Diver and Shut Out on Saturday, and while the entry may or may not be favored in the betting, it is the most potent threat in the race. Devil Diver's sire, St. Germans, sent two other sons to a Derby triumph. They were Twenty Grand—remember him? and Bold Venture. Shut Out's sire was Equipoise, who was knocked out of the Derby itself by a last-minute injury, but which needs no introduction in racing circles.

Again these two will go Valdina Orphan and Hollywood, Requested, Sir War, First Fiddle, Sweep Singer, Boot and Spur, With Regards, Fair Call, Apache, Alsab, Fairy Manah, and probably Sun Again and Dogpatch. Sun Again's status still is uncertain, but chances now are 70 to 30 he will run. As for Dogpatch, he will start only if the track is fast.

authority and make suggestions concerning better enforcement to the Army, for passing along to Valentine's office.

"Naturally all of us will have to feel our way along for a while," an OCD spokesman said tonight when asked how his office felt toward sports events at night. "We'll learn by trial and error, but you can almost certainly say that a serious crimp will be put in sports."

The spokesman added that the dim-out regulations for the area call for a complete blackout of all lights above the fifteenth floors of buildings, the shading of street lights and road lights and the complete extinguishing of illuminated signboards which cannot be shaded.

"We feel that a night baseball game or two might be tried," the spokesman continued. "That is permitted by the police. But if our office decides that it is giving off too much light you can be certain that we will immediately contact the Army and ask it to issue stricter orders to the police."

Would Give Demonstration

Leo Bondy, vice president and secretary of the Giants, who installed a $150,000 lighting system at the Polo Grounds last year, offered early in the day to give authorities an opportunity to study the glare of the lights.

"I doubt if they'll find fault with our lights," Bondy said, "because the lights are placed in such a way as to shine down on the inclosed playing field." He added that every light in the Polo Grounds could be extinguished in 30 seconds, in the event of an alarm.

Penn State's Stickmen Bow To Terps, 11-5

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., April 29.—Ray Grelecki's shooting and Maryland's generally superior stickwork gave the Terrapins an 11-5 triumph over Penn State's lacrosse team here this afternoon.

After passing to Bill McGregor for the visitors' first goal in less than three minutes of play, Grelecki took a pass from Johnny Hoyert 30 seconds later and slammed the Terps' second tally into the net. Grelecki made another goal in the first period after a pass from Milt Vandenberg, scored once in the second period and two more in the last.

Except for the first quarter when Maryland tallied five times to the Lion's single goal by Mark Singley, Penn State put up a surprisingly good fight. The home team outscored the visitors in the second half, four goals to three.

Bridgewater Takes Pair From Eagles

American University dropped near the cellar of the Mason-Dixon Conference baseball standings by losing both ends of a double-header to Bridgewater yesterday on the A. U. Filed, 4-3, and 13-8.

The hosts threatened to pull the first game out of the fire in the ninth inning when they scored three runs with only one out to narrow the Virginians' margin to 4-3, but Zarbock was out on a grounder to second and Pitcher Francis fanned Potter for the game ending out.

The nightcap was a nightmare to the American U. nine with the visitors banging the assorted pitching of Rube McNab, Newby, Klingman, and McNab again in the sixth, for 22 hits, including three doubles and a triple. Estep went the route for the winners and stayed in although banged for ten hits.

The Eagles, trailing 13-4 in the eighth inning of the second game, scored four runs and had two men on with only one out but a double-play cut short the rally.

Complete Plans List 42 Rounds of Boxing on Navy Card Here

Mike Jacobs Sees $75,000 Gross Gate

5 Local Fighters on Card; Nova, Savold In 10-Round Main Go; Show May 21

By Tony Neri

Final arrangements for the Navy Relief boxing show May 21 at Griffith Stadium were completed yesterday when Promoter Mike Jacobs assured a card of 42 rounds of fighting topped by Lou Nova and Lee Savold in a feature attraction at 10 rounds.

In a meeting at the office of George A. Garrett, chairman of the local Navy committee, Jacobs outlined five matches: Two 10-rounders, two eights and a six. In the other 10, Georgie Abrams, ranked No. 1 among the middleweights, will meet Steve Mamakos of Washington, a hometown rival.

Jacobs, who flew down from New York yesterday, expects the card here to gross $75,000, and has scaled the prices of the tickets at $10, $6, $4 and $2.50, tax included.

The card lists five local boys. It will line up as follows:

Lee Savold vs. Lou Nova, heavyweights, 10 rounds; Steve Mamakos vs. George Abrams, middleweights, 10 rounds; Jimmy DeChard vs. Frank Poreda, heavyweights, 8 rounds; Maynard Daniels vs. Tommy Tucker, heavyweights, 8 rounds; Frankie Wills vs. Sammy Magro, welterweights, 6 rounds.

Jacobs, his face tanned by a short Florida vacation, was in high spirits as he announced the show's plans to local newspapermen. "I think the card should be a good attraction. The main event will have two stand-up guys, one who is trying to get back into the heavyweight picture (Nova), and the other (Savold), who is trying to get into it," Jacobs said. "With the house scaled as it is, I believe we can gross $75,000 or maybe, $100,000. The fighters will be here early to do their training. It looks like a great show," he continued.

Local Arenas Donated

Jacobs was accompanied here by Nat Rogers, his matchmaker of the 20th Century Club, Harry Markson, the club's publicity man, and Ray Carlen, manager of Nova. Carlen stated that Nova is due in New York today and will begin training at Stillman's gym for about 10 days before coming to Washington.

Riverside Stadium and Uline Arena will be available to the main-event principals for daily drills. The management of both establishments have donated the training sites. Savold will work out at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., starting tomorrow for a week or so and then take up local quarters.

Besides Mamakos and Abrams other Washington boys on the card are Jimmy DeChard, Maynard Daniels and Frankie Wills. DeChard, who is fighting Joe Baksi Tuesday night at Riverside, is unbeaten in pro ranks and will be facing a test in the young Frank Poreda, a brother of Stanley, one-time top-flight heavyweight. Daniels, the lone Marine on the card, is now stationed with Col. Heinie Miller at New River, N. C.

The addition of Wills was a break for the local welterweight. Considered a good fighter, Wills was unable to get a match in Washington. His last appearance here was against Art Dorrell, who won a split decision, last November.

Fernandez Hero, Braves Beat Cubs, 8-3

By International News Service

Chicago, April 29.—Paced by Froilan (Manny) Fernandez, the Boston Braves defeated the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 3, today, the Easterners' fourth straight victory.

Fernandez, who hit safely in his last four times at bat yesterday, had a perfect day today, running his streak to eight hits in as many successful trips to the plate. On his last appearance, he poled a home-run.

With the score tied at 3-all, Frank Demaree opened the sixth with a single, was sacrificed to second and came home with what proved to be the winning run on Sisti's single. The Braves built up their margin in the eighth when they scored three runs on two hits and two Chicago errors, and in the ninth on Fernandez' home run.

3 Runs in 10th Win For Flock Over Reds

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 29.—The Brooklyn Dodgers pulled a victory over the Cincinnati Reds out of the fire today, tying the score on a home run by Dolph Camilli after two were out in the ninth and bustling three runs across in the tenth for a 5-to-2 verdict.

The Reds were held to four hits but Frank McCormick led off the second inning with his fourth homer of the year. Then Kirby Higbe walked Frank Secory, and in attempting to catch him off base, made a wild throw that let Secory reach third. A moment later Catcher Ray Lamanno singled him home.

That ended Cincinnati's offensive for the day, but for nine innings Brooklyn was just as helpless against the slants of Rookie Ray Starr, who pitched five-hit ball over the regulation route. Until Camilli's homer, his second in two days and fourth of the season, the only run off Starr came in the fifth when Billy Sullivan walked, went to third on a single by Peewee Reese and came home on a fly by Higbe.

Starr gave way to a pinch hitter in the last of the ninth and Bucky Walters went to the mound for Cincinnati in the tenth. Right away Joe Medwick beat out an infield hit. He was forced by Mickey Owen, who entered the game in the ninth when Sullivan hurt his finger. Then Reese singled to left and Pinch Hitter Frenchy Bordagaray grounded made a wild throw past second and to Third Baseman Bert Haas, who Owen rounded third and came home. Billy Herman singled Reese home and Bordagaray tallied on Arky Vaughan's infield out.

Chisox Bow Again to Nats By 10-4 Score

Spence drove in two runs with a single to center, Vernon drove in two more with his homer. Campbell singled. Early greeted Relief Pitcher Buck Ross with a double, and with the bases loaded, after Estalella walked, Pofahl got the last run home on a long fly to Moses.

Hudson was pitching two-hit shutout ball until he instigated trouble for himself in the sixth with his wildness. He passed the first two men to face him and with one out, Hoag scored them both with a single to center. Hudson also walked Jones, and when Sammy West singled to right for the third run of the inning, Harris called in Zuber. A wild pitch which scored Jones from third was Zuber's only crime of the ball game. He disposed of the last ten men in order.

Bob Repass, transferred to second base when he failed at shortstop, was helpful to Hudson in the early innings with his clever fielding . . . And Mickey Vernon speared a line drive off Kennedy's bat with two on in the second that got Hudson out of the inning via a double play . . . Case has now stolen six bases for the season and nobody in the league is close to him for thieving honors . . . Stan Spence lengthened his league lead in the run-production department by driving in three more . . . Bobby Estalella is either the hardest to pitch to or the most patient of the Nats' batters . . . He has walked in five of his last six trips to the plate . . . White Sox strategy boomeranged in the seventh when Dietrich pitched to Early with a 3-0 count instead of walking him . . . Early socked the pitch for a double that drove in the winning run . . . Clark Griffith denies that he has any deals cooking with the White Sox, Browns or any other club.

The Ohioans pounded three Great Lakes pitchers for 13 hits, while John Mlakar, a Cleveland senior, held the sailors and former major leaguers to eight.

Tigers Tally 4 Runs in 9th With 2 Out, Win

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 29.—With only one batter to get by in order to chalk up a shutout victory, Yank Terry passed two Detroit Tigers today to set the stage for a four-run rally and a 4-2 defeat for the Boston Red Sox.

Terry had pitched five-hit ball and had two out in the ninth when he suddenly lost control and passed Ned Harris and Pinky Higgins. Bill Hitchcock singled to fill the bases and Birdie Tebbetts put the Tigers into a 2-2 tie by collecting a seventh hit against Terry.

Mace Brown relieved Terry and Detroit's winning run came in when Pinch-Hitter Don Ross bounded a single through the infield. Jimmy Bloodworth hit safely to score Tebbetts before the Tigers could be subdued.

The Red Sox totaled nine hits against Al Benton and Hal Manders, speedy cousin of the fireballing Bob Feller, who was credited with the victory.

Both of the Red Sox runs were scored against Benton, who retired in the eighth inning. Pete Fox's triple and Bobby Doerr's single accounted for the first Benton tally in the second inning and a pass to Ted Williams, who went hitless, and safeties by Jimmy Foxx and Tim Tabor provided the other in the following frame.

Giants Score In 10th, Down Cards, 4 to 3

By International News Service.

St. Louis, April 29.—A three-run ninth inning rally by the Cardinals which tied the score went to naught today, when Bill Werber opened the tenth with a single, advanced on a sacrifice and a wild pitch by Bill Lohrman and scored on a fielder's choice to give the New York Giants a 4 to 3 victory over St. Louis.

The veteran Carl Hubbell blanked the Cardinals for eight innings but was chased in the ninth on doubles by Terry Moore and Walker Cooper and Jimmy Brown's infield hit. Ace Adams took over but failed to stop the rally. A pinch double by Estel Crabtree and Mickey Witek's error gave the Cards a tie and sent the game into extra innings.

Air Master Cracks Pimlico Mark, Takes Gittings Handicap

Returns $21.40; Leads Throughout Race; He Rolls Runs Second, Alaking 3d

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., April 29.—J. L. Sullivan's Air Master proved the master over five opponents today when he led throughout the mile and a sixteenth of the Gittings Handicap to hang up a new track record of 1:43.6. The 4-year-old gelding was completely overlooked by the 10,000 fans but when the running came, they could see nothing but him. The track was lightning fast, as could be gathered by the excellent time. He Rolls, which was coming off a winning effort at Havre de Grace, got up to take the place over the favored Alaking.

No Early Speed Horse

When the start came, there was no Cape Cod to race with Air Master for the first half mile, as had been the case in his previous outings in Maryland. With the sprinters out of the race, Johnny Deering sent the son of Chance Shot on the front end without the least bit of urging. There were many in the crowd that figured the leader would come back to his rivals, who as the price would indicate, were considered just sitting and waiting to go to the top when asked. However, this was not the case today and Deering just let Air Master run on his own for the last quarter and the router still held a six-length advantage as they reached the wire to clip 2-5 of a second off the old record of 1:44, which was held jointly by Watch Him, Infantry and Tempestuous.

The favorite players, who had "gone for their shirts" on Caduceus, a Preakness eligible, in the preceding event, tried to get it back on Alaking in this heat, but today was not the day for that racer and he could do no better than the third slot. Air Master, after scoring his fifth win in eleven starts this year, was declared to be a likely starter in the Dixie Handicap, to be contested here next Wednesday. The payoff on the winner was $21.40.

Bluestring Wins

Twelve cheap routers answered the bugle as the card opened and it was P. H. Hill jr.'s Bluestring which was first to report to the judges. The 4-year-old filly came from off the pace to score by three quarters of a length over the fast closing Dizzy Dame. Fair Rock, a 156-to-1 shot, led most of the way and held on well enough to save the show. The winner was well handled by Apprentice E. Campbell and covered the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47 4-5 to return a $6.80 mutuel.

Voucher proved much the best in the second race, a 6-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and upward. The 3-year-old took command at the break and was never threatened as Porter Roberts guided him over the sprint distance in 1:12 2-5 to win with 5 lengths to spare over the long shot Broomoria. Queens Delight was the show horse. The winner, a $8.10 chance, completed the daily double of $28.40.

BLUESTRING was steadied while within striking distance, came out for racing room leaving backstretch and withstood long drive to dispose of FAIR ROCK and stave off DIZZY DAME. The last named lacked early speed, responded to urging and closed boldly on outside. FAIR ROCK forged to front early, set pace, but weakened under punishment in final sixteenth. MITZA cut across field at first turn, was closest to pace to stretch and then faltered.

VOUCHER took command early, set good pace and drew out in stretch run to win handily. BROOMORIA could not keep up early, came wide for racing room and closed with good energy. QUEENS DELIGHT was in thick of contention on inside from start, made several bids and was tiring at close. AT BAT improved position steadily and hung in closing test.

Daily Double—BLUESTRING and VOUCHER Paid $28.40.

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32. Winner, Nydric Stable's b. f. DRIVEN SNOW took lead at once, drew out gradually and won with some speed in reserve. CAMILLE was well placed from start and held on gamely in final drive while under punishment. LITTLE WIZARD was off in tangle, moved up menacingly and then weakened right at close. SILVER RUN showed an even effort.

FIRST SON went to front at once, gained commanding lead and won with speed in reserve. BRITON was off slowly, worked way to contention on outside and closed boldly. THE KILLER was off well, was hard ridden closest to pace and tired. FLOURTOWN raced evenly on inside.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREY WING, $10.20, $5.00, $4.00; COLD CRACK, $8.90, $5.40; MARIE GALANTE, $4.80.

GREY WING held slight advantage early while racing on inside, turned back repeated challenges of COLD CRACK and drew clear in last eighth while going easily. COLD CRACK raced head and head with leader and faltered in final drive. MARIE GALANTE was within striking distance early, but would not respond when placed to pressure in final quarter. SLASTAUDER saved ground from the start but could not close enough to be a serious factor.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2500 added. Gittings Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:01½. Off at 5:01½. Winner, J. L. AIR MASTER sprinted into a long early lead without being extended, was well rated when assuming command, was shaken up in stretch and drew away to be a handy winner. HE ROLLS was a trailer until inside eighth pole when he came with a rush. He was no match for the winner. ALAKING went in the air slightly at the break, recovered well to be in nearest pursuit of winner for a half and then weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 5:31½. Off at 5:34½. Winner, Mrs. D. E. HIGH ARCH, allowed to settle into best stride when outrun early, came between horses to reach serious contention, went to outside of leader and drew away to be an easy winner. VILLAGE BELLE moved up on outside after a quarter to dispose of SUMMER STOCK, opened long lead on turn and then tired as if short. PUNCHDRUNK was shuffled back slightly entering backstretch, was placed to pressure in last quarter and closed willingly. TOAST raced between horses while close up, moved nearest leader between calls and then weakened.

DOLLAR BAY, perfectly rated while following pace and saving ground early, went outside on stretch turn to make bid and, under hard urging, was up in last few yards. YAWL moved nearest pacemaker after a quarter, disposed of RIDING LIGHT in stretch run, but could not resist winner while being hard ridden. RIDING LIGHT set good pace under a steady hold, responded to drive in stretch, but was not good enough. PRESENT ARMS and RODIN trailed early and then came with a rush while running very wide.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Jockey Ken McCombs will have to cool his heels starting tomorrow and for the remainder of the meeting. The stewards said he was guilty of rough riding and interfering with Rascal in the running of yesterday's sixth race. McCombs has been just about the toughest hot and cold rider around Maryland this spring. Sorry to see him set down, but I couldn't guess him. Trainer Ben Jones has sent word that the Calumet Farm's Whirlaway and Sun Again will leave Kentucky for this track on Sunday. Whirlaway is heading for his engagement in the Dixie Handicap and Sun Again is coming up for a shot at the Preakness. For the first time, supplementary entries will be accepted this year for the Belmont Stakes. If you want ot get your horse in the race before May 15 it will set you back $2500. This leaves the Derby as the one 3-year-old race you can't get in after the closing of the original lists. John Stroub, one of the assistnat starters, was stricken with appendicitis and had to be rushed to the hospital for an operation. He is getting along O. K. The Kentucky Derby broadcast will be carried over the Pimlico loudspeaker system on Saturday. As I said yesterday, I'm going to be there, and Clocker Mike will be batting for me. We're going to try to come up with the Derby winner. Jockey Leon Haas left yesterday for Louisville to ride Requested, and Al Shelhamer leaves today to ride Sweep Swinger. War Stamps are being sold at booths in the clubhouse and grandstand, and the sale is brisk. The Bradley horses got in from Kentucky yesterday. Apprentice F. Remerscheid was forced to cancel his mounts yesterday because of a stiff neck. Harry Parr 3d, speaking for Maryland's four one-mile tracks, said yesterday that the $100,000 contribution, at the rate of $1000 daily, to the war relief and other agencies was an initial donation. "The executive officres of the four tracks have been resolved from the outset to further propose and recommend to their stockholders an additional contribution from their net profits for the year. Net profits, of course, means profit after taxees have been deducted," said Parr. Forty-four horses will be sold here on May 8 in the center field at 10 a. m. If you want to get in the horse business, here's your chance. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—The Archer entry of LITTLE BUD and BELL SOMA appears best in the day's opening sprint for juveniles. LITTLE BUD is the best of the pair and was off poorly last out. With proper handling this one should score. SHIP SIGNAL has speed and belongs close. PICCADILLY for the show end.

Second race — BLUE FLIGHT looks like the right one in this sprint field. Gets a feather assignment. OUR FLORENCE belongs with this kind and is dangerous. MY ONE to take care of the others.

Third race—The Greentree-Skinner entry of DANDRILLIN and MUFFLED DRUMS gets my call in the day's jumping race. They come from a good barn. CONNACHTA fell last out but is reported to be a fair timber topper. MILLRACE may be in the money circle.

Fourth race—MAROC had poor racing luck last out and with clear sailing today will be hard to beat. DOUBLE B. and PRECEPTOR II to take care of the place and show awards.

Fifth race—OLYMPIAN appears the best of the lot in this distance affair. Needs only the right ride. NEW TRICK is fit and ready for the best. ANONYMOUS to take care of the others

Sixth race—TRUE NORTH gets my call in the Ral Parr. This one looks like the speed of the party despite the weight. RINGMENOW has good time and is dangerous. HYGROHOUR belongs in the money circle.

Seventh race—EQUINOX has the chief speed in this field. Gets top weight but I'm going to be there. BOLA MOWLEE may go well at this distance and deserves a chance. FIREBROOM for the minor money.

Eighth race—PEP TALK, second last out, may be the right one in this rather open finale. SKIRMISH and COLESBOY to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—Equinox.

Trade Leaders' Opinions Vary On Price Order

By the Associated Press

The Government's general price freeze order—greatest economic control effort ever undertaken in America—won praise from many business and financial leaders throughout the country yesterday as a step in the right direction.

Many retailers, however, insisted that freezing both wholesale and retail prices as they existed in March failed to take into account faster advances in many wholesale prices, and asserted that unless adjustments were made, retilers' profit margins would disappear and many would be forced to the wall.

Other criticisms were that the general anti-inflation program left wages subject only to voluntary stabilization, and permitted further substantial advances in farm prices, pending new and uncertain legislation.

Adjustments Needed

In making the controls work, some business executives said what was needed was fair adjustments to prevent business profits from disappearing, and firms being forced to shut down.

One pointed out, that, for example, some grocery chains make less than 2 cents profit per dollar of sales. He gave what he regarded as a typical department store situation, showing less than 5 cents. "Freezing retail prices and wholesale prices in situations where the retailer is still selling goods bought at lower levels, but the wholesale price has jumped say 10 per cent" this expert said, "obviously more than wipes out the profit."

Several retailers said that if retail prices were fixed as of March, wholesale and manufacturers' prices should be fixed as of levels a few months previously, since they had been rising faster than retail, due to the normal lag.

Sees Grocers "Ruin"

Harry W. Walker, Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland Independent Retail Grocers Association, said fixing both retail and wholesale prices as of March would "ruin every grocer in Maryland." He said wholesale prices should be fixed as of the level in January, and manufacturers as of November.

In this connection, some noted that the general freeze order stated that taking March prices all along the line "catches hold of the price structure during a given period and holds it fast until a judgment can be made as to what adjustments are needed."

Among comments of individual trade leaders were:

"A Great Stabilizer"

John W. Cunningham, treasurer Scott & Co., Ltd., Boston men's clothing manufacturers and retailers:

"We think it's a good thing, providing they put a ceiling on wages and salaries. If there is to be a ceiling on prices we feel that there should be a ceiling on everything else. It would be a great stabilizer because then we would know what prices were going to be from season to season, rather than juts guess at it."

(Editor's Note: Washingon trade leaders were reluctant to comment on the price freezing order. One prominent executive, who preferred that his name not be used, said: "I don't see how it can be made to work." Another stated that "it isn't anythng that we haven't expected. I imagine there are going to be difficulties arising, but when we are at war we must expect problems."

Charles E. Merrill, head of Merrill Lynch, Pierce Fenner & Heane and a leading chain store financier: "Price freezing, relatively speaking, will have little if any adverse effect on chain stores in general. It should be kept in mind that about 30 per cent of the stocks of food chains are not affected by price freezes announced."

Arthur C. Kauffmann, president of the Philadelphia Merchants' Association and executive director of Gimbel Brothers Department tSore, said: "The purpose of the order will be accomplished if the public will be tolerant while adjustments are made.

"There is going to be some hardship in the interpretation of the order and there will be minor difficulties complying with its provisions. The important thing is that if the freezing order will stimulate the war efforts of our country, then everyone should cooperate in obtaining the desired result."

Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (A. F. L.), said in Indianapolis his union was bitterly opposed to wage freezing" and expressed belief "The President will not be able to stabilize the necessities of life to protect us."

"Until we are satisfied that it can be done," he added, "labor will oppose any such a thing as a standard wage. Generally speaking, the workers are worse off today than they were a year ago, even though many of them have received 10 per cent pay increases."

Realtors to Cooperate

David B. Simpson, of Portland, Oreg., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, stated at Chicago:

"The application of the price control bill is just another evidence that we cannot conduct all-out war without this conduct having its effect on the lives of every citizen of the United States. Undoubtedly its operation will have a definite and acute effect on real estate as real estate is affected in many ways by this act.

"Real estate owners throughout the Nation have, in the main, recognized the necessity of assisting our Government in every way possible and we people propose to continue our full and complete assistance."

Price Control Works, Canada Trade Finds

Ottawa, Ontario, April 29 (Canadian Press).—Canadian business today looked back on six months of retail control, generally found it good, and accepted with satisfaction creation of price ceilings in the United States on a basis similar to that in operation here since December 1.

The Canadian government has paid out some subsidies to prevent price increases in certain commodities and the wartime prices and trade board, charged with keeping price ceilings in place, said its work had been effective in preventing an inflation.

All figures used are from the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, except the cost of living index, from National Industrial Conference Board, and department store prices, from Fairchild Publications; the last two are private organizations.

The Government figures generally run through February, and there are believed to have been advances in most categories since. The retail food index and the cost of living index are for March. The department store prices are for April 1.

Farm Prices Estimated at 99% Parity

By the Associated Press

Continuation of local market increases in prices of meat animals, cotton and fruit during the month ended April 15 lifted the general level of prices received by farmers to 150 per cent of their pre-World War I level, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

Prices of commodities bought by farmers also advanced and the ratio of prices received by farmers to those paid for non-agricultural products was 99 per cent of parity.

Officials pointed out, however, that the general average of prices received by farmers may be lower now than in mid April in view of subsequent down turns in prices of wheat and some other grains.

The mid April and parity prices, respectively, for major farm commodities were reported as follows:

Cotton, 19.03 and 18.72 cents a pound; wheat, 99.7 cents and $1.335 a bushel; corn, 79.7 and 96.9 cents; rice, $1.78 and $1.228 per bushel; potatoes, $1.16 and $1.07 per bushel; cattle, $10.71 and $8.18 per hundred pounds; calves, $12.22 and $10.19 per hundred pounds; hogs, $13.48 and $10.98 per hundred pounds; lambs, $10.83 and $8.88 per hundred pounds; wool, 39.2 and 27.6 cents a pound; eggs 25.6 and 26.6 cents a dozen; chickens, 18.4 and 17.2 cents a pound, and butterfat 37 and 39.6 cents a pound.

War Spending Leaps

March war spending was really something to crow about. The Treasury laid out 2.8 billion dollars on the war last month, a stiff increase over the 2.2 billion dollars of February. Even allowing for the difference in number of days, the figures are still gratifying. The daily average for March was 108 million dollars, 17 per cent above the 92 million dollars for February. Although Washington officials are hammering away at the contractors for more and more production, it would be a mistake to interpret this as an expression of disappointment over the volume of output. They are secretly pleased with the job being done by the war factories, but are afraid that too much back slapping might take the edge off the drive.

Freight Cars

Although warnings of a freight-car shortage have been hanging over the heads of shippers for months, there is still no evidence of an acute situation in the near future. The Shippers' Advisory Boards' estimate that loadings in the second quarter will be 14.6 per cent above those in the same period of 1941 means carloadings of about 925,000 weekly. A more realistic possibility, however, is a gain of about 10 per cent, following a first-quarter rise of 8.2 per cent. The biggest fear—that cars moving to seaboard would bring materials faster than boats could take them away and cause congestion, as happened in the first World War—has not been realized. Some of the large eastern terminals still have space for additional storage, and "ground storage" is being resorted to at many points.

Priority Violators

Enactment of the Second War Powers Act has changed the priority compliance picture completely. Violators of priority and rationing regulations are now a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. These penalties, rather than suspension orders, will be used in dealing with offenders. A recent statement by a local Bureau of Priorities district manager that the new powers would be seldom invoked brought immediate repudiation by J. S. Knowlton, Director of Industry Ouerations. The WPB has on loan 3550 investigators, ranging all the way from wage and hour inspectors to employes of the National Park Service. With the regular "flying squadrons" group of special investigators, these men will soon be working out of every regional district office.

Wheat Loan Rates

Since the estimated supply of wheat next season is expected to be equal to about two years' normal requirements, it is evident that the statistical position is none too promising. Storage facilities are expected to be severely congested by this huge supply of grain, and many transportation difficulties will have to be overcome. The weakness in wheat markets in recent weeks has been due largely to these factors and to the temporary lull in news concerning legislation preventing the sale of Government-owned commodities below parity levels. While the renewal of congressional discussions on this issue may revive some hopes of an advance in prices, the most important factor in estimating the trend of prices in the future undoubtedly will be the anticipated level of 1942 loan rates.

Anthracite Prices

Although the outlook for anthracite coal sales is less favorable than for bituminous, a higher average price than prevailed last year should limit the likely decline in earnings. Sales may slump less than seasonally this summer, despite the fact that both dealers' and consumers' stocks are substantially higher than a year ago. The growing shortage of fuel oil on the east coast, together with the threatened transportation and mine-labor shortage later in the year, are likely to induce many consumers to build up still larger stockpiles. Although costs give indication of continuing slowly upward, OPA has ruled that the customary seasonal discounts on domestic sizes of anthracite must be kept in effect.

Shoe Companies

Because most of the leading shoe companies operate on a fiscal year basis, they will pay their taxes this year under the 1941 law, saving considerable sums. The outlook further ahead, however, is much less promising. Profit margins before taxes are being fairly well maintained, despite the fact that many companies are now using the last-in-first-out inventory method, because selling prices have been raised and some of the less profitable lines discontinued. Production this year is expected to decline moderately to about 450 million pairs, compared with 498 million in 1941. The larger factors in the field—less affected by material shortages than the smaller companies, and better situated to obtain government business—should make a better than average sales showing.

Gas Company's Net in March Off $49,280

A sharp increase in taxes and operating expenses resulted in a $49,280 drop in March net income of the Washington Gas Light Co., the statement filed with the Public Utilities Commission showed yesterday.

Net income for the month totaled $190,879 as compared with $240,159 in the similar month last year. Gross operating revenues totaled $1,170,948, an increase of $52,859 over last year, but operating expenses, taxes and depreciation rose to $931,450, up $96,182.

The result of the company's operations for the first three months this year was a net income of $863,253 compared with $754,839 for 1941. The decrease likewise was attributed to higher taxes, the provision for which was $153,000 greater in the current period than in the same period last year.

The gas company expended approximately $396,600 in the first three months this year for extensions to its property here.

Ceiling Unsettles Livestock Prices

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—The livestock market was unsettled today by the blanket price ceiling order issued overnight and prices sagged in all departments except sheep.

Livestock men said the ceiling order apparently affected retail and wholeasle charges for all types of meat except mution and lamb. Technically, however, there would be no change as far as pork is concerned, since wholesale prices, and indirectly retail quotations, were placed under ceiling regulations a few weeks ago.

Although unprocessed farm commodities presumably would be exempt from the March ceiling order, being affected by the 110 per cent of parity law, livestock men said live animals should reflect indirectly the placing of ceilings on the processed material. They pointed out that all livestock prices have been well above parity for some time.

First Quarter Building Shows 16% Decrease

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department estimates that construction declined 16 per cent from the last quarter of 1941 to reach $2,600,000,000 in the first quarter of this year.

The decline was attributed to both seasonal factors and also to restrictions upon the use of materials needed in the war effort. With increasing war plant building, however, the 1942 total of construction is expected to be about 12 billion dollars and to exceed 1941 by more than 500 million dollars.

Price Control Effect Slight, Grains Rally

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 29.—Wheat and soybean prices led a rally in the grain market today as the cereal futures trade regained its composure regarding price control developments.

Traders said the President's speech inspired more confidence, while the blanket price ceilings announced overnight did not apply directly to grains, although wholesale and retail charges on numerous grain products apparently would be affected.

Flour, except for certain packaged mixes, and raw and unprocessed agricultural commodities were exempt, and some dealers thought this may have stimulated demand from mills and flour buyers. Shippers sold 25,000 bushels to move eastward to mills. Most of the buying of wheat and soybeans was attributed to dealers who were covering short sales made during the recent slump of prices to lows for the past several months.

Wheat closed ⅛@¾ higher than yesterday, May 1.18⅞, July 1.21⅝@½, after having been up a full cent at one stage. Corn dropped about ½ cent at times but closed ¼ lower to ¾ higher compared with yesterday, May 83¾@⅞, July 86⅝@¾. Oats finished ¼ off to ⅛ up; rye unchanged to ¼ higher and lard unchanged at ceilings. Soybeans were up more than 2 cents in some cases at one stage but closed only ⅜@1⅞ higher.

Since grain prices are still affected by the 110 per cent of parity law for farm commodities ceilings and are well below the minimum limits that could be fixed, traders were inclined to view the future with more confidence especially in the light of farm bloc differences with the President's suggestion that the minimum be lowered to parity. At mid-March all grains ranged from 60 to 88 per cent of parity. Furthermore, wholesale and retail price ceilings were set at the highest levels prevailing in March when grains were near the season's peaks and substantially higher than at present.

Late Earnings Statements

Cities Service and subsidiaries reported consolidated net income for the first quarter of 1942 was $3,888,253, compared with $3,231,803 in the like period of 1941. For the parent company only Cities Service showed a net loss of $402,474 for the period against a net profit of $1,151,535 in the 1941 quarter. Comparative figures showed a sharp drop in dividend payments to the parent from subsidiaries accounted for the most of the decline. For the 1941 period such payments were $1,464,583 against $283,683 this year.

Republic Steel Corporation reported $4,716,962 net profit for the first quarter, down from the $6,041,244 figure for the preceding quarter and $3,189,966 for the first quarter of 1941. The profit figure was after 18 million dollars estimated provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes.

American Airlines, Inc., reported for the March quarter profit of $349,392 after charges, taxes and depreciation, compared with $71,059 in the first quarter of 1941.

Brown Co., pulp and paper manufacturer, for the fiscal year ended November 29, 1941, reported net profit of $1,484,353 after charges and taxes, compared with net loss of $250,578 in 1940.

E. C. Lynch Left $4,7178,181 Estate

New York, April 29 (AP).—Edmund Calvert Lynch, partner in the investment firm of Merrill Lynch & Co., left a net estate of $4,718,181 at his death May 12, 1938, an estate tax apprisal filed today showed.

The principal beneficiary is his widow, Mrs. Signa Fernaris Lynch, of New York City, who was bequeathed the personal effects, plus the income from several trusts amounting to about $600,000. In addition, the widow shares in the income from the residuary estate with a son, Edmund C. Lynch, jr., and two daughters.

A bequest of $50,000 was provided for Johns Hopkins University "if all of the foregoing bequests and trusts are fully paid or established." The executors said, however, that it was "doubtful that this bequest can be paid."

Stock Market Stages Best Rally of Month With Price Ceiling 'Bad News' Out of Way

New York, April 29.—The stock market rallied briskly in all departments today after a somewhat hesitant start which reflected uncertainty as to how business and financial circles would accept the Government's sweeping price-freezing orders.

Two things aided the list in charting its recovery course after a long stretch of declines. In the first place, it refused to follow another drop in American Telephone and instead followed the steels, which moved the other way.

Secondly, the market, after a little deliberation, apparently concluded that Price Chief Henderson's freezing decrees and President Roosevelt's radio talk in amplification of his proposed economic controls was so much bad news out of the way.

Short covering and a moderate amount of new buying was enough to turn the tide and at the close leaders generally were ahead fractions to a point with a sprinkling up 2 or more.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite recorded a rise of .5 of a point, the best since March 17. The measure closed at 32.5 against yesterday's nine-year low of 32.0. Transactions totaled 412,385 shares, compared with 312,794 the day before.

The action of merchandising stocks was given special attention because of suggestions that retailers would, in many cases, be hard hit by the enforced price limits for goods. But these yielded no important ground, leading many to believe the market in general was oversold.

American Telephone reversed trends after setting a new seven-year low at the start. It closed 2¼ higher. Philip Morris climbed 2½ and Westinghouse 1⅞. Dupont, up more than 3 at one time, finished with a net gain of 1¾. Others rising a point or more included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, American Can, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Westinghouse and Eastman Kodak. Santa Fe was the best of a higher rail group, closing 1½ to the good.

Corporate bonds and commodities were moderately improved after early irregularity. United States issues were slightly off. Chicago wheat closed ½ to ¾ of a cent a bushel in front and corn was ¼ lower to as much advanced. Hogs were 15 to 20 cents down. Cotton futures had final advances of 65 to 80 cents a bale.

Showing the largest gains in firm Curb market were Aluminum of America, American Gas and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Transfers here were 59,485 shares, against 51,630 yesterday.

Merle Fainsod Made 'Czar' of Retail Prices

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that Dr. Merle Fainsod, Harvard University profesor, had been named head of the new retail trade and services division which will administer the universal price ceiling.

Fainsod, who has been connected with OPA since last year, recently has been price executive in the consumer durable goods section. He was a member of the President's Committee on Administrative Management in 1936 and was consultant to the temporary national economic committee in 1940.

His division will be responsible for ironing out irregularities in the overall ceiling at the retail level and will work closely with retailers and the local wartime price and rationing boards in administering the regulation.

OPA's regional offices in Boston, New York, Cleveland, Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago, Denver and San Francisco are being enlarged.

Newsprint Ceiling Made Permanent

By the Associated Press

Prices for "standard" newsprint will remain at $50 a ton as the result of the maximum price schedule established by OPA, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said yesterday.

The newsprint ceiling, effective May 11, replaces a temporary order which established the maximum prices at the $50 level. Henderson said the ceiling would not preclude further discussions between OPA and Canada ioncerning newsprint mills in the Dominion. Last December these mills asked an increase of $3 a ton in the price of newsprint for export to the the United States to become effective May 1.

Cities Service to Get Million From Mexico

New York, April 29 (AP).—Payment of more than $1,000,000 in cash to Cities Service Co. is provided in an agreement reached between that company and the Mexican government in settlement of claims against Mexico arising out of expropriation of Cities Service Oil Co. properties in 1938, it was learned today.

Under the settlement, made separately from other oil company claims against the Mexican government, Cities Service will retain four oil properties and their subsoil rights. These had not been developed at the time of expropriation and therefore were not included in the deal.

Rent Order Hits Beach Landlords

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 29.—Governor Darden said today he would explore with the Office of Price Administration all possibilities of ironing out inequalities that might affect property owners in resort areas and the Hampton Roads area under the new rent ceiling order.

The OPA action placed the Norfolk-Portsmouth-Newport News sector in the class whose rents must not be priced above those in effect on April 1, 1941—a time substantially earlier than that before the full effect of boom conditions sent prices up with the population figures.

A principal point of concern about the order came to the Governor from owners of cottages at Virginia Beach whose rentals vary sharply from $40 to $60 a month in the fall, winter and spring months to several hundred dollars or more received during the peak of the summer season.

Varied Rental Scales

The Governor noted in this connection that many beach property owners depended upon the summer renter to pay them returns on their investments, which figured on a year-round basis were not always excessively profitable, and that the order had put the beach rentals as of April—two months before the start of the season.

Rental agents handling the beach property were reported as completely in the dark as to what procedure to follow.

The Governor disclosed that representatives of the OPA would confer with him on the problem in the near future but said that "until then I will be unable to state definitely what might be accomplished."

State Had Set Areas

The Governor had set up rent control areas in Norfolk, Princess Anne, Norfolk County, Portsmouth, Newport News and Hampton and Elizabeth City, but, having been advised of the action contemplated by the Federal Government, did not name the personnel of the control boards.

The Federal Govenment under the OPA will administer the new setup.

Rules Issued For Dimout on East Coast

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 29.—Regulations dealing with the restriction of lighting along the Atlantic Coast line of the Third Corps Area were issued tonight by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general.

The regulations amplify General Reckord's proclamation yesterday ordering a dim out of coastal lighting effective at 6 p. m. tomorrow. They affect the entire coastal area from the Delaware State line to the North Carolina State line for a distance of approximately 15 miles inland.

General Reckord ordered immediate curtailment or shielding of the illumination of signs and shop windows along water fronts, the lighting of piers, beaches, highways and streets and the undimmed headlights of vehicles and other exposed lighting.

Burning of trash, brush and grass was forbidden.

The order also affects lights in homes, amusement parks, beach hotels and the resultant upward glare of lighting in congested areas which serve to silhouette passing vessels.

Third Corps Area headquarters said that arrangements were being made to distribute the regulations to officials throughout the area as quickly as possible.

The following regulations are required within the areas covered by General Reckord's proclamation yesterday:

"All exterior lights used for illumination on streets, roads, highways and parkways will be shaded so as to prevent their direct rays being visible from the sea or shined at an angle above the horizontal. Exterior illumination used for advertising, or for purposes other than the foregoing, which cannot be shaded, shall be extinguished.

"Public street, highway and parkway lights adjacent to the coast and normally visible from seaward, shall be reduced in number of candlepower to the utmost consistent with traffic safety and shall be so screened by paint or other material as to prevent their direct rays shining in a seaward direction.

"Exterior lights along boardwalks, places of amusement, hotels and commercial establishments along the shore line, not necessary to highway traffic, shall be extinguished between sundown and sunrise each night. The windows of all commercial establishments shall be so screened or shaded as to prevent direct rays of lights being visible from the sea and in such manner that an excessive degree of indirect illumination therefrom is avoided.

"Windows and other outlets of all commercial establishments, hotels or dwellings adjacent to the coast, shall be so shaded or screened that direct lights therefrom shall not shine to seaward and illumination therefrom shall not be visible at a distance greater than 1 mile.

"Automobiles, parked or moving, where their lights are visible from seaward, shall not use their bright lights, and should be permitted to move toward the sea only with parking lights and at reduced speeds.

"For permanent results with automobiles, local authorities are directed to take necessary steps to block all roads leading to the sea and traffic allowed to proceed only when the correct lighting regulations are understood. In some cases it will be necessary to effect the change to parking lights at a distance of 2 miles or more from the coast.

"Illumination from burning trash, brush and grass must be prevented.

"Other regulations will be published from time to time."

Easton Group Charges Idle Refuse Jobs

By the Associated Press

Easton, Md., April 29.—The Easton Rotary Club, disturbed because members contend they are unable to fill labor needs although they claim many persons are drawing unemployment relief checks, voted today to carry their fight to Congress, if necessary, through officers of Rotary International.

Members adopted a resolution demanding that the Maryland State Unemployment Office in Baltimore supply a list of all unemployed persons in Talbot County drawing weekly relief checks.

Frank Shuck, secretary of the Tri-State Packers Association, said an appeal would be made to Governor O Conor if the State office refuses to provide the list.

Shuck, chairman of the Easton delegation that will go to the International convention at Toronto in June, was instructed to urge united action in support of the problem, and to ask that the matter be brought to attention of Congress if it is found that the situation is general.

Howard Eley, lumber dealer, told the club today he had gone to the Easton unemployment office ten times since the middle of January in an effort to get workers. He said he could use 25 men, but got only one.

Eley reported that several Saturdays ago he was given the names of ten men and was told they would start to work the following Monday, but none showed up, he said.

Maurice Jones, head of an Easton bottling firm, said he had "tried many times without success" to get help.

Principal Marlin Zimmerman of Easton High School, reported it was necessary to excuse boys from classes today so they could help farmers set out young tomato plants.

The club also was told today that J. Ramsey Speer, Pittsburgh industrialist who has a home near here, had called a meeting for farmers and others Saturday to discuss a "work or fight" program.

Camp Lee Parade to Honor Workmen Donors of Extras

By the Associated Press

Camp Lee, Va., April 29.—There'll be a parade at the Army's Quartermaster School here Saturday but instead of high ranking officers there'll be overalled workmen on the reviewing stand and on oiler named Joe to return the salutes.

Joe, one of the 2000 laborers, bricklayers, carpenters, wheelbarrow pushers and miscellaneous workers employed in the construction of the school on the site of a one-time bird sanctuary, will present to a buck private and Miss Katharine M. Donaldson, service club hostess, a fund of more than $1000 contributed by the workmen to buy club equipment, furnishings and other items for the enlisted men.

There will be back seats for Maj. Gen. James E. Edmonds, commander of Camp Lee, and Col. H. L. Whittaker, commanding the Quartermaster School.

The workmen's story began when a labor foreman mentioned it to the men—and half dollars and dollars began to roll in. Then a carpenter suggested an ornate Bible for a chapel yet to be built. It was bought.

A man whose job is that of pushing a wheelbarrow filled with concrete 8 hours a day at 40 cents an hour recommended curtains for the cafeteria. More money came in.

The Quartermaster School, once situated on an 8½-acre site in Philadelphia, was transferred to Camp Lee last October, and the 2000 workmen's job was to put up its buildings on a 600-acre tract that had been a bird sanctuary since World War days.

Lack of Rain Retards Most Crops in Va.

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 29.—Insufficient moisture "retarded considerably" the growth of hay crops and pasture, but small grains made "fairly good progress" during the week ending April 25, the State department of agriculture reported today.

"The advancement of field work was on the whole ahead of usual, as weather has been very favorable for this," the department's weekly weather and crop report said.

Wheat, barley and oats improved during the week, the report added, although these crops were said to be in need of rain for the best growth. The condition of alfalfa, clover and timothy hay, and pasture declined because of insufficient moisture. Corn planting and preparations for planting corn and other crops were the principal farm activities.

Fruit prospects seemed to have improved a little, while the condition of peaches was described as having declined slightly.

The average temperature for the State as a whole during the week was 57 degrees, the highest temperature being 94 degrees, reported at Danville, and the lowest 28, at louisa. Freezing temperatures also were reported at Bedford and Dale Enterprise.

"There was no measurable amount of rain in the State," the department said. "Lynchburg reported a trace, which was the only station reporting any rainfall at all."

Five Majors In Md. Guard Are Elevated

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 29.—Five majors commanding State Guard battalions today were promoted to lieutenant colonels by Governor O'Conor on the recommendation of Brig. Gen. Dwight H. Mohr, Guard commander, and Adjt. Gen. Francis Petrott.

They are Wallace Williams, Elkton, Fifth Battalion commander; Caesar L. Aiello, Hyattsville, Ninth Battalion commander; Louis J. Bottomer, Baltimore, Third Battalion commander; Theodore E. Drummond, Lothearn, Second Battalion commander, and Royden S. Maise, Salisbury, Fourth Battalion commander.

O'Conor said Mohr and Petrott based their recommendations upon the findings of regular Army officers who recently inspected the Guard units. All other battalion commanders already hold lieutenant-colonel commissions, he pointed out.

In a statement, the Governor said: "It is most gratifying to have the assurance from the War Department that our State Guard has attained such a high standing. The recent survey was a most complete one and every company in the Guard was examined carefully both regarding its personnel and its equipment.

"The Army officials reported that the training and discipline of the men were of the highest and our people can be assured that the officers and enlisted men are well-prepared for any emergency which might confront our State.

"When it is considered that these men have served over a lengthy period and have drilled without compensation, it can be realized that they are entitled to the thanks of the people of Maryland. The impressive showing which has been made by the Guard companies during recent weeks has confirmed all reports as to the fine caliber of men who constitute this protective organization."

It was fairly inevitable that the locale for Edward G. Robinson's "Big Town" radio shows, which you hear over WJSV every Thursday at 9:30 p. m., eventually would be switched to the place where every good reporter would like to be these days.

That would be where the news pot is boiling at the moment—in the midst of war torn Europe, where momentous things seem to be about to happen and, no doubt will, within a short time.

For in "Big Town" Robinson enacts the role of a reporter. Nominally, in the scripts, he's called an editor. But it turns out every time that he's really a reporter, a thing which every good newspaper editor always essentially remains anyhow.

Up to now the "Big Town" programs have dealt with his journalistic activities—and very active and dramatic ones they are, too—in a typical American city, where he has uncovered graft, brought gangsters to justice, made political bosses tremble, and done all those things that good American reporters are supposed to do in the gladsome times of peace.

But, as you no doubt know, the news emphasis is now on cosmopolitan rather than metropolitan gangsters, on international political bosses rather than the local types, on a would-be world-wide graft that overshadows anything that could happen in any American city.

So Mr. Robinson's plot is to thicken tonight from the big town of Lisbon, Portugal, and it will continue from such European spots until further notice.

Contract Bridge

Here are two problems on opening leads for beginners to solve:

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠AK7
◇QJ103
♣654

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1♡	Pass	2♡	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

2. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

◇AJ976
♣K75

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1♠	Pass	2♠	3♣
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

Answers

1. South's best lead is the diamond queen rather than the king of spades. He should immediately attempt to develop a diamond trick while he has the spade honors as entries with which to develop and cash it.

2. With an honor in his partner's suit, South's wisest lead is a club rather than a card from his own diamond suit. His play is the five-spot.

Thrice a Plaintiff, Woman's Damage Suit Is Dismissed

Whether a person is "claim-minded" or merely unlucky in instituting three separate damage suits in three years was the question involved in an opinion yesterday in which the United States Court of Appeals voided a $10,000 damage suit against the Premier Cab Association.

"Negligent injury is not unusual, but it is unusual for one person not engaged in hazardous activities to suffer it repeatedly," the opinion stated. The ruling was against Miriam Mintz, formerly of Washington and now of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Mintz sued the cab company for injuries allegedly suffered in an automobile accident July 22, 1938. She testified under cross-examination during the District Court trial of the case that she had made claims for injuries twice before, once when she fell in a beauty parlor and on another occasion against the same cab company.

Suggest gifts expressive of your Mother's Day thoughts

Dear Mom— You always were a little embarrassed by Mother's Day, I remember. "Such a fuss" you used to say, hiding your head for a moment in the roses we brought you.

Yet you never threw the roses away until the petals fell in a scarlet shower on the piano top. And you saved all the silly little cards we sent you.

No card could ever explain how all the sights and sounds and feelings of our lives are woven into our memories of you... the smell of a lilac bush wet with rain and the fragrance of warm nut cookies — that, somehow, is you ... the edged crease in a white table cloth, wind-billowed curtains, the shaded quiet of a sick room, too, are you.

I remember your brisk nod when you liked my report cards, how you frowned when I tracked mud across the kitchen; the smudges of flour in the edge of your hair and the way your hands lay tiredly in your lap sometimes... I tell you all these things so you will know how really remembered you are this Mother's Day particularly, when you symbolize all that is peaceful and unchanging in a fretful world.

With all my love —

Bud —
